KATIE'S SATURDAY.

"Dear me!" sighed Katie, when she got up that Saturday morning.

"What can be the matter?" said mama, laughing at the doleful face.

"Oh, there's thousands and millions of things the matter!" said Katie, crossly.

She was a little girl who did not like to be laughed at.

"Now, Katie," said mama, this time, seriously, "as soon as you are dressed I have something I want yon to do for me down in the library."

"Before breakfast?" said Katie.

"No, yon can have your breakfast first," mama answered, langhing again at the cloudy little face.

Katie was very curious to know what this was, and as perhaps you are, too, we will skip the breakfast, and go right into the library.

Mama was sitting at the desk, with a big piece of paper and a pencil in front of her.

"Now, Katie," she said, taking her little daughter on her lap, "I want you to write down a few of those things which trouble you. One thousand will do!"

"O mama, you're laughing at me now," said Katie; "but I can think of at least ten right this minute."

"Very well," said mama; "put down ten." So Katie wrote:

"1. It's gone and rained, so we can't play croquet.

"2. Minnie is going away, and I'll have to sit with that horrid little Jean Bascom on Monday.

"3. ——

"That's all I can think of just this minute," she said.

"Well," said her mother, "I'll just keep this paper a day or two."

That afternoon the rain had cleared away, and Katie and her mama, as they sat at the window, saw Uncle Jack come to take Katie to drive; and oh, what a jolly afternoon they had of it!

Monday, when Katie came home from school, she said:

"O mama, I didn't like Jean at all at first, bnt she's a lovely seatmate. I'm so glad, aren't you?"

"Oh!" was all mama said; bnt somehow it made Katie think of her Satnrday troubles and the paper.

"I gness I'll tear up that paper, now, mama, dear," she said, laughing rather shyly.

"And next time," said mama, "why not let the troubles come before you cry abont them? There are so many of them which turn ont very pleasant, if you'll only wait to see."—Snnlight.

PLAYING LIKE A CHRISTIAN.

The spiritual intuition of children is often as accurate as it is impressive. Here is an instance named by a speaker when addressing a Sunday-school. He said: "I once heard of two little children, a boy and a girl, who used to play a great deal together. They were converted. One day the boy came to his mother and said:

"I know that Emma is a Christian."

"What makes you think so, my child?"

"Because, mother, she plays like a Christian."

"Plays like a Christian!" said the mother. The expression sounded a little odd.

"Yes," replied the child, "if you take everything she's got, she doesn't get angry. Before she was selfish; and if she didn't have everything her own way, she would say, 'I won't play with you; you are an ugly little boy.'"—Exchange.

WILL YOU BE A MISSIONARY?

Sophia had been praying for twelve years to become a foreign missionary. One day an aged friend said to her: "Sophia, stop! where were you born?"

"In Germany."

"Where are you now?"

"In America."

"Well, are you not a foreign missionary already?"

Then the friend said: "Who lives on the floor above you?"

"A family of Swedes."

"And above them?"

"Why, some Switzers."

"Who in the rear?"

"Italians."

"And a block away?"

"Some Chinese"

"And you have never said a word to these people about God's Son! Do you think he will send you thousands of miles to the foreigners and heathen, when you never care enough about those at your own door to speak with them about God's love?"

Not a few need the lesson Sophia learned. "Beginning at Jerusalem." As the salt of the earth sweetens the bit of it next to you; as the light of the world conquers the darkness nearest you.—Exchange.

BRIEF HINTS FOR BRIGHT GIRLS.

Some one has suggested fifteen things that every girl can learn before she is fifteen. Not every one can learn to play or sing or paint well enough to give pleasure to her friends, but the following "accomplishments" are within everybody's reach:

Shut the door, and shut it softly.

Keep your own room in tasteful order.

Have an hour for rising, and rise.

Learn to make bread as well as cake.

Never let a button stay on twenty-four hours.

Always know where your things are.

Never let a day pass without doing something to make somebody comfortable.

Never come to breakfast without a collar.

Never go about with your shoes unbuttoned.

Speak clearly enough for everybody to understand.

Never fidget or hum, so as to disturb others.

Never fuss, or fret, or fidget.—Christian Intelligencer.

BOSTON DENTAL COMPANY.

Excursions.

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

SCHOLARSHIP FREE.

Worth, Galveston, Shreveport or Savannah. Best patronized Business Colleges in the South. For particulars address The Illustrated Youth and Age, Nashville, Tenn.

THE true value of a paint can be determined only by a series of paintings. It costs more to burn off a cracked and peeled surface than it does to paint a new one.

The cost of keeping a house in good condition for a series of years is less with Pure White Lead than with any other paint. When repainting is required the surface is always in good condition. These brands are genuine.

OBITUARIES.

SHORT—Monn. P. Short was born and reared in Panola county, Miss., about five miles west of Sardis. Here he was married to Miss Clemmie Tucker in early manhood, and lived a most useful life till death. On the fifth day of April, 1900, after a brief illness of only twenty-four hours, his spirit passed out into the spirit world. Having been his pastor, I write out of a full heart. As a man, Mord. Short was known best as a good citizen. His straightforward way of doing things, his candid and honest way of facing every obligation of both private and public concern, stamped him a man that everybody could trust. Such was his influence, and so highly was his judgment regarded among his neighbors, that they sought his advice on all questions of special interest.

Socially, Bro. Short was a favorite with everybody, specially with children. As a Christian, the strength of his character was indicated by his hatred of all affectation and hypocrisy. Though a quiet, unostentatious man he was a very capable and useful member. He supported the church liberally, and was regular in attendance upon the means of grace. But his life shone brightest in the home. As a husband, he stood as a model for his community.

In the death of Bro. Short the country loses a good citizen, the church a true and useful member; but the loss to his heart-stricken wife and grieved kindred is irreparable in this life. But what a consolation that he leaves such a rich legacy of character and good deeds to his loved ones! May they emulate them and meet him in heaven! W. M. YOUNG,
Former Pastor.

Written by request of the family.

NEWSOM—Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst to his heavenly home the soul of our brother, H. C. NEWSOM; therefore, be it

Resolved, While we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, we pause to revere his memory and put on record our appreciation of his sterling worth as a man and a Christian. For many years Bro. Newsom has been closely identified with Methodism in the bounds of St. Helena circuit, and, indeed, in Louisiana. In the councils of the church he was wise and conservative. While for many years he occupied positions of trust in Church and State, he was found faithful in the discharge of every duty. There was no interest of our Zion to which he was not keenly alive. There was no sacrifice of personal gain or convenience which he was not ready and willing to make to advance the cause of Christ. We recognize in Bro. Newsom's life a beautiful exemplification of those traits of character which our Holy Gospel inculcates. His unswerving Christian integrity was a magnificent evidence to the truth of our holy religion.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be spread upon the Minutes of the Quarterly Conference, and published in the St. Helena Echo and NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

By order of the second Quarterly Conference of St. Helena circuit, Louisiana Conference, for 1900.

W. L. Tillery, H. W. Pipkin, P. M. Brown, Committee.

YARBROUGH—Mrs. SUSAN YARBROUGH was born in Marion county, Miss., April 5, 1837. She was the daughter of Judge Lemuel and Polly Lewis. She joined the Methodist Church at twenty years of age, but she was converted in her eighteenth year, and lived a consecrated Christian up to her death. In 1854 she was married to Mr. Jabez Yarbrough, and to them were given five children—four boys and one girl. Mrs. Yarbrough raised her children well. They are all members of the Methodist Church, and are succeeding well in temporal things. No one will be missed more in the home and in the community than Sister Yarbrough. She was kind to all, and ready to assist the poor and sorrowing. She spent the last years of her life in the home of Mr. B. A. Summer, her son-in-law. In her death the pastor of this circuit has indeed lost a true friend and helper. After several weeks' illness she died at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Summer, of Buford, Marion county, Miss., on Feb. 7, 1900, and was buried by the writer in the cemetery at China Grove Church. Many relatives and friends were present to pay the last tribute to her memory. We invoke the blessings of Heaven upon the bereaved ones.

B. H. RAWLS, P. C.

Tylertown, Miss.

TEMPLE—ALICE FREEMAN, daughter of T. G. Freeman, of the North Mississippi Conference, and sister of W. A. Freeman, of the Memphis Conference, was born in Benton county, Miss., Sept. 11, 1872. On the eleventh anniversary of her birthday she was converted at the Water Valley Camp Ground. August 20, 1837, she was married to James H. Temple. She passed away from earth at Durant, Miss., March 25, 1900, just a week after the death of her first-born—a martyr to the sacred suffering of motherhood. Reared in a religious home, and coming of religious stock, she professed Christ early in life, united with the church, and from childhood was a faithful church member and devoted Christian. She was likewise an active Christian. Of energetic temperament and positive character, she was open and pronounced in her profession and practice of religion. She was of frank, open disposition, and made many friends. Her last days of suffering brought to light in the loving attention of friends the hold she had upon the affections of those who knew her. After patient endurance of suffering she passed away in the full assurance of faith, and was buried at Durant, Miss., March 26, 1900, by the side of the innocent babe who had so shortly gone before her to the place of rest. May grace and peace from the Father rest upon those she leaves behind!

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Durant, Miss.

ISOM—Miss KATE ISOM, the subject of this notice, was born in Hinds county, near Utica, Miss., in October, 1862, and died in Denver, Col., Jan. 11, 1900. Her father was killed in the siege of Vicksburg in 1863, and while yet a child Miss Kate fell into the hands of Mrs. McKey, of Crystal Springs, Miss., by whom she was trained up in the way she should go. In this Christian home she became the companion of that elect lady, Miss Mary Hill, sister of Mrs. McKey, than whom there was probably never a more saintly character in the State of Mississippi. Under these influences the most natural thing in the world occurred—Miss Kate was converted early in life, became a member of the church, and developed into a splendid Christian womanhood. For several years I was her pastor, and know whereof I write. She was quiet and unassuming, but always at her post of duty, and always exhibiting a sweet Christian spirit. In her later days she was a great sufferer, but she was patient and full of faith in her Savior. She died in the Lord, and rests from her labors and sufferings. Not long before her death she said she had trusted all to her Savior, and if it was his will to take her, it was well with her soul. And so "God's children are gathering home."

W. B. LEWIS.

COLLIER—VINCE LUCAS COLLIER was born in West Feliciana parish, La., May 4, 1822, and died at his home in Sumner county, Tenn., April 5, 1900. He came with his parents to Tennessee in 1833. His first marriage was to Susan E. Jones, Sept. 9, 1847, and that year he joined the Methodist Church with his wife. His second marriage was to Louisa Watkins, Oct. 15, 1863. She died several years before he did. He was the father of ten children, five of whom have died.

Bro. Collier was a man of great force of character, a pronounced Methodist, and a devout, faithful Christian to the last. On all questions of interest to Church or State, his position was clearly defined. By thought and study he kept himself abreast with the progress of events, and ever dared to do what he himself believed to be right. He was a noble Christian man and citizen.

MANDEVILLE—As members of the Methodist Church in Carrollton before the erection of our present church-building, we, the undersigned, desire to place on record our appreciation of the late GEORGE A. MANDEVILLE, the organizer of that church in 1885. To his earnest and self-sacrificing spirit, at that time so clearly shown, our church and community are everlastingly indebted. To his work among us some of us owe the turning from darkness unto the light and liberty of the gospel of Jesus Christ, and we will ever hold his name in grateful remembrance. We extend our sympathy to his wife and children.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

It is only by raising unrenewed human nature that the summit of the hill can be reached. If you want to see the beautiful colors in the spectrum of truth, get to an elevation where the spectrum is not beclouded, but where the beauty of the Lord our God can be thus seen, and all the colors may be thus displayed as one united whole. Thus no one truth will have become merely stale or commonplace.—Rev. A. G. Mendenhall.

WINE OF CARDUI

THE LINK THAT BINDS.
JACKSON, TENN., Nov. 23.
I was subject to miscarriage for three years, and suffered constantly with backache. I wrote to you for advice, and after using three bottles of Wine of Cardui, according to your directions, I am strong and well, and the mother of a fine girl baby.
Mrs. E. N. JOWERS.
McELREE'S Wine of Cardui
There is no use talking—a baby in the house is the link that binds husband and wife together. Nothing is sadder than fruitless wedlock. The prattling and cooing of the little ones offset a thousand times the occasional worries and trials of life. When a wife is barren, there is a derangement somewhere in the genital organs, caused by one or more of those common disorders known as "female troubles". Wine of Cardui is the remedy. It puts the organs of generation in a strong and healthy condition, fitting the wife for the sacred duty of reproducing her kind. During the period of gestation the entire system of the expectant mother is built up to withstand the ordeal of labor, and when the little one makes its advent it is lusty and strong, well-fitted to grow to maturity in perfect health. The mother, too, passes through the trial with little pain and no dread. Wine of Cardui is truly a wonderful medicine for women.

The "Combination" Bible.
A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

Wm. J. Bryan says he hopes that if the Boers lose their fight for independence, they will come to this country.

Reports that President Kruger and his Cabinet have fled from the Transvaal capital are practically verified.

The Chicago India relief committee has cabled $1 000 to Lady Curzon, wife of the Viceroy, to be used in the famine district.

The next annual convention of the Cotton States' Association of the Commissioners of Agriculture will be held in Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 26.

It is reported that Aguinaldo, the Philippine leader, has been killed during a fight between the American soldiers and the insurgents.

Gen. Roberts has entered Johannesburg. London is confident that Pretoria has also fallen, although the War Department has no confirmatory advices.

Meridian (Miss.) and vicinity was visited on June 2 by a rainfall of 2.78 inches in forty-eight minutes. Thousands of dollars damage was done in Meridian alone.

The London War Office received a cablegram from Lord Roberts saying he had, at the request of the commandant of Johannesburg, put off his entry into the city for twenty-four hours.

Nueva Ecija, a town in Candaba, Philippine Islands, has been burned, and many poor families are homeless. Gen. Wheaton recommends government succor. It is supposed the fire was accidental.

Miss Bertha Warnken, the young lady in this city, from Dayton, O., who married Julius Leon Moyse, alias "Capt. Clark of the Texas," was granted a divorce by Judge Theard, in the Civil District Court.

The Democratic State Convention met on June 4, at Baton Rouge, to choose presidential electors and appoint delegates to the National Democratic Convention at Kansas City to assist in nominating a presidential candidate.

Hon. J. Ward Gurley, who was elected District Attorney for the parish of Orleans in the November election of 1899, and who failed to qualify within the time prescribed by law, was nominated by Gov. Heard for the vacancy created thereby.

The city members of the Louisiana Legislature have held a conference for the purpose of considering the repeal of the civil service sections of the city charter. It was the sense of the conference that civil service should be eliminated, and a committee was appointed to confer with a "steering committee" having the repeal matter in charge.

The Daughters of the Confederacy are wrought up over the action of Gen. Wagner and other Grand Army of the Republic men of Philadelphia in opposing the erection of a monument to the 200, or more, Confederates buried in Georgetown Cemetery, near Philadelphia. The Daughters of the Confederacy say they will appeal to the Secretary of War.

A very serious crisis has arisen in China. The Chinese Government has been unable to suppress the Boxers' rebellion, or was unwilling to do it; hence, to protect their legations, the various foreign powers have landed from their ships in Chinese waters sailors and marines, and sent them to Pekin to serve as a guard to the foreign colony in that city and neighborhood.

As we go to press the news was received of the fall of Pretoria. Lord Roberts entered the place without resistance. The Boers made their stand on Monday several miles south of Pretoria, but after a desperate fight lasting nearly all day, were compelled to retire. The capital itself made no resistance, and thus was spared the horror of bombardment.

Now that the war in South Africa is nearing its end, and there is reason to believe that another month will see peace re-established, there is a revival of talk of a final dissolution of the present Parliament and an appeal to the electors. The Unionists feel a strong assurance that, as a result of the victory of British arms and the imperialistic sentiment prevailing, the party at present in power would be returned by an overwhelming majority.

The People's Congress opened at Graaf Reinet, Cape Colony, Thursday. A resolution was adopted, declaring that the chief immediate cause of the war was the unwarranted, intolerable interference of the ministry in London in the internal affairs of the South African republics. A resolution against annexation of the republics was presented. A delegation will be sent to Great Britain, Canada and Australia to explain the views of those represented at the Congress.

Gratitude.

Dr. H. Mozley—Dear Sir: Since using your Lemon Elixir I have never had another attack of those fearful sick headaches, and thank God that I have at last found a medicine that will cure those awful spells.

MRS. ETTA W. JONES,
Parkersburg, West Virginia.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

I suffered with indigestion and dysentery for two long years. I heard of Lemon Elixir; got it; taken seven bottles and am now a well man.

HARRY ADAMS,
No. 1734 First Avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured my husband, who was afflicted for years with large ulcers on his leg, and was cured after using two bottles; and cured a friend whom the doctors had given up to die, who had suffered for years with indigestion and nervous prostration. MRS. E. A. BEVILLE,
Woodstock, Ala.

A CARD.

For nervous and sick headaches, indigestion, biliousness and constipation (of which I have been a great sufferer) I have never found a medicine that would give such pleasant, prompt and permanent relief as Dr. H. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. J. P. SAWTELL, Griffin, Ga.,

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and they applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The American Monthly Review of Reviews, for June, contains a character sketch of President James J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railroad, by Mrs. Mary H. Severance; an article on Paris and the Exposition of 1900 by Albert Shaw; a forecast of the work of the Tenement-House Commission recently appointed by Governor Roosevelt, by Jacob A. Riis; a description of Summer camps for boys, by Louis Rouillion; Automobiles for the Average Man, by Cleveland Moffett; and The Passion Play at Oberammergau, 1900. There is also an able discussion of the Refunding Law in Operation, by Charles A. Conant.

In the June number of Ladies' Home Journal, some of the notable features are: The Passion Play This Year, The Richest Woman in America (Hetty Green), How Some Familiar Things Came to Be, and The Masterpiece of Mary, Queen of Scots, picturing an apron worked by that unfortunate sovereign while in prison awaiting the executioner. Dr. S. Weir Mitchell's article, When the College is Hurtful to a Girl, is sure of a wide reading; so are Ian Maclaren's views on The Minister and His Vacation. The fiction features are the opening chapters of Julia Magruder's new serial, The Voice in the Choir, and The Autobiography of a Girl. A drawing by A. B. Frost, The Auction at the Farm, a series of photographs showing Sol Smith Russell in His Summer Home, and views Through Picturesque America, lend pictorial interest to the excellent number.

One of the most notable articles The Century has ever printed is The Problem of Increasing Human Energy, contributed to the June number by Nikola Tesla, the electric investigator. Mr. Tesla regards mankind as a body in motion, and addresses himself to the problem of increasing its force. In the department of pure literature the current number is notable as containing hitherto unpublished poems by James Russell Lowell, and new poems by Edmund Clarence Stedman and Thomas Bailey Aldrich. Governor Roosevelt writes with deep conviction of reform and reformers, putting in a plea for compromise or "agreement," and warning practical reformers that they must not only fight the bad opposed to them, but ignore the Quixotic good. Miss Dorothea Klumpke, the American astronomer, tells of her night's ride in a balloon, last November, from Paris to the coast, in unsuccessful quest of Leonids; Richard Whiteing writes, with Gallic lightness, of life on the boulevards in his series on the Paris of to-day. Chief among the illustrations are reproductions of an unpublished portrait of Alexander Hamilton, by Sharpless, accompanying a letter containing a characterization of his slayer, Aaron Burr; an unpublished photograph of Lincoln; and the frontispiece engraving by T. Cole from Turner's Ulysses Deriding Polyphemus.

PAIN NOT NECESSARY

When having dental operations performed. We have a simple, but efficacious method of deadening the most sensitive tooth, even when the nerve is exposed. The cavity can then be thoroughly cleansed and filled without pain.

Teeth extracted by an expert without the least pain, with

GAS, VITALIZED AIR OR BOSTON SPRAY.

The last deadens the gums only. You do not lose consciousness.

We make a specialty of Teeth That Improve the Expression.

Good Fillings.....$1.00 up

Gold Crowns, Porcelain Crowns, Bridge Work (Teeth without Plate), per tooth.....$3.00 to $5.00
Sets of Teeth from.....$5.00 to $50

Even the $5.00 sets are guaranteed to fit.

OUR MISSION.

But makes some green spray sweeter;
There's never a wind in all the sky
But makes some bird wing fleeter;
There's never a star but brings to heaven
Some silver radiance tender,

And never a rosy cloud but helps
To crown the sunset splendor;
No robin but may thrill some heart
His downright gladness voicing.
God gives us all some small, sweet way
To set the world rejoicing.

—Central Methodist.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Although the excitement and bne- attending the close of the session Congress has lessened the at- on given to the news from , that news has increased than lessened official anxiety. Minister Conger's cablegramr, reporting increased activity on part of the "Boxers" and the donment of two lines of railway, significantly, "The Chinese vernment seems either unwilling unable to suppress the tronble." Conger says all the American sionaries were safe when last from; bnt a number of them are in the interior, and fears are felt their safety. It has been sug- ted to the President that several the light-draft gunboats in the ippines be sent to the vicinity of of the interior missionary ns, as they can go up the shallow ers, and the suggestion has been ensed by the Cabinet, bnt no ers have yet been issued to in- se in any way our naval force in ese waters.

The chaplain of the Senate, in his yer at the opening of yesterday's on of the Senate, made a feeling rence to the death of Mrs. Sher- wife of ex-Senator Sherman, which had just been received Washington. He praised her char- and spoke of her as "keeping home-bred virtues, and showing all the type of a divinely noble tian character."

President McKinley and Senator banks occupied the President's at Metropolitan M. E. Church ing the exercises of Children's y, and their faces expressed the sure they felt at seeing and hear- the little folks carry ont an inter- g programme.

The Department of State was this k officially informed of the formal change, at Buenos Ayres, of copies the extradition treaty between the ited States and Argentine, which negotiated near the close of the Cleveland administration, and rwards amended by the Senate. is our first extradition treaty h Argentine, which has for years orded legal shelter to American minals.

The Minister from Turkey has been piciously industrious in pushing a mplaint of his government against . S. Merrill, United States Consul Jerusalem, on account of some ar- es written by him in 1897 for an erican religious paper, which con- ed severe criticism of the govern- t of Turkey. Of course, if the rkish Government insists, this Gov- ment must choose between recall- or dismissing Mr. Merrill, and stion of international etiquette, ignoring such a complaint. Inas- h as Mr. Merrill was out of the nular service when the articles in stion were written, and that when was during the following year ap- ted consul at Jerusalem for the d time, the Turkish Government mptly issued a consular exequatur him, it is a fair inference that the plaint never would have been e had not our government been sing the Sultan for a settlement those missionary claims.

ar Admiral Stewart, of the navy, vered an interesting address Sun- afternoon to the Senior Christian eavor Society of the Church the Covenant. He said: "Our ughts are of our country, and d thoughts they are, when we of the place she holds in the world. The ceremonies of Memorial Day are still in our memory. The sight of so many soldiers' graves are most impressive and suggestive. The weariness and the gloom, the hardships and suffering, the heart-breaking sadness of the Civil War, can never be forgotten. It was a great price that the people paid for peace. But all, whether from the North or for the South, were actuated, as we believe, by motives of duty, and what seemed then to be patriotism. All the bitterness of the strife has been forgotten and wiped out by intervening years. All who took part in that war took part in the glorious result, the settlement of past differences, and the cementing of the union of the nation into one country, united and powerful; one flag glory-covered and world-honored. Never has patriotic sentiment been more widespread than to-day. It is significant that patriotism should be emphasized by a meeting like this. The safety, the dignity, and the wide influence of this nation to-day is due, not so much to soldiers and battleships as to the Christian sentiment which pervades our people, influencing legislation, installing into the nation principles of honor. There is no army in the whole world equal to ours, with its elements of spiritual direction. There is no navy in the world so imbued with Christian influence as ours. I love best to think of a battleship, as I have so often seen it, of a Sunday morning, lying quietly off some foreign port, with decks spotlessly white, ropes neatly coiled in place, the officers in the special dress that they use for the day, and the sailors in muster suits. Often, when I have stepped on deck of a Sabbath morning, has my heart been stirred when I heard the strains of 'Nearer, my God, to Thee.' No wonder that a navy with some regard for the observance of a holy day should be heroic in the hour of battle. The danger to this nation comes from within more than from without, and the safety of the country lies in the increase of spiritual and Christian sentiment—such work as you are doing. Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord."

WHITWORTH'S FORTY-FIRST COMMENCEMENT.

It has just closed. The exercises were elevated, of high grade, and very entertaining. The elocution and music had marked individuality as well as excellence and attractiveness, showing that even in these ornamental features of education the girls at old Whitworth are taught to think. Indeed, very little of the parrot tendency, so common in many colleges, could be discovered in any of the girls who appeared on this commencement occasion.

On Friday night, after a spirited and interesting debate by representatives of the Harvey Johnson and Philomathean Literary Societies, Rev. A. F. Watkins, of Vicksburg, delivered an address on "The Twentieth Century," which was very fine and much enjoyed. Of the debate the Lincoln County Times thus speaks editorially:

"The question was, 'Resolved, That the United States ought to build the Nicaragua Canal independent of any other nation.' Misses Mary E. Lampton and Ethel Featherstun, of the Philomatheans, upheld the affirmative, while Misses Zoe Preston and Ethel Bennett, of the Harvey Johnsons, valiantly opposed. The papers all presented strong arguments, and were highly complimented. The opinion of the judges was recorded in favor of the affirmative."

Rev. J. E. Carpenter, of Natchez, preached the commencement sermon from Eph. iv, 13—'The Perfect Man." The sermon was one of the best I have heard in years. The thought, the expression, the plan and the spirit were all of the highest order. It was as appropriate as it was excellent.

Saturday was occupied by the large and enthusiastic Alumnæ Association, whose anniversary is always an important feature of commencement at Whitworth. The magnificent women who took part in the exercises of last Saturday are in evidence of the superlative work that Whitworth has been doing for years. She has been making "women," not human "butterflies." The following are the officers for the ensuing year: Miss Addie V. Marshall, Brookhaven, president; Mrs. Lily Wilkinson Thompson, Crystal Springs, first vice-president; Mrs. Margaret Fryer Phillips, Belle Prairie, second vice-president; Miss Alice Cook, Sunny Side, third vice-president; Miss Mamie Martin, Brookhaven, corresponding secretary; Miss Josie Pfeifer, Brookhaven, recording secretary; Mrs. Neole Warren McNair, Brookhaven, treasurer.

As every real Methodist college must have, Whitworth has a Young Women's Foreign Missionary Society and an Epworth League. On Sunday afternoon "the town League" joined with "the college League" in a sweet and beautiful service, which some of us preachers and older people enjoyed very much indeed. At 8 P. M. Rev. W. M. Williams, of Columbia, took the place of Rev. J. M. Morse, of Wesson, who was detained, and preached "the sermon to the Epworth League." It was good and eminently appropriate. His text was Luke xiv, 24.

Again I quote from the Times' editorial: "The gold medal contest in elocution took place on Monday morning. Four contestants appeared—Misses Johnson, Marshall, Featherstun and Cammack—the decision going to Miss Featherstun, whose rendition of a dramatic selection from the 'Last Days of Pompeii' was superb."

That "the grand concert" on Monday, at 8 P. M, was what its name indicates, and that we all enjoyed it, "goes without saying" with any who ever attended "commencement" at old Whitworth.

The graduating exercises took place on Tuesday morning. The address by Hon. R. H. Henry did not occur, the speaker not being able to reach the college; but we had speeches from the retiring and the incoming presidents which evoked tears and smiles and applause, and made of it a beautiful love-feast affair. Details are thus given by the Times:

"Two of the class, Misses Lillian Platt and Katie Hill, read thoughtful essays, and Miss Mary Chambers posed as the class prophet. The honors of the class were carried off by Miss Chambers, with Miss Featherstun a close second. Three others won places as honor pupils, making an average of over 90 per cent. in all their studies—Misses Hargrave, Platt, and Lampton.

"Degrees were conferred as follows: Artium Baccalaurea — Mary Louise Chambers, Bessie Dimon Crosby, Ethel Featherstun, Katie Ernestine Hill, Mary Ellen Lampton, Forestine Noel Thompson. Mistress of English Literature — Cornelia Grout, Florence Estelle Hackler, Ella Bolivar Hargrave, Meda Phillips, Lillian Azonia Platt, Zoe May Preston, Lula Enochs White. Bachelor of Didactics — Columbia Ann Burns. Bachelor of Music — Sarah Ann Cooper. Bachelor of Painting—Frances Deceli Moreton. Bachelor of Elocution—Mary Louise Chambers, Allie Cammack, Ethel Featherstun."

Miss Sarah Cooper, of Yazoo City, took the gold medal in music, and Miss Florence Hackler, of Edwards, and Miss Bessie Bailey took gold medals in art.

The closing term has been, financially, the most prosperous for years; nevertheless, wearied with the unequal struggle against untoward conditions arising out of the hard times, the yellow fever epidemics, the multiplying of colleges for girls, but especially a very severe attack of illness a year ago, the result of overwork, President Chambers thought it wise to resign. No man, save that "noblest Roman of them all," Harvey F. Johnson, has done so much for grand old Whitworth as J. W. Chambers. He spent not only all the money that he and his wife had saved, but he gave himself unreservedly for six years of heroic, unrecorded self-sacrifice, toil and hardship, and all, that Whitworth College, the creation of H. F. Johnson's great heart and masterful brain, and the choicest heritage of Mississippi Methodism, should be maintained and advanced. Like the matchless Johnson, he contended against all odds to sustain a high curriculum; and, at great cost to himself, he has unfalteringly maintained it. I know what I say when I declare that no women in the South are better educated than are his A. B. graduates, and very, very few can match them. Eighteen of these have gone out with diplomas from his hand, and are among the brightest and best of the women of the South.

Some months ago President Chambers wrote, asking his old friend, the Rev. A. F. Watkins, to permit his name to be presented to the Board of Trustees for the future president of Whitworth. At first Bro. Watkins shrank from such an undertaking, but when President Chambers secured the consent of Rev. M. L. Burton to permit his name to be associated with that of Bro. Watkins, he yielded. The arrangement was eminently satisfactory to the Board; so on Monday, by unanimous vote, Rev. A. F. Watkins was made president, and Rev. M. L. Burton vice-president, of Whitworth College. The choice of the whole Board, and assured of the heartiest sympathy and co operation of every member, we have reason to expect that under the wise and energetic administration of these two gifted and popular leaders, old Whitworth will reach a degree of success never equalled before.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

The commencement exercises of the Port Gibson Female College began on Sunday, May 20, the Rev. M. M Black, of New Orleans, preaching for us—both morning and evening. In harmony with our motto, "Omnium Christo," he magnified the Christ of the Trinity and the Savior of men. It has never been our privilege to hear a sermon that so completely and forcibly subordinated everything to Christ, making the infallible test of a successful life—the exaltation and imitation of Christ.

Monday evening was the occasion of the primaries entertainment; that department being under the supervision of Mrs. L. S. Jones, their teacher. The chapel was filled to overflowing at an early hour, and the audience attested their appreciation of the affair by loud and continuous applause. For two hours the little ones appeared "before the foot-lights" in music, song, readings and drills. The opening overture, "The Caliph of Bagdad," was most successfully rendered by two children, and was quickly followed by an orchestral of small lads and lassies, under the careful training of the stringed instrument teacher, Miss E. M. Hartwell. Then followed a characteristic song, "The House That Jack Built," in which the "maiden all forlorn" milked the cow with a crumpled horn, while the "man all worn and torn," together with all the other prominent characters of that wonderful house, appeared in suitable costumes while their fame was being sung. 'Six Little Maids from School" was rendered in concert by six little ones, who recited beautifully together, interspersed with songs, etc. "The Days of the Week" were represented also in character—a humorous arrangement by the primary teacher. A delicious little solo, "Won't You Come to My Tea-party?" was perfectly rendered by a wee tot, Florine Levy. "The Kazoo Band" was sung by the seven small boys of the primary department, the chorus being rendered on combs instead of kazoos. A reading, 'Our Baby," by May Redus, brought down the house. The Parasol Drill by primaries, and the Wand Drill by preparatories, were beautiful spectacular displays. "If I were a boy" and "If I were a girl"—a two-part song—was one of the most attractive features of the programme; but just as the two little ones, brother and sister, were progressing beautifully, with their "hits" at one another, an ugly-looking bug, attracted by the electric lights, fell plump down between them, and created a stampede upon the part of the girl. After a final orchestral the performances were brought to a close by taking up a collection for the benefit of the sufferers in India.

Tuesday evening was the occasion of the grand concert, conducted by the two music teachers and the expression teacher. The music rendered could not be surpassed, and the pantomime and Delsarte motions, performed in unison by the larger students, were beautiful and artistic, displaying much diligence upon the part of the pupils and equal ability of the teacher, Miss Russell. Many encomiums attest the high appreciation of the public, and the generous attendance was most encouraging to teachers and pupils.

Wednesday morning the contest for the medal in music took place. There were four contestants, but one—the one who bore off the honor of scholarship in music—was too much confused to do herself justice, and the other three fair contestants each received a vote apiece from the three judges, thus displaying equal ability in the opinion of the judges. They were thereby forced to draw for the medal, and the fortunate winner was Miss Evelyn Son. Wednesday evening came with floods of rain, so that the graduating exercises had to be postponed until Thursday evening.

After the reading of the graduating essays, Rev. J. E. Carpenter, of Natchez, delivered a strong, logical, and highly appreciated address upon the subject of "The Scope and Goal of Christian Education." The Doctor "covered himself with glory" in his easy, impressive, happy delivery of the thoughts that greeted his hearers. The awarding of scholarships and diplomas concluded the final performance of the P. G. F. C. of 1900.

The literary scholarship was awarded Miss Alberta Fnuches; the music scholarship to Miss Mamie Cooke, of Utica; the music medal to Miss Evelyn Son; the deportment medal to Miss Mary Harrison, of Utica; the medal for neatness to Miss Lillie Spencer, of Red Lick; the scholarship medal to Miss Norine Schilleg, and a scholarship in stringed instruments to Miss Florine Nasson, both of the latter young ladies being of Port Gibson.

THE COMMENCEMENT AT GRENADA FEMALE COLLEGE.

The recent commencement exercises of Grenada College met the most sanguine expectations of President McIntosh and other friends of the institution. Rev. Homer G. Davis, of the North Alabama Conference, preached a strong sermon from II. Cor. iv, 18. We will be glad to see the gifted young Alabamian come this way again.

The Alumnæ Association, on Monday morning, presented an array of brilliance and beauty rarely seen, even on similar occasions. Hon. S. A. Morrison, of Grenada, delivered the address. It was thoughtful, original, and decidedly unique. The concerts and recitals were up to the level of the best. The excellence of the pupils was a just evidence of their own diligence and the painstaking instruction of the teachers.

Tuesday was commencement day. The graduating class of seven young ladies were worthy specimens of accomplished and beautiful young womenhood. Six of these received the degree of M. E. L., and one the degree of A. B. Miss Lillian Woodard, of Corinth, Miss., received first honor and read the valedictory; her subject, "The Power of Music." Miss Mary Cerothers, daughter of the Presbyterian pastor of Grenada, read the salutatory; her subject, "Geo. Eliot and Elizabeth Barrett Browning Contrasted." Rev. W. F. Hemner, D. D., of the Memphis Conference, delivered the address. The brilliant young Tennesseean captured his audience. He left the old stereotyped way of flattering encomiums on woman; gave us something new, refreshing, and edifying. There were flashes of humor, bursts of eloquence, and thoughts original and pure. His auditors will not soon forget him.

We congratulate President McIntosh and his noble Christian wife, together with his corps of able teachers, on the great success of his first year at the head of the institution. The boarding patronage has been the largest in its history. Total number of matriculations, 165. The college is meeting the demands of the times. The work is thorough; the curriculum is of true college grade. The faculty will compare favorably with the best in institutions of like character.

Bro. McIntosh has demonstrated his fitness for his responsible place. The building is massive, in thorough repair; complete system of sewerage, water and baths, and electric lights throughout the house. The religious tone of the school is a chief attraction. A gracious revival during the past session was a great blessing to the school. Send your daughters to Grenada.

T. Y. RAMSEY.

GRENADA FEMALE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

I had the pleasure of attending the recent commencement of Grenada College. As all the friends of the college expected, Bro. McIntosh and his able corps of teachers have done excellent work for the girls who attended the school this year. One thing is very evident: Grenada College is not only a church school, but it is distinctly a religious institution of a high order. I was told that every girl, except two, are members of some church. The training they have received in Sunday-school, missionary and Epworth League work ought to tell for great good upon the communities where they may live. By way of parenthesis, I can say the best helpers I have had in church work are graduates from our own colleges.

The Holy Spirit has honored the institution by calling one of its brightest teachers and two of its students into the foreign field. May the Lord call the others into active service in the home land, that they may help maintain their elect friends as they go out to teach heathens the way, the truth, and the life!

Others in the future can tell our people the things that are needed to make our college the best-equipped institution in the State for the education of our daughters. Some new furniture in the hall, new paper for the rooms, and an elevator to run up to the fifth story, ought to be put in before September next.

The European country in which Methodism flourishes most is German Switzerland, into which it was introduced in 1856. There are now 8,000 church members and 30 000 persons who are more or less connected with the movement.—Exchange.

THE RECENT MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AT WINONA.

Mr. Editor: Allow me to give your readers some of the facts developed and plans suggested by our recent Mid-year Missionary Conference, held at Winona, Miss. Five presiding elders out of the nine in the North Mississippi Conference gave it as their opinion that their respective districts would pay the assessment on foreign missions in full this year. They reported that missionary mass meetings were being held, sermons being preached on missions, and collections were being taken with more vigor than in the past. The fact was developed that about 30 per cent. of the 45,000 members in our church paid $9 504 58 on missions last year. How to reach the other 70 per cent. of our members, and raise the deficit of $5,095.42, is the problem we endeavored to solve. Here is a vast and fruitful mission field at our feet, in which the preachers can lead superintendents, League presidents and others to work and carry with them an untold blessing to the church at home, and cause great rejoicing abroad. How many souls we might lead to Christ and to heaven, if we only would go out in earnest after the delinquent members.

Another fact: That only a few superintendents have organized their schools into missionary societies, as the Discipline directs (Paragraph 246). As an aid to the superintendents in our Conference, I was appointed to get up a short program on missions, and request its publication in the New Orleans Advocate once a month. This program is to be used in connection with the regular lesson. It is only suggestive, and if the preacher or superintendent can procure one better adapted to the needs of his school, he is at liberty to do so. The point aimed at is to wheel this mighty army of the young into line, and allow them to take some definite part in this great work of the church. The program will be sent out in time to be used the fourth Sunday in each month. I shall be glad to get suggestions from superintendents and others.

PROGRAM.

Songs from Young People's Hymnal, Nos. 109, 5, and 62, as a solo.

How many missionaries did our church have in China in 1848? Ans. 2.

How many now? Ans. 30.

When was the first convert baptized? Ans. 1857.

How many members now? Ans. 1,235.

How many now? About 80,000.

How many Sunday-schools have we there? Ans. 19.

How many scholars? Ans. 1,646.

Do they contribute to missions? Ans. They do.

These questions may be put to the entire school several times. Let the teachers take their turn at getting good selections of prose or poetry from the papers, magazines, reviews, or from any source, to be read or recited as soon as the school opens. This custom will increase the promptness of pupils, and in many cases will secure the attendance of parents.

Try these suggestions, and report your success or failure. Count on me to pray for your success.

Yours "All for Christ,"

R. H. B. Gladney.

KENTUCKY LETTER.

BY REV. CHAS. F. EVANS, D. D.

Mr. Editor: Into the last few days have been crowded three conventions, all of which have exerted wide and profound interest here, two of which will be serviceable in a general way to your young people, and one which will prove, if not of universal appreciation, at least pleasure to your older readers.

In the last I refer to the Reunion of Confederate Veterans at Louisville, which is still in session, and which I attended Wednesday, in company with two grand-daughters of Jno C. Breckenridge, and Hon. D. L. Thornton, one of President Davis' body-guard in the retreat from Richmond to Atlanta. Most of the conspicuous men in that struggle between the States rest in honorable and honored graves, and those who in other days were "little and unknown," but who have become by identification with the 'Lost Cause" heroes in the eyes of the patriotic in the South, are annually growing fewer and more conspicuous. Judge Hazelrigg, in his address, said, "We have heard of the 'Old South' and of the 'New South,' but to-day it seems as if we were looking upon the 'whole South,' as we contemplate this vast throng here, and the crowded approaches hereto." It surely was a gay scene; the "wit and beauty" of Kentucky never more presentable, with the fairest women and bravest among the men from every Southern State. The former came in dresses of every texture and shade, with faces bright with intelligence, joy and pride, under the escort of men who generally wore the "gray," which five years of heroism have made honorable forever. A fervent patriotic prayer from Rev. J. W. Jones, 'Stonewall's" chaplain, opened the exercises of the day, and six "welcome" addresses, with the songs of "My Old Kentucky Home" and "Auld Lang Syne," opened the way for the orator of the day. During the latter song a mist came before my eyes, so as to obscure the page, and a choking sensation prevented my voice, so that memories took the place of song with me. That past will never be only a memory to me or any of the actors in the scenes of 1860 to 1865.

One of the chief attractions of the Reunion was the desire to hear my old friend, Dr. B M. Palmer, of your city, in what I fear is the last great effort of his life. I have been fortunate enough to hear all of his great efforts of a patriotic character, from his secession sermon to that in the Opera House anti-Lottery meeting, but none of them will be remembered longer, and have a wider influence in moulding or remoulding of public sentiment, than his address on this occasion. He came to the defense of the 'Lost Cause" with rich stores of historic lore, with ample observation of cotemporaneous men and causes, and with critical knowledge of our Constitution in both its utterances and silences, and he stated the cause of the South as made in the press, Legislatures and battle-fields of that era, and as history will present it to the forum of the future. It was calm and judicial in word and manner, Periclean in polish and force, and worthy in spirit and motive of the scholarly divine, of the grave issues involved, and the great and noble men who joined those issues in the flame of battle, and anointed them with their life's blood.

It was a plaintive appeal to the sober, magnanimous thought of the nation's leaders by the Atlanta Battalion of Maimed Veterans when they marched into that hall. One hundred vigorous men, led by a brass band, tried to keep step as forty years ago. Many wore an empty sleeve, many carried a wooden leg or foot, some came on crutches, some with single eyes, but all bore the aspect of manliness and courage, and painted that multitude with consciousness of self-respect, and desert of confidence and esteem.

The other assemblies referred to were the State Union of Christian Endeavorers, recently convened in Versailles, and the State Union of Epworth Leagues, which met in Covington, Ky.

I never saw a more harmonious or enthusiastic body than the first mentioned. Its representatives were from the Presbyterian, Baptist, and Campbellite Churches. They were entertained by a society of thirty members, with aid of the Young People's Societies of all the other churches. Several rally meetings participated in by all the local societies and congregations, and numerous meetings of the several choirs, awakened a lively interest in the approaching convention, and seoured them a large and appreciative hearing. When the delegates convened in their first meeting, a splendid audience greeted them. Hon. W. O. Davis, my Sunday-school superintendent, welcomed them in a fine, witty, and yet sober address. Amongst other things he said: 'We welcome you to Woodford county, of which Thos. Marshall said, 'While Kentucky is the garden spot of the world, this county is the asparagus bed,' and as that esculent is now ripe, you have come in good time. Anticipating your arrival, we have set our hens early, and the chickens are ready for the broiler. We welcome you like the whale did Jonah—to a three days' hospitality. We turn over to you all the keys of our town excepting one, which we will presume you do not desire, and that is the whis-key. We surrender the city, not in fee simple and perpetual, but for a time, to be returned to us 'in same good order and condition, natural wear and tear and unavoidable accidents alone excepted.' In the event of sickness resulting from our generous mein, we are glad to furnish quite an assortment of medical practitioners. We have the allo-path, the homeo-path, the osteo-path, but we must remind you that all these 'paths,' like 'the path of glory,' lead but to the grave.'" The handsome collection of one thousand dollars was furnished them for work in the two penitentiaries of the State, in each of which active societies of Christian Endeavor have been organized. The chaplain of the Frankfort branch is a member of the Kentucky Conference, and made a most earnest plea for the removal of the stripes from the clothing of the convicts. He took pleasure in the fact that Kentucky had abandoned the sordid and savage method of farming out the labor of her convicts, and was humanely trying to teach and reform them.

At the Epworth League Convention, which was held in the M. E. Church, one was impressed with the great profusion of national and scarcity of League color. The State Union is contriving nothing beyond fraternity. Our own State organization has devoted itself to our missionary in Corea, and done nobly towards his support. There were some very fine addresses. Rev. W. G. Cram delivered a masterly one on "Value of Literary Work in the League," and Rev. B. E Lancaster another on "The Reading Course." Col. Johnson, a lawyer of Covington, made the best and most scriptural talk on tithing I ever heard. At the final meeting Rev. E G. B. Mann, of the Kentucky Conference (South), satirized the "Notes" pad, and urged the superiority of the Memory, properly used, and in a rapid and commendatory way gave digest of each speaker's work, to more deeply impress them on the mind. Some speakers from beyond the Ohio river seemed to try to say "smart" things—a "taste" which I am glad to remark as absent from our own preachers. The audiences were not as large as I expected, and the reason was the absence of preparation for it by local Leagues. The Leagues are moving forward in Kentucky—not so rapidly as in some States, but as swiftly as distressed conditions will admit.

We have some noble young men in our ministry, led by E. G. B. Mann, one of the most earnest and accomplished of our pastors. Doubtless we would see better results if both Methodist Churches had separate organizations, with discreet and fraternal use of each other's best men.

I must close this long letter with an affectionate salutation to my old friends—the expression of my joy at the prosperity of your League, your Advocate, and Twentieth Century work.

THE NECESSITY OF A RELIGIOUS HOME LIFE.

(Read before the Sardis District Conference, Hernando, Miss., and published by request of that body.)

I can conceive of no more important question in its practical bearing, than that which has been assigned to me at this hour, The Necessity of a Religious Home Life.

The home and the family are institutions ordained of God, and for the reason, among others, that through the close and endearing relations thereby established the religious life of the individual might be more fully developed than would be possible under any other conditions. Were it otherwise, we might conceive of human beings as herding together like irresponsible animals, or sprouting and growing out of the soil, each bearing only the commonest relations to all others.

Originally, or in patriarchal days, the family was practically the visible church. With this in view, if I were going to preach a sermon on this subject to-day, I would select as my text Deut. vi, 7: "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up, and shalt bind them for a sign upon thine hand, and they shall be as frontlets between thine eyes, and thou shalt write them on the posts of thy doors and on thy gates."

As Moses delivered this farewell lesson on the law of God to Israel, he saw far down the way of the history of his people as a nation, and understood something of the dangers that awaited them, and, therefore, he emphasized the value of a religious home life as a school which the Lord God himself had founded. He wanted them to be ready, when their children should in the future ask, "What mean the testimonies, and the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord our God hath commanded us?" to answer: "We were Pharaoh's bondsmen in Egypt, and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand, ... and the Lord commanded us to do all these statutes, and to fear the Lord our God, for our good always, that he might preserve us alive as at this day."

I would refer just here to two very striking examples of the value of religious home life in Old Testament days. They are Abraham and Eli—the one a patriarch, the other a priest in the Lord's house. When God determined to make of Abraham a great nation, he gave this as his reason therefor: "For I know him, that he will command his children and his household after him, and they shall keep the way of the Lord, to do justice and judgment, that the Lord may bring upon Abraham that which he hath spoken of him"

Eli, though a priest in the Lord's house, was evidently greatly lacking in those admirable traits that belonged to the strong and rugged character of Abraham. His was a vascillating nature, defective in its religious strength. There was so much that was sinister in him that the Lord charged him with honoring his sons above the Lord, and seeking to make himself and them "fat with the chiefest of all the offerings of my people Israel." As a righteous judgment of the Lord, we are told of the swift and tragic death of the sons, and the sudden taking off of Eli. Abraham becomes a mighty nation, whose history spreads over the ages, while Eli and his sons are only faded memories of time.

Do not these facts verify God's own words: 'I will visit the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me, keeping mercy for thousands of them that love me and keep my Commandments"?

The necessity of religious life in the home is strongly implied when St. Paul says: "And ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Just as parents are under obligations to provide for the daily physical needs of their children, and to furnish them with all advantages of education and else, so also are they here required to minister, as far as human agencies can, to the spiritual nurture and culture of their little ones.

As to the far-reaching influence of this home life, if my memory is correct, it was the sagacious Pope Pius IX. of Rome who said, some thirty years ago, "Give me the daughters of this generation, and I will have the mothers of the next"—a strong statement of the potent influence of the mother in forming the child's religious character and faith.

Some one has said, "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." It is a universally conceded fact that mothers, in a very large majority of cases, have more to do with fixing the moral and religious future of their children than fathers have. And this for at least two reasons: 1. A much larger per cent. of mothers than fathers are Christians; and, 2. Children are much more with their mothers than with their fathers at the most impressionable and formative period of their lives. How great the responsibility of mothers!

The necessity of a perfectly consistent religious life on the part of parents is stressed by the fact that little children, like "children of larger growth," are more deeply impressed by example than by precept. In other words, precept without example passes for nothing with them. How much religion do you suppose the little girl thought her mother had when, finding the mother's church letter, which had lain in her trunk for years, she exclaimed, "Why, mother; here is your religion!"

Such influences should be constantly thrown around the little one, and such godly example put before it in every-day life, that from its very infancy it will be a Christian. This I hold to be a gracious possibility, and here is the heaven-ordained mission of godly fatherhood and motherhood. Necessity for one single sin in the life of anyone does not exist. The forces of sin are strong, but the forces of divine grace are infinitely stronger. "Where sin abounded grace did much more abound." It is not only a possibility, but a Christian duty, to bring up every child "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." It could not be a duty were it not a possibility. Childhood Christianity and all subsequent spiritual development, together with all good and pure social life, and upright citizenship, have their initial being in the godly home. Influences and impressions in childhood are the most potent and ineffaceable. "Just as the twig is bent so is the tree inclined." A poet has beautifully said:

"A pebble in the brooklet scant
Has changed the course of many a river;
A dew-drop on the tiny plant
Has warped the giant oak forever."

The value of early religious life finds enlargement in the fact that it is not near so difficult for one to lead a consistent Christian life who has never been anything but a Christian, as it is for one who is converted late in life, after having spent years in sin and growth of wicked habits. The highest types of Christian character, as a rule, almost without exception, are seen in those who have all their lives been followers of Christ. Such character is a thing of steady growth, and if this growth is hindered by years of sinful indulgence, to that extent will it be dwarfed and stunted. And such a Christian—Christian in the true meaning of that term though he be—soundly converted to God, will find many a battle in store for him over the ground of his old vicious habits.

The necessity of such a life in the home is immovably based upon the fact that no one has any shadow of right to be anything but positively, genuinely religious at home, or anywhere else. Would that every father and mother in the land were profoundly impressed with the untold value of the early and patient and constant and prayerful moral and religious training of their children, that they might come to see this as being of such surpassing importance that all else would sink into nothingness as compared with it.

From whence come the consecrated workers, both men and women, of the church of to-day? These who are going, in their zeal and consecration, into the very "highways and hedges," and are compelling men to come into the kingdom of Christ, from what sort of homes and influences have they come? Certainly not from fashion's halls and parlors, where wines are served, and where they "trip the light fantastic toe" "till the wee sma' hours o' the night;" nor where the euchre party (modern society's polite and refined method of gambling) is held.

No, but God gets the great masses of his faithful workers from the homes where the family altar is established, where the Book is read and studied and taught and lived by; homes from which all the hellish influences of corrupt literature and of ungodly society are shut out; homes where God is loved and worshiped and feared and honored as Lord and Savior. It is a miracle of grace where a young person is snatched nowadays from the allurements and ungodly influences of popular social life, and consecrates himself to the work of the church. Such cases are rare indeed. How different would it all be if all homes were religious homes, and all fathers and mothers were Christian fathers and mothers!

"Blest is the pious house
Where zeal and friendship meet;
Their songs of praise, their mingled vows,
Make their communion sweet."

Mrs. J. B. Stone, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference held its annual meeting at Como, Miss., May 26-29. We take pleasure in reporting one of the very best meetings in the history of the organization. With the exception of our corresponding secretary, who was kept at home by sickness in her family, all the officers were present, and a good delegation from the various districts. We were blessed throughout the entire session by the presence of Mrs. Bennett, whose wise counsel from time to time was most helpful.

The annual sermon was preached Sunday morning by Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Carrollton, from Luke vii 22. It was full of encouragement for the home workers. Our hearts were inspired with a new zeal by his eloquent appeal for more and better work in our home land. The preparation service, led by Mrs. W. H. Wall, of Sardis, was participated in by many, who went away strengthened for the work.

Sunday evening Mrs. Wesson, in behalf of Como and her auxiliary, bade us a cordial welcome in words of beauty and grace. The response by Miss Lucy Matthews, of Holly Springs, found an echo in the heart of every visitor and delegate. Mrs. Taylor brought friendly greetings from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Como. The recitations by little Lucille Short and Tennie Jones, of Misses Sledge and Elvane, were beautifully rendered and enjoyed by all. Miss Bennett gave a strong address on the work of the Home Mission Society, and its place in the economy of the Twentieth Century Methodism. By her suggestion the four ministers present—Rev. Thomas Cameron, Rev. T. W. Lewis, Rev. W. J. Burt, Rev. Hayes—and the president of Como Auxiliary, Mrs. Short, were each made a patron of the Educational Endowment Fund. Mrs Cameron, of Macon, who desired to make a gift to the Como Auxiliary in memory of her daughter and little grandson, who sleep in the cemetery here, gave $5, making Mrs. Mary Wyatt and William Wyatt each a patron of the same fund.

Monday morning the business of the society was begun, with Mrs. Foote, the president, in the chair. The report of the treasurer was for six months instead of one year, owing to the time for annual meeting being changed from October to May. Attention was called to the fact that much had been reported for the last six months as for the former year. The corresponding secretary's report was full of encouragement, and full of loving admonition, and a plea for more thorough work. By her own zeal and diligence she inspires her co-workers. The reports of the district secretaries, though gratifying in many respects, revealed the fact that the work is still in its incipiency; that the trained workers are few; that large per cent. of our membership yet uninformed on the subject of home missions.

Columbus district claimed the banner. Holly Springs Auxiliary, having raised largest amount of money, was the banner auxiliary. Strong's was given the banner for work. It is a model auxiliary, well illustrating the old adage, "Where there's a will there's a way."

Mrs. W. H. Wall, superintendent of the Department of Supplies, read a very instructive paper on this practical work, and made a strong appeal for the needy preachers and the church. Miss Bennett gave an interesting account of the Cuban schools in Florida. All were impressed with the importance of adequate building for Miss Bruce's school, and when Miss Bennett asked for a pledge of $100 for a room in the proposed building, the society quickly pledged $200 as a memorial to our sainted corresponding secretary. It will be called by her name.—Fannie Featherstone.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. E. W. Foote, Aberdeen; first vice-president, Mrs. J. B. Stone; second vice-president, Mrs. A. B. Finlay, Greenville; recording secretary, Mrs. R. H. Gladney, Pickens; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Robert Somerville, Greenville; treasurer, Mrs. R. Short, Como; editor, Mrs. J. B. Stone, Winona; supt. Department of Supplies, Mrs. W. H. Wall, Sardis; auditor, Mrs. Patty Pointer, Como.

District secretaries: Wicona district, Mrs. E. T. Buckley, Carrollton; Grenada district, Mrs. T. J. Binford, Water Valley; Sardis district, Mrs. Julia Jones, Arkabutla; Columbus district, Mrs. J. L. McMorris, Brooksville; Aberdeen district, Mrs. T. Dukeminier, Strong's; Corinth district, Mrs. George Bynum, Corinth; Holly Springs district, Miss Lucy Matthews, Holly Springs; Grenada district, to be supplied; Durant district, Mrs. Irene Thomas, Mabel.

It is with feelings of deepest gratitude we will always remember the people of the beautiful town of Como; for their unbounded hospitality and charming entertainment, the choir, whose well-trained voices gave us such beautiful music at every service, and our Conference host, Rev. Thomas Cameron, for his presence and co-operation during the entire session.

The following resolution was unanimously adopted by a rising vote: That we extend our thanks to the editor of the New Orleans Advocate for his kindness and courtesy to us, and that we urge our people everywhere to take his excellent paper.

Water Valley was chosen as the next place of meeting. May the coming year be one of unequalled prosperity.

Mrs. R. H. B. Gladney,
Recording Secretary.

IMPRESSIONS OF THE WINONA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

When I awoke Monday morning to ace once more the usual routine of y daily work, my first thought was: I am a better man, closer to God, nd more able to do his will than I as when the District Conference egan." Every sitting was marked y a distinctly and powerfully spirit- al atmosphere. The Conference pened with a fervent prayer for the utpouring of the Holy Ghost upon e district, and that prayer was owerfully answered in all the ses- ions. Reports from all the charges ng with accounts of the workings f his mighty power; the committee eports breathed a spirit that showed hat they must have been prepared ith prayer as well as with care; nd every sermon and address was ll of the same sweet influence, and ccompanied by manifestations of e Spirit's presence and power. reachers and laymen went home ith brighter faces and fuller hearts han they had brought with them. or three days we sat together in eavenly places, and the Holy Ghost as upon us.

One of the best features of the nference was the spirit of unity, d brotherly love that prevailed. e felt that every delegate who asped his hand, or put a loving m over his shonider, was a brother deed. God's Spirit melted all our arts, and a heavenly love fused em into one. When a brother told, th radiant face, the story of his oggles and trinmphs, every up- ted face reflected his joy. When nother, sitting beside him, rose up d poured out his heart's deep sor- ws, no eye was dry, and every arm heart throbbed in loving sym- thy. It was a real reunion of the ther's children in the Father's esence.

Very impressive was the confi- nce of all in future. It held no ubt. Such expressions as: 'We e going to have a revival;" "We ll build a church;" "We are ex- cting an outpouring of the Holy ost," fell from the lips of every eacher. The presiding elder said at he had pledged the Winona dis- ct to pay its assessments in full, d every charge represented pledged lf to raise all its assessments, and much as possible besides.

The preaching was spiritual and lying. Bishop Galloway's Twen- h Century address, delivered on day night, held a large audience spellbound. Bro. Burrough's preached od old-fashioned revival sermon. r. Park's sermon on the 'Four-fold eal" was like the droppings of ney, full of sweetness and comfort. st of all, though, was Bro. Mit- ell's fearless and powerful sermon fore the communion. The power the Holy Ghost was upon him; d without the fear of man, but rtheless in tenderness and love, rebuked the social evils of our e. Among the thoughtful ad- esses from the lay delegates, one of best was that of Bro. Pollard, a ng lawyer of Greenwood. Among er things he said: "If yon preach- are going to teach us that card ying and dancing are wrong, then not allow people who engage in practices to teach in your Sun- -schools. If yon will employ ple who do these things to teach Bible to children, then do not ch to us that such practices are ng."

he attendance was small. Out of ety-three delegates less than ty were present. Three charges e not represented. Bro. Mitchell arked to me in conversation: "If who were absent had come, what war this Conference might have o for the district! It would have mplished then what I hoped it ht."

rethren, we expect our presiding r to be at every Quarterly Con- nce, and he has the same right to ct us all to be present at the rict Conference. A strong reso- on was adopted urging that every her and lay delegate attend the District Conference. This reso- n, my conversation with Bro. bell, and the great good the ing did me, strengthened and lished my determination, already ed, never to miss a District Con- nce while I served as a Methodist rant.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT, STRONG STATION, JUNE 28 TO JULY 1.

PROGRAMME.

THURSDAY, 9 A M

1. Why Can Not the Spirit and Methods of the Modern Public Graded School Be Transferred to the Sunday-school?—F. J. McDonnell, Dr. J. S. Stanley, R. M. Evans.

2. How Can Sunday-schools Make Larger Use of the Drill and Training of the Christian Teacher of the Public School?—Prof. T. Connell, J. W. Anderson, J. E. Carradine.

3. How Can Our Sunday-schools Divest Themselves of Incompetent Teachers, and Replace Them with Competent Ones?—E. P. Craddock, W. C. Cowder, S. B. Myers.

4. Why Do Parents Make the Secular Public School a Vital Matter in Their Homes, and at the Same Time Treat the Sunday-school with Indifference?—W. G. Sykes, J. C. Burdine, T. Porter.

5. Why Are Children Imbued with a Laudable Emulation in Public School Exercises, and Little, or None, at Sunday-school?—G. S. Sanders, P. A. Dulin, J. C. Lowe.

6. Why Are Children Required to Prepare and Know Their Lessons in the Secular Schools, and at the Same Time Are Permitted to Read Them from the Open Pages in Sunday-school?—J. W. Bell, S. B. Harkey, Asa Watson.

FRIDAY.

1. The Spiritual State of the Church—J. W. Bell.

2. The Missionary Movements of our Church—S. B. Myers.

3. To What Extent, and How Can the District Be Made the Unit in Methodism?—H. P. Crowe, J. W. Anderson.

4. The Epworth League a Help to the Young People of the Church—J. A. Leech.

5. The Obligation of the Church to Educate—R. Wilkinson.

6. The Necessity for More Liberal Contributions to Support the Institutions of the Church—J. W. Raper.

In each of the six subjects for the District Conference proper, the leaders here appointed will arrange suitable topics and speakers. I trust all will be prepared for a profitable and interesting discussion of the topics submitted.

The following are the Committees on Examination:

For License to Preach and Recommendation on Trial—J. W. Anderson, F. J. McDonnell, E. P. Craddock.

Recommendation for Deacon's and Elder's Orders—K. M. Harrison, R. M. Evans, W. A. Bowlin.

The opening sermon will be preached Wednesday night by Rev. H. P. Crowe.

FROM THE WORK.

SOUTH VICKSBURG.

The little church here has had many ups and downs; and when it was left without a preacher at Conference, you may imagine the discouraged feelings of its members. But when I was appointed there, and made my first effort among them, there was rejoicing and gladness on every hand, and new vows and promises were made to work more faithfully for the Master. So from the first God smiled upon us, and has been adding blessings upon blessings.

Our Sunday-school has increased to an enrollment of 75, with a regular attendance of 50. The Children's Day exercises, which were held June 3, proved to be a grand success and were greatly enjoyed by all. The collection on that day amounted to $5.14.

The old class meeting has been revived and feelings of old-time religion are being stirred in the hearts of all.

We are planning for a meeting to begin on June 17, in which we will have Bros. W. H. and J. T. Lewis to assist us, and we are expecting a great revival. We feel the need of it, and all have been and are praying for success. We ask the prayers of all the brethren that South Vicksburg Church may receive such an outpouring of God's Spirit that it will soon be strong enough to be self-sustaining.

The little church at Redwood, 10 miles north of Vicksburg, has been placed on the charge with South Vicksburg, and we preach there every third Sunday. I have been with them two Sundays and have never been treated more royally anywhere: have never preached to a more appreciative audience, and have never seen a better field to work in than at Redwood. The white population is small, it is true; but there are enough there to form and maintain a good society, and pay their share of the preacher's salary. We have organized a Sunday-school with about 20 on roll, which bids to be prosperous. Pray for us, brethren.

PONTOTOC, MISS.

As it has been sometime since anything from the Pontotoc work, Holly Springs district, has appeared in your columns, I take the liberty to mention some of the evidences of improvement now visible in our part of the moral vineyard. In the first place, we count ourselves most fortunate in having as our pastor so able, zealous and consecrated a minister as the Rev. M. D Fly, who is now serving his first year on this work. Bro. Fly is in high favor not only with his own church and people, but with members of other denominations and the public generally. His preaching is of a very high order, his sermons abounding in spiritual truths most happily and beautifully expressed. His services are always seasons of great rejoicing and spiritual uplifting, and to young and old he is the favored bearer of good tidings. We hope to be able to hold Bro. Fly with us for the full period permitted under the laws of our church. Under his skillful and encouraging management we have repaired and repainted the parsonage; have increased our assessment for pastor's salary; have revived many of the hitherto dormant energies of the church, and have taken on new life in all the departments of church work and effort. At the late District Conference, held at Hickory Flat, our charge made the best financial showing of any charge in the district. Methodism in the old town of Pontotoc is on the up grade, and we hope ere long to reach the point where our charge will cease to be regarded as an uninviting field, but will be known far and wide as a veritable center of Methodist force and influence and a most desirable pastorate. For much of this improvement we have to thank our pastor, whose influence has been wholly for good.

LAYMAN.

June 5, 1900.

"Look out!" cried the captain, as the canal-boat was passing under a low bridge. A Frenchman immediately put his head out of the cabin window to look, and got a severe blow. Rubbing his head ruefully, he cried: "Why do these Yankees call look out when they mean look in?"

Look out for your health means look in. For the secret of health is within you. Germs are in the air you breathe and in the water you drink, but if your blood is pure and your stomach sound the germs can find no permanent lodgement.

To keep the blood and stomach in sound health or to re-establish them in a healthy condition when they are diseased, no medicine is so effective as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It purifies the blood, cleanses the system of waste and poisonous substances, increases the activity of the blood-making glands, and invigorates the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition.

"I can say honestly and candidly that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the grandest medicine ever compounded for purifying the blood," writes Miss Annie Wells, of Fergusson's Wharf, Isle of Wight Co., Va. "I suffered terribly with rheumatism, and pimples on the skin, and swelling in my knees and feet so that I could not walk. I spent about twenty dollars, paying doctors' bills, but received no benefit. A year or two ago I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription,' and am entirely cured."

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLICURE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1900.

A DEFECTIVE IDEAL.

The chief and almost the only value that education has in the eyes of a great many people in this utilitarian age is its success-winning, money-making power. Animated by an ardent and, to a certain extent, laudable ambition to achieve fame and fortune, multitudes of young men are laboring hard in school and college to obtain sufficient intellectual training to enable them to get on well in the world, and outstrip their competitors in the race for gold. On every hand boys and girls are growing up with the notion instilled into their minds that an education is to be coveted and strived for merely as a means to large success in business, to the sure and rapid coining of dollars.

Any system of teaching that fosters the idea that the sole function of education is to furnish an easy and genteel means of making a living is radically defective. While one of the prime objects of school training undoubtedly is to increase the breadwinning capacity of the individual, and to enable him to make the most of his powers and opportunities, we must beware of degrading education into what the Germans call a mere "bread-and-butter science." Unquestionably a strong tendency of this very nature exists among us, and unless it is strenuously resisted, there is grave danger that a large per cent. of the boys and girls who attend the schools of our land will be so thoroughly permeated by the secular, sordid, mercenary spirit as to be incapable of entertaining pure and lofty ideals of life, or of performing noble deeds.

Are we to believe that education has no higher mission than to enable its possessor to be more efficiently selfish? Is it to be tested solely by its gainful power? Are esthetics and the moralities to be left out of account in the acquisition of knowledge? Are we to conclude that there is small advantage in teaching the young to appreciate "the true, the beautiful, and the good"? Is character to be made secondary to commercialism? Such unfortunate results will follow unless spiritual and intellectual culture go hand in hand. If the youth of our country are to be saved from the blighting effects of mammonism and materialism, they must be taught in our schools that character is the true end of education, the crowning glory of life.

Some time ago the distinguished Frenchman, M. Brunitiere, editor of the Revue des Deux Mondes, said: "Education as it is now given seems to have for its object only to assure the victory of the individual over social forces. . . . What shall we do in this crowd of men to each of whom has been said ever since childhood, 'Be foremost'!" His remarks are almost as applicable to the educational tendency in America as in France. M. Brunitiere's conclusion is that since human society is founded on mutual sacrifice, it is absolutely necessary to introduce this truth into our educational system, which can be done, not by science or culture, but only by the aid of religion.

As Dr. Lyman Abbott forcefully says: "How it makes a man's blood tingle sometimes with indignation to hear the discussion: Is a college education an advantage to a business man? and to hear the question discussed as though the end of education was to make simply a successful business man. As though the question was, If you go through college, can you make more money? Take God out of life, take immortality out of life, take the character that is founded on God and immortality out of life, and then education does become a mere bread-and-butter system: then we shall no longer be making men and women in our schools and colleges; we shall be making doctors or lawyers or teachers or plumbers or carpenters—anything but men and women—and the education itself will lose the very centre."

Culture of itself is powerless to produce the noblest type of manhood or womanhood. It can polish the manners and sharpen the intellect, but it can not sweeten the disposition, nor deliver from vice.

If we are to successfully counteract the godless and selfish secularism that characterizes much of the education of our times, we must strengthen and enlarge our denominational schools, where young men and women are trained both in head and heart, and make them as great beacon lights, whose illuminating and salutary beams shine far and wide. We would by no means affirm that State schools are wholly destitute of wholesome moral influences, but nowhere are these influences so positive and powerful and constant as in our denominational schools. Evidently, then, we can not do a wiser thing at this time than to strongly re-enforce our educational institutions.

COMMENCEMENT SUNDAY AT MILLSAPS.

Sunday was a red-letter day at Millsaps. Dr. Hoss' sermon was a veritable masterpiece. The audience were not merely pleased; they were delighted, they were edified. A profound and, we are sure, a lasting impression was produced. Dr. Morris' sermon, though of a totally different type, was also a great one. It was strikingly original and thought-provoking. Noble aspirations were stirred in youthful breasts, which in the years to come will prove an incentive to high endeavor and lofty achievement.

BELHAVEN COMMENCEMENT.

Bating the rainy weather, Belhaven had a delightful commencement. Dr. Murrah's sermon on Sunday fully met public expectation, and that is saying a great deal. Bro. Wilkinson's address was a most admirable one, and was delivered with fine oratorical effect. The various exercises showed that the institution is doing fine work, both in the literary department and in the special departments—music, art, etc. The outlook for the next session is exceedingly hopeful.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

This college closed on Wednesday, June 6, one of the best sessions it has had for years. On Sunday, June 3, Bishop Warren A. Candler preached the commencement sermon, in the College Chapel, from the text: "I am not ashamed of the power of the gospel of Jesus Christ." Any one who has had the privilege of hearing him need not be told that the sermon was clear and strong, deep and high, satisfying to the mind and inspiring to the soul.

Sunday night Rev. J. M. Henry preached the Y. M. C. A. sermon in the Methodist Church, from the text: "Put on the whole armor of God." His exposition of the text was clear, and its application was impressed, in forcible language, upon the hearts and consciences of the youthful Christians present.

On Monday the audience had another treat in the literary address by Bishop Candler. This writer could not be present, but many thought it better than the sermon. Monday, at 4 P. M., the exercises of the Preparatory Department took place, which consisted of a contest for the Pharr Medal for Declamation. While all spoke well, the prize was awarded to Master Ben Taylor, of Jackson, La. At night there was another declamatory contest for the Freshman for the medal offered by the faculty; and President Cooper's little son, Ellis, by his naturalness, voice, and effectiveness, won the prize.

On Tuesday morning the Union Literary Society held their exercises and delivered his graduating pin to Jos. H. Slaughter. At 11 A. M. the alumni exercises were held. The annual orator was not present, but short speeches were made by some of the alumni, and a poem entitled "Ideals" was read by Mr. Leu Wailes. We heard this last commended for its poetic feeling and expression. At 4 P. M. the Franklin Institute delivered pins to A. A. Bernard, R. G. Holcombe and I. D. Wall, Jr. Addresses were made in the U. L. S. by I. W. Cooper, Jr., and A. J. Price, and in the F. I. by W. D. Chin and F. O. Adams, Jr. Trustee work prevented our attending these exercises. At 8 P. M. the oratorical contest for the McGehee Medal began. The following students contested: A. J. Price, I. W. Cooper, Jr.; L. H. Walker, W. D. Kleinschmidt, W. D. Cline and R. O. Randle. All had good speeches, but the committee thought L. H. Walker excelled.

Wednesday, June 6, was Commencement Day. The following young gentlemen received diplomas: R. G. Holcombe, B. A. Salutatorian, A. A. Bernard, B. H. Valedictorian, J. H. Slaughter, B. A.; I. D. Wall, Jr., B. S. Misses Carrie and Willie Schwing received certificates of having completed the college course, and would have received diplomas had the charter of the college allowed it. Miss Carrie Schwing carried off from the boys the honors of the class, receiving, amid great applause, the medal for highest scholarship. I. D. Wall, Jr., won the Senior Medal for Oratory. The degree of M. A. was conferred upon Prof. S. C. Schwing, he having completed the post-graduate course prescribed. The degree of D. D. was conferred on that faithful and cultured minister, Rev. A. F. Watkins, Vicksburg, Miss. Mr. J. H. Penick won the medal for excellence in English.

Centenary is not 'looking up." She got up at the call of Dr. Cooper, and began to beautify and strengthen herself some time since.

She has been beautified by improvements everywhere, in the fences, the walks, the buildings and the campus. She has been strengthened by a new mess hall, where good board at lowest rates can be had. This will be under the control next session of Prof. L. Upton and his wife.

The attendance this year has been 150, and good work has been done both in college and preparatory work.

The following were elected members of the Board of Trustees: J. M. Henry, R. H. McGimsey, H. S. Bodley and F. A. Daniels.

The Board of Trustees regretted the absence of its beloved president, Bishop J. C. Keener, to whose untiring efforts and steadfast love the college owes so much. They are endeavoring to increase the success he began, and, with prospects before them, with good hope.

Let every Methodist in Louisiana give liberally to the Twentieth Century Fund, for the largest part will go to strengthen our home colleges. Centenary for boys, and Mansfield for girls.

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES.

FRESHMAN CONTEST, JUNE 8, 1900.

The commencement exercises of Millsaps College began this morning with the Freshman contest for the Millsaps Medal for declamation. Twelve young men selected from this class by the faculty spoke for this medal.

The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. T. L. Mellen, of Forest. The following is the program as carried out:

Prayer.

C. A. Alexander—J. W. Daniels' Speech at the Dedication of the Washington Monument.

A. S. Cameron—Life.

W. F. Cook—Eulogy on Henry W. Grady.

Music.

G. L. Crosby—Farewell to the Union.

H. R. Enochs—Address of Col. Lamar to the Citizens of Richmond.

L. R. Featherstone—Our Duties to the Republic.

Music.

J. L. Gaddis, Jr.—Eulogy on Lafayette.

O. S. Lewis—The March of Mind.

F. D. Mellen—The South and Her Problem.

Music.

W. O. Tatum—The True Grandeur of Nations.

J. J. Weaver—The Stars and Stripes.

W. L. Wood—Uncrowned Heroes.

Music.

Benediction.

The young men all acquitted themselves well, and were an honor to their class and to the college. Beautiful music was rendered by Leake's orchestra for the occasion.

The following acted as judges of the contest: Mr. W. A. Gunning, of Jackson; Rev. Chas. F. Emory, of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, and Rev. G. W. Bachman, of the North Mississippi Conference.

SOPHOMORE CONTEST.

The second day of the commencement of Millsaps was taken up with a contest for the Oscar Kearney Andrews Medal for oratory. Only members of the Sophomore class are allowed to enter this contest.

The following is the program of the occasion:

Prayer.

W. L. Duren—Heroes: Their place in History.

J. B. Howell—Does Might Make Right?

Music.

C. P. Manship—Sergeut S. Prentiss.

C. D. Potter—The March of God's New "Chosen People" through the Nineteenth Century.

Music.

C. M. Simpson—A Centennial Retrospect.

Allen Thompson—The Heritage of the Southern Youth.

Music.

R. N. Whitfield—What of China?

W. A. Williams—American Society.

Music.

Benediction.

All these speeches were original, and showed that the young men had put some careful thought and study on their subjects. Rev. T. L. Mellen, Rev. T. B. Holloman, and Mr. O. W. Tatum acted as judges.

EXPOSITION LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

I have been in Paris but two days after a seven days' tossing on the Atlantic, and have had time only for a glance at the Exposition. This glance has impressed me with nothing so much as its utter unpreparedness. Masonry, carpentry, painting, digging, carting, sweeping, dusting, sprinkling everywhere, with only here and there an exhibit complete and ready for business. The shops, restaurants and midway plaisance-like shows are, of course, ready, and are doing a more or less thriving business, and the same old features of Frenchmen, Dutchmen, Englishman and Yankees masquerading in oriental garb, and selling useless oriental gim-cracks for twice the amount they can be had for in any city of the United States, are very prominent.

The Exposition is, doubtless, as the late Mr. Barnum would say, "a monstrous aggregation," etc. It will, when completed, surpass all previous expositions in bigness and richness, and will be an admirable epitome of the past century's transcendent progress. Why should it not excel all others? The world, at least in material things, is moving fast, and what was evolution made for, if each succeeding exposition shall not outdo its predecessor?

Moreover, Paris—and I regret to say it—seems to be but a poor fourth in the export trade of the world, with England, our own country and Germany ahead of her. But she gets back at us every ten years or so by making a great exposition, and, with the prestige of her only Paris, levying tribute on all the wealth of the world. The amount of money we spend in Paris in one way and another is regrettable. Hundreds of rich American families live here in Winter, and in the south of France during the Summer. So far as I know, the only advantage gained is in better household service. Servants in France are, doubtless, more efficient, intelligent and cheaper than in the United States. But in every other comfort of living we surpass the French. At least, this is my impression after a fourth visit to Paris, and a residence, off and on, of several months.

The reports that have been so extensively spread about the crowded condition of the city, and the high cost of living, are misleading. I do not find the prices at hotels or pensions (boarding-houses) much higher than usual. They are, I think, a little lower than at the Exposition of 1878. Anyone, according to his taste, purse and endurance, can get board and lodging from one dollar up. I am lodged at No. 45 Rue de Clichy, about two miles from the Exposition, in a pension with steam-heat, elevator and electric lights, at a cost of 15 francs ($3) per day. The same accommodations would cost as much in most American cities. Before I selected this place I inquired the rates, and looked at rooms in many other localities. Some were higher, some lower, and I speak from personal observation when I say there is abundant room here, and at reasonable rates.

To say that the Americans here directly in charge of American exhibits are angry is to draw it mild. In spite of the utmost effort, they can not get the French authorities to complete the buildings for their exhibits. There are lime, dust, mortar and rubbish everywhere, and only two or three French workmen where there should be twenty. Meanwhile the French authorities are urging the Americans to open up their displays. The Americans say: "No, not until these buildings are completed and cleaned. We will not subject our fine wares and delicate food-stuffs to deterioration from dust and mud and lime." After much prayer and imprecation the American Commissioners finally resorted to law, with the result of great acceleration on the part of the French. The buildings, it is expected, will now be completed in two weeks.

There is a sinister report that the American National Building is insecure, unsafe, and that if Sousa's band should play there, it will be with peril to the assemblage.

The American National Building is eclipsed by that of Italy, Roumania, and by other countries that have not one tithe our wealth. It was vanity and folly to build a national building here, anyhow. It does no good, teaches nothing, brings nothing. It can not fill the wandering American with pride when he sees it, for he is always overflowing with that stuff, and ready to tell you that while we have no volcano like Vesuvius, we have a Niagara Falls that can put it out in five minutes.

Just at present the American corn propaganda seems to afford our French friends some amusement. A kitchen has been established to prepare corn-bread, corn-fritters, etc., as a free lunch, and thus recommend the use of corn and increase the demand for it. At the exhibits of all the countries there is a guard or soldier standing or walking in the uniform of his country. The nations have not forgotten to select soldiers of good appearance for this service. Mr. Hugo Kranse, of Milwaukee, a veritable Herculer, six feet five inches tall in his uniform, ruddy and handsome, is on guard at the American corn-bread kitchen, and if any foreigner is skeptical as to the effect of corn as a diet, he is pointed to this corn-fed American, and Mr. Kranse can tell them in good French what corn has done for him.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss., EDITOR.

We have received a brief outline of the work done at the session of the Epworth League Chautauqua, held in Birmingham, Ala., beginning May 25. This is the first meeting of the kind, and from this brief account we judge it to be an excellent plan. Bishop Galloway was present, and he is reported to have said, "It is the thing exactly for which we have been looking." This is good authority, and makes it worth our time, at least, to investigate the Chautauqua plan, and if it is an improvement on what we have already, let us try it. Bro. F. P. Culver, State League president of Alabama, says it is the plan, without doubt.

It is to be hoped the Southern Epworth League Conference, to be held in Atlanta, Ga., July 26 to 29, may have a full representation from throughout the connection. Let Mississippi and Louisiana have many bright young men and women to represent them on this great occasion.

The Epworth League is not a literary society, nor a missionary society, nor yet a prayer meeting. We must remember that we are peculiarly an Epworth League, and we must do our work, as such, regularly. Some would make believe that the League is to take up the cause of missions as a specialty. We must be very careful at this point we shall not become one-sided. It is impossible to be a good Leaguer, and at the same time not be in full sympathy with the cause of missions. It is to have its legitimate place as a sub-division of the Devotional Department. We can not load the League down with the missionary cause, nor make of it a missionary society. There are other things besides missions, and the League must have both eyes open for the general interest of the church, without discrimination against any.

A sharp point was given to a sentence by a speaker when he told a story of a stingy man, who, when he was asked to give something for a monument to General Washington, refused on the ground that he had Washington in his heart. "Well, then, you have got him in a tight place," said the collector.

The League at Greenville has reorganized its Literary Department and starting off well. They can not fail to succeed with Sister M. N. Montgomery, the gifted and consecrated president, in the lead.

Some of our District and State Epworth League Conferences are laboring in the false idea that it is practicably impossible to run a Conference except we have some one from another State to make speeches or sing songs. Mississippi doesn't have to send anywhere to get men to make speeches. She furnishes speakers to the world. We have a great number of men who can lead a song, but they are not going to take charge of the choir at a Conference without an invitation. Let us away with the idea that some one has to come from Texas, Tennessee, or anywhere else under heaven, to help run a League Conference. We are always glad to see the brethren from a distance (provided they want to see us bad enough to pay their fare), but we have never felt that they were an absolute necessity. The money necessary to secure speakers and singers would do much more effectual service if it were distributed among the State officers, to be used in their departments.

Subscribe for the Epworth Era. Don't wait. Let the Leaguers of Mississippi contribute their pro rata to make our organ self-sustaining, and its editor-in-chief is a Mississippian.

"That which we shall gather is that which we sow;
Seed-time and harvest alternately flow.
When we have finished with time 'twill be known
How we have gathered and how we have sown."

LOUISIANA.

REV. H. R. SINGLETON, Ruston, La., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Ye editor is assisting in a meeting at Farmerville this week. The League here is composed of fine young people. Bro. Thomasson, their pastor, is a Leaguer man from start to finish.

The State officers are writing on official stationery very nicely gotten up. When you get a letter from them you ought to answer.

Bro. W. E. Akin, the pastor at Gibsland, reports a promising League organized at Foster's Chapel at Athens, La. Charter members number 13. J. T. Baker is president; W. H. Pace, Miss Annie Pace, and A. D Pate are vice-presidents; Miss Gertrude Baker, secretary, and E. R. Bridges, treasurer. Bro. Nicholson, the district president, is to lecture to them soon.

Bro. J. M. Alford, pastor at Leesville, writes: "We organized a League here yesterday (May 27) with 33 members. Our people, though inexperienced in the work, are taking hold in earnest, and the prospects are that we shall have a very successful League. We would have organized earlier in the year, but had no house of worship. Now we have a handsome church, and have just had a good revival." We would like to have the secretary send a list of the officers to the editor.

The editor addressed a meeting of the young people of Douglas on Sunday afternoon, May 27. A live League used to be here, but it is now a dead one. About 12 of them pledged themselves to its resurrection at the close of the address, and a meeting was appointed for the next week, the result of which we have not learned.

We hope the State officers will bend every energy toward organizing as many Leagues as possible, reorganizing decayed ones, and pushing the Holston Plan to a successful end. We believe they will. Work as well as honor is the lot of a successful League officer. A systematic campaign of education ought to be carried on by correspondence, lectures, and in every other possible way.

And now for Atlanta! Who is going? If you have a trip planned for this Summer, make that the trip. Louisiana ought to have a fine delegation. The editor proposes to go if he has to pull fodder all the rest of the Summer to pay for the trip. Can't you by some hook or crook (honest crooks, of course) make enough to take the trip? You will never regret it, we are sure.

The editor has wasted a lot of postage writing to the Leagues for news.

A course of lectures in and for your League will be a fine thing for them this Summer and Fall. Our third vice-presidents are not as active, as a general thing, as they might be.

We are delighted to hear of that Southern Convention. It will be a fine thing for our Southern Leagues if they will make use of it, as we believe they will. Let every Leaguer that contemplates a trip this Summer take it in the latter part of July, and spend it at the Southern League Conference.

The Homer Epworth League is a fine band of enthusiastic Epworth Leaguers, who will do anything and take any part assigned them. Our League devotional meetings are advertised each week in the local newspaper, the editors giving us the desired space, and our vice-president writing a synopsis of the subject for each issue. These meetings are well attended, and much interest is manifested. The Second department has been doing good work. Recently that committee secured many signers to the petition regarding the Sunday Law, which petition is to be forwarded to our representatives at Baton Rouge. The reading course is being circulated among our members, and we are planning for an evening with Longfellow in the near future. A Junior League has recently been organized with 32 members. Miss Della McClendon is the president, and Miss Nora Tatum, secretary. Miss Kate Featherston is their superintendent, and we are expecting great things from them. We would be glad to hear through the League column from more of the Leagues, each giving some suggestions that might be helpful to us.

COMMITTEE OF ONE HUNDRED ON INDIA FAMINE RELIEF.

INDIA'S APPEAL.

Famine, from lack of rain, is now smiting sixty millions of our fellow-beings. At this moment death by sheer hunger and thirst threatens one-sixth of that number. Thousands are starving each twenty-four hours. In that stricken land the heavens are as iron and the earth as brass.

Birds of the air drop lifeless from the burning sky. Hundreds of thousands of cattle have already perished. In the absence of food and water, fiercest animals let go their hatreds, and helpless lie down together to die. The decaying bodies of men and beasts pollute both plains and rivers.

And the woe has not yet reached its worst. Face to face with even such horrors still stand countless little children, and women, and men, whom food will save. Thank God, relief may almost instantly pass, by cable, from this land of plenty to that India of starvation. Accordingly, only gifts of money are solicited.

What, then, shall we do? What will you do? For our answer we are clearly responsible to both God and man. Ought not America to send quickly at least a million dollars? In the famine districts are efficient, devoted men and women, not only American, but also European, who are already engaged in the actual rescue, but who are pleading for larger supplies. Surely such supplies can be provided, and yet the customary gifts to long-established agencies for the uplifting of the people of India not be at all lessened.

Meanwhile, the Government of India is organizing relief on a scale unapproached in the history of the world. Both treasure and life are given without stint in the saving work. On May 14th the number of starving aided officially was 5,795,000. That official daily aid will be steadfastly continued and increased, yet it will be unable to keep pace with the awful need. The death-rate is by far the greatest in the native provinces, where the Government has least influence and control. Only the united efforts of all the humane, the co-operating good-will of all the nations will suffice.

Messrs. Brown Brothers & Company, the well-known bankers, 59 Wall street, have freely consented to receive and acknowledge all gifts sent to them. Every expressed wish of donors will be faithfully carried out, and the Committee, on its own part, will earnestly seek the best, most efficient, most economical agencies for the distribution of undesignated funds.

Together and at once let us move to the rescue. We can feed the starving. There is not a minute to be lost. From two to five cents a day will save a life.

Board of Missions.

In addition to the regular business of the annual session the Board took action in regard to a memorial from the delegates of the M. E. Church, South, to the Ecumenical Conference of Missions at New York. In this memorial the Board was asked to call a General Conference of the Methodists of the South in the special interest of missions. The ratio of representation shall be such as to bring together about one thousand delegates. A committee appointed by the Board reported the following recommendations, which were adopted:

"1. That an Executive Committee be appointed by this Board, consisting of the Bishops in charge of foreign mission fields for the ensuing year, including the island of Cuba, the Secretaries of this Board, and one representative each from the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, the Woman's Home Mission Society, the Sunday-school and Epworth League Boards, Boards of Education and Church Extension, these members to be chosen by the Secretaries of this Board.

"2. That this General Conference shall be wholly engaged with the subject of missions, and shall include in its schedule all the branches of missionary work enterprised by our church—that is, both foreign and home missions, including also the work which our women are doing at home and abroad.

"3. That the place of holding the Conference should be a city of considerable size, with a fairly central location, and one, if possible, which will raise enough money to make the meeting thoroughly successful on its local side."

Street Incident.

"My Dear Sir," exclaimed Lawyer Bartholomew Livington, meeting the Rev. Dr. Archibald Windham on the village street, "What does this mean? I thought you were laid up with all sorts of bad diseases!"

"And so I was," replied the reverend gentleman, "I had an attack of indigestion and from that time on my whole system has been in a disordered condition until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla which has put me on my feet and cured all my stomach troubles."

"I don't doubt it," said the lawyer. "This same medicine cured my wife of rheumatism and my little girl of scrofula. When they say it's the best medicine money can buy, they only tell the truth."

"Yes, yes, so they do," replied the minister, and the two passed on.

Something Fresh and Wholesome.

In an extended editorial the Texas Christian Advocate says of "Christus Auctor:" "We read the volume from back to back, and pronounce it a wise deliverance upon the subjects treated. Bishop Candler is an original thinker, and his language is in keeping with the movement of his thought. He has an analytical mind, and he goes down to the bottom of things. To read after him is to get something fresh and wholesome."

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

The Saving of Money by the use of Royal Baking Powder is considerable. Royal is economical, because it possesses more leavening power and goes further.

Royal saves also because it always makes fine, light, sweet food; never wastes good flour; butter and eggs.

More important still is the saving in health. Royal Baking Powder adds anti-dyspeptic qualities to the food.

There is no baking powder so economical in practical use, no matter how little others may cost, as the Royal

"Barred Out of Home."

A little back from the country roadway a few miles out from one of our large Southern cities stands the ruin of a magnificent mansion, once the scene of a pathetic life-drama, which though years have passed, yet thrills the heart of one who witnessed the closing scene.

Well is remembered the wild tempest-

nous night with rain driving in sheety torrents across the high iron-spiked wall, and beating, as it seemed, almost like bayonets against the barred and bolted gateway. And there beneath the frowning arch, shelterless and homeless in the pitiless storm that had driven strong men to cover, the fierce lightning flashes that came crackling through the night revealed the frail figure of a delicate young woman with face upturned to heaven and clenched hands uplifted in mortal agony; while her wail of misery penetrating even the awful voice of the storm could be heard in the oft-reprated refrain: "My home! My home! Barred out of home!"

She had been a bright ambitious girl starting hopefully abroad to cultivate her naturally beautiful voice, determined to make a European fame for herself as a successful singer. But circumstances were against her. Unfair rivalries robbed her of the best opportunities. Despite her undoubted talent failure followed failure; she grew morbidly sensitive and wrote less and less often to the fond parents whose greatest happiness was to supply her every need. She was proud: "I will not write again" she said one day, "until I have succeeded." Weeks lapsed into months. Suddenly misfortune and death fell upon the grand old homestead. The young girl giving up the unequal struggle came back across the sea to the death-stricken, bolted, barred, deserted house all unaware of the swift disaster which had left her penniless, orphaned and alone.

"Barred out of home!" This is the sad refrain ringing through the memories of that pathetic scene. "Barred out of home" is the thought that well may echo through the hearts of many a woman who seems to all outward appearance surrounded with every household comfort, that the heart could wish. Alas, health is lacking. Home is no home to the poor sick broken down woman who has no strength, health or energy to enjoy it. Disease bolts and bars a woman outside of the doors of true home happiness as completely as if she had no home.

Countless thousands of weakened, weary, disease-racked women all over these United States have had the gates of a healthy, vigorous home happiness thrown wide open to them by the life-renewing, blood vitalizing "Golden Medical Discovery" of Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. It lifts the enfeebled constitution out of the quagmire of disease and sets it bodily upon the firm ground of health.

It reaches deep down into the system and quickens the inner forces of the nutritive organism giving the digestive functions power to create healthy blood, strength-making and nerve-building.

In a grateful letter to Dr. Pierce, Mrs. Carrie Shriver, of Texanna, Cherokee Nat., Ind. Ty., writes: "Six years ago I was taken sick with what the doctors called neuralgia of the heart and stomach. I was given up to die. When it seemed that all life and health was lost, a lady persuaded me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Favorite Prescription.' I consented, and now, after taking six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four of 'Favorite Prescription,' I am well, can do all my work, washing and all, and take care of my baby two months old."

Don't accept any substitutes for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery or Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The shadow of success is imitation. Imitation remedies don't cure, any more than the imitation banquets of the stage feed the hungry. You want a cure. Don't accept the shadow for the substance and "spend your money for that which is not bread."

Every woman should own a copy of Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser." It will be sent absolutely free, paper-bound, for 21 one-cent stamps, to pay the cost of mailing only. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y. LESSONS.

From everything our Savior saw,
Lessons of wisdom he would draw.
The clouds, the colors in the sky;
The gentle breeze that whispers by;
The fields all white with moving corn;
The lilies that the vale adorn;
The reed that trembles in the wind;
The tree where none its fruit can find;
The sliding sand, the flinty rock
That bears unmoved the tempest's shock;
The thorns that on the earth abound;
The tender grass that clothes the ground;
The little birds that fly in air;
The sheep that need the shepherd's care;
All from His lips some truth proclaim,
To us who know their Maker's name.

THE LEGEND OF TWO SACKS.

There is an ancient legend which tells of an old man who was in the habit of traveling from place to place with a sack handing behind his back and another in front of him.

What do you think these sacks were for? Well, I will tell you.

In the one behind him he tossed all the kind deeds of his friends, where they were quite hid from view, and he soon forgot all about them.

In the one hanging round his neck, under his chin, he popped all the sins which the people he knew committed; and these he was in the habit of turning over and looking at as he walked along, day by day.

One day, to his surprise, he met a man wearing, just like himself, a sack in front and one behind. He went up to him and began feeling his sack.

"What have you got there, my friend?" he asked, giving the sack in front a good poke.

"Stop, don't do that! "cried the other, "you'll spoil my good things."

"What things?" asked Number One.

"Why, my good deeds," answered Number Two. "I keep them all in front of me, where I can always see them and take them out and air them. See, here is the half-crown I put in the plate last Sunday, and the shawl I gave to the beggar-girl, and the mittens I gave the crippled boy, and the penny I gave to the organ-grinder, and here is even the benevolent smile I bestowed on the crossing-sweeper at my door, and—"

"And what's in the sack behind you?" asked the first traveler, who thought his companion's good deeds would never come to an end.

"Tut, tut," said Number Two; "there is nothing I care to look at in there. That sack holds what I call my little mistakes."

"It seems to me that your sack of mistakes is fuller than the other," said Number One.

Number Two frowned. He had never thought that, though he had put what he called his "mistakes" out of his sight, everyone else could see them still. An angry reply was on his lips, when happily a third traveler—also carrying two sacks, as they were—overtook them.

The first two men at once pounced on the stranger.

"Let's see your goods," said the other.

"With all my heart," quoth the stranger; "for I have a goodly assortment and I like to show them. This sack," said he, pointing to the one hanging in front of him, "is full of the good deeds of others."

"It must be a pretty heavy weight to carry," observed Number One.

"There you are mistaken," replied the stranger; "the weight is only such as sails are to a ship or wings are to an eagle. It helps me onward."

"Well, your sack behind can be of little good to you," said Number Two, "for it appears to be empty, and I see it has a great hole in the bottom of it."

"I did it on purpose," said the stranger, "for all the evil I hear of people I put in there and it falls through and is lost. So you see, I have no weight to drag me down or backward."—Independent.

KID-GLOVE AND COAL-OIL MEN.

Mr. Frank Thomson, the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who died a few months ago, was known as one of the foremost of living railway managers. There was no part of the business with which he was not familiar, from the control of its great moneyed interests to the fitting of a screw into an engine.

A wealthy man once brought his son to him, saying: "My son has gone through college. Can you make a place for him where he will succeed?"

Mr. Thomson was silent a moment, and then said: "That depends on whether he wants to take a kid-glove course or a coal-oil course."

"What do you mean?"

"If he takes a kid-glove course, he goes in as a clerk, to perform a certain amount daily of writing for which he will be paid a salary. In the other course he goes into the shops and learns the whole business, from the lowest drudgery up. When he has finished, he will know his trade, a valuable one, but his hands will be stained with coal-oil."

Mr. Thomson himself, when a boy, chose the "coal-oil course." He worked four years in the car-shops at Altoona, barely earning his living, but learning the mechanical details of the business.

Thomas A. Scott, the famous railway manager, was a friend of the young man, but gave him no help, leaving him to work his own way. At the end of the four years he sent for him and gave him a responsible position on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Civil War broke out that year. Colonel Scott was appointed Assistant Secretary of War, the government believing that his experience in the railway work would have taught him how to handle in transportation great bodies of troops. A problem of peculiar difficulty of this kind arose.

"I know of but one man who can manage this business," said Colonel Scott to the Cabinet. "He is not here."

"Send for him, then," said Mr. Stanton.

The next evening Frank Thomson, then only twenty years of age, appeared.

"Do you mean to tell me," cried Mr. Stanton, somewhat sneeringly, "that we have waited twenty-four hours for this red-headed stripling?"

"He will do the work," replied Scott, quietly. And he did it.

Mr. Thomson was probably peculiarly qualified by nature for his especial business; but there is a strong prejudice among American boys against work which involves manual labor, and a preference for clerical duties as being more refined.

It is a fatal mistake. Great prizes now await the thoroughly equipped, practical man in work which lie outside of mere book-learning, and the boy is wise who grapples with this work with his bare hands and tries to win them. —Youth's Companion.

MAKING ONE'S SELF NECESSARY.

"If I were only necessary to somebody," lamented a girl the other day, "I should have something to live for. But if I were to drop out of the world to-morrow it would not make any real difference to anyone."

"But there is your father," said an older friend.

"Yes; but he is always at his business by day and often out of the city. Jane, our old cook, does the housekeeping, and he really could get along just as well without me. He is so wrapped up in his business anyway that he scarcely notices he has a daughter."

"Is Jane's housekeeping good?" asked the other.

"Not very; when father has to entertain his friends he takes them to the club—but he would do that, anyway."

"Well," said her friend, "you are evidently making yourself as unnecessary as possible, my dear child."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that you are avoiding every opportunity you have—and they are many—of making yourself necessary to your father. You let a servant make the home instead of doing it yourself. You take the attitude that your father doesn't notice you when you ought to be noticing him instead. If I were you, Mabel—and I do not say this unkindly—I would put away all thought of self and study the situation entirely from his side.

"I would make him so comfortable and his table so dainty that he would be proud to bring his friends there, as I know he used to do. I would show myself loving and responsive always, even though your father is an undemonstrative man; I should even interest myself in his business since he is so absorbed in it.

"But I think you would soon find that he has an interest in other things, too, that you have never tried to meet. I believe that in six months, by these simple means, you would make yourself so necessary to your father," with a twinkle of fun in her eye, "that Jane could never hope to equal you."

But Mabel did not smile. Truth is not always comfortable to hear. "I've had a new view of myself in your looking-glass, Mrs. Dashiel," she said; "and I don't believe I know how to be necessary to everybody. But at any rate I've got my eyes open to the reasons why."—Forward.

THE WARM-HEARTED WORLD.

The last time that Frances E. Willard spoke to a Washington audience she told of a Chicago boot-black who, with his kit on his shoulder and a package of newspapers under his arm, stopped at the call of a man with a club foot. He worked away at the man's shoes, giving them as fine a polish as he could, and, when the job was done, the man threw him double pay, saying: "No change; I made you more work than most folks do."

Quick as a flash the little fellow handed back half of the money, saying with eyes full of earnest sympathy: "Oh, mister, I couldn't make money out of your trouble."

Not far from Washington there lived a boy who has to bear the heavy burden of deformity, but so bravely does he bear it that he is the very heart of his home, the brightest and cheeriest and most helpful one in the household.

A while ago he went out and hunted up a situation for himself so that he might pay his share of the family expenses.

Somebody asked him: "Don't you find it rather disagreeable, going about as you have to now?"

He looked up with his bright, flashing smile, and answered quickly: "Oh, no: everybody is kind to a fellow in my fix," with a slight gesture toward his back.

THE BROOM CURE.

In an article on "The Lady Who Does Her Own Work," Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe dwells on the value of housework in giving the very healthiest form of exercise, and for the average woman shows it to be far preferable to the work of the masseurs, who, even in those days, more than thirty years ago, seem to have found plenty of patients.

"Would it not be quite as cheerful and less expensive a process," she asks, "if young girls from early life developed the muscles in sweeping, dusting, ironing, rubbing furniture, and all the multiplied domestic processes which our grandmothers knew of?" And then adds: "I will venture to say that our grandmothers in a week went over every movement that any gymnast has invented, and went over them to some productive purpose, too."

Here is a hint which women with thin arms would do well to take. It is said to be really a fact that Clara Louise Kellogg, the singer, when a young girl, was much annoyed by the attenuated appearance of her arms when she began to don evening dress at her crowded concerts. Some one recommended a brisk use of the broom, which advice she followed, and soon had a round, plump member as the reward of her labor. If a thin, listless girl, with a dull eye and stare, can by any means be persuaded to try the "broom cure," she will be astonished to find what a beautifier it really is.—Selected.

God wants our life to be a song. He has written the music for us in his Word and in the duties that come to us in our places and relations in life. The things we ought to do are the notes set upon the staff. To make our life beautiful music we must be obedient and submissive. Any disobedience is the singing of a false note and yields discord.—J. Excursions.

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

HAMMOND—Mrs. EFFIE HAMMOND was born Jan. 3, 1828, and died at her home on Pearl river, ten miles above Columbia, April 30, 1900.

Sister Hammond was twice married. Her first marriage was to Mr. Samuel McDonald, who died during the late Civil War, leaving her a widow with three children, two of whom are still living. Her second marriage was with Mr. Walter N. Hammond, April 16, 1866. From this union there were two children, both girls, who survive her. She was left a widow again by the death of Bro. Hammond, April, 1888. By energy and wisdom she was enabled to support and raise her children well. She was a good business woman; always prompt in business matters. She joined the M. E. Church, South, while quite young, at Lenoir's Church, in Marion county. She had been a member of the church when she died for over fifty years. She was faithful and devoted to her church and her God all these years. She was a woman of fine character, widely and favorably known. Everyone I heard speak of her said she was a good Christian woman. It was the custom of that family to make every necessary preparation Saturday for attending church on Sunday; so there was no confusion Sunday morning, and no tardiness in getting to church. I never saw children more devoted to a mother, and well did she deserve this devotion. She taught them to be religious in every childhood. Her most earnest efforts were put forth in training her children, and her children are living evidences of how she succeeded. They all rise up and call her blessed. For the last few years some of her grandchildren lived with her all the time. She took great pains in learning them to pray, and to know and love good. These all revere her memory. She was a woman of much prayer. Although the busy home she would send up prayers to God.

Sister Hammond was especially kind to the sick and needy. Her children are all married and, I think, doing well. This is a sad blow to them, but they sorrow not as those that have no hope, for they have every assurance that she is at rest with her Savior in those mansions which Jesus has gone to prepare for her and all those who love and serve him. May God bless, comfort, and save each one!

W. M. WILLIAMS.

ADAMS—Mrs. IONE ADAMS was born Nov. 29, 1875, near Winnsboro, La., and died at Hickory, Miss., April 4, 1900. Her disease was acute intermittent. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in Dothl, La., at about the age of fourteen years; was married to Mr. Eugene Adams, of Deostur, Miss., March 28, 1898. Removing from Winnsboro, they came to Deostur, Miss., where they resided until September, 1899, when they made Hickory, Miss., their home, her husband being book-keeper for the Hickory Milling and Mfg. Co.

Sister Adams was received by letter into the Hickory Church, Newton charge, by the pastor, Rev. J. G. Galloway, Feb. 11, 1900. Although not permitted, in the providence of God, to be with us but a few fleeting days, it was long enough to exemplify a most beautiful Christian character, and to "adorn the doctrine of God our Savior." Her few days of patient suffering in our midst, her devotion to her husband and to the Lord, her appreciation of the visits of her pastor, and her triumphant and glorious death, bear testimony to the beauty and reality of the religion of Christ. Such faith as hers was very much like the sainted Hester Ann Rogers, whose life and memoirs she had read to her during her last days. Calling her husband to the bedside two or three nights before her death, she appeared to be very happy, and said to him she had been praying to the Lord to heal her, and seemed to think he had given her the assurance that she would be healed. Although leaving it all to his will, she was perfectly resigned. Asking her husband if he would pray with her, he, kneeling by her bedside, prayed a fervent prayer. Speaking about it afterward to the writer, he said her countenance was illuminated with such a beautiful expansion as he never saw before. Among the last words she said was, "Tell Auntie, tell Eugene, tell everybody I am so happy."

HER PHYSICIAN.

BEASLEY—Bro. J. S. BEASLEY was born May 6, 1826, and died Feb. 11, 1900. He married, first, Miss Martha Millsaps, and after her death he was again married to Miss Martha L. Chadick. When quite a young man he professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, and was ever true to his vows.

Bro. Beasley was a strong character, a devoted Christian, a loyal member of the church. He was always at his post of duty, and was a helpful hearer. He watched the progress of the church, and rejoiced in her prosperity. He had clear convictions of right and duty, and was fixed in his faith. The world was made better because of his life. In the church he was timid; in the home he was priest indeed. He has gone to his reward. He had gone on a visit to see his daughter (when he died) in Oklahoma Territory. When found, Monday morning, he was lying upon his side sleeping. He spent Sunday at church worshiping God. On Monday, God took him to heaven.

To his lonely wife and children we extend our sympathy. You may long after him, but not lament him. Why put on robes of dark mourning when he has put on the white robes of glory?

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

J. M. MONEE.

KEITH—The home of Bro. Thomas Keith is made sad on account of the death of Miss SUSAN KEITH, who fell asleep on the twenty-eighth of April, 1900.

Miss Keith was born and raised in Doostur, Miss., where she lived until death. A bright Christian, she joined the church when quite young, and lived up to the expectation of a lit. She had a multitude of friends. Everyone loved her. The preacher's family never had a better neighbor than Miss Keith. Her mission seemed to be to wait on the sick, and to see that the preacher's home was not forgotten. She spoke of her mama and sister being at rest, and expressed a desire to be with them. Though she had been sick a long time, the call was very sudden. The writer preached her funeral in the Baptist Church to a large congregation, she being a member of that church. Her father and sister and three brothers had many to weep with them on that sad occasion. We have a bright hope of meeting our dear sister in that sweet by-and-by. May God comfort the bereaved father in the hour of sorrow, and may the children remember their sister's noble example!

L. J. JONES, P. C.

Sister Tower left a husband—Mr. D. C. Tower—two children—Alder and Tavis—besides father and mother, and grandparents on both sides, two sisters, many other relatives, and a host of friends, to mourn her loss.

Sister Tower was one of those pure-minded, sweet-souled Christians whom everyone loved. To know her was to esteem her. She had not missed a day for a long time in reading her Bible. When she came to die she was perfectly resigned; asked those present to sing, "I'm so sweet to trust in Jesus." About fifteen minutes before she died she kissed her father and mother and sisters good-bye. Her last words were, 'Open wide the gate, Lord." In the presence of such a pure life and triumphant death, what can a gainsaying world answer?

To the bereaved ones and friends we extend our sincere sympathy. You know where she has gone; strive to meet her.

Her pastor, H. S. JOHNS.

PRICE—CLARENCE A. PRICE, son of T. B. and Martha A. Price, was born Jan. 22, 1900, and died April 6, 1900.

This tiny flower of only three months, born to this life only for so short a time, entwined itself about the parents' hearts, a delight to the whole family circle; then drooped and died, too delicate for the chilly winds of this stormy world, but has gone to live forever in the land of eternal bloom, for "of such is the kingdom of heaven," and "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." So this little treasure has gone, binding the hearts stronger to the "home over there," where all will be safe forever more some sweet day.

'UNCLE HENRY."

HAND—TROTTER, the son of J. R. and E. K. Hand, departed this life March 14, 1900. He was born April 28, 1897. He was named for his grandpapa, A. T. Hand. Trotter lived long enough to have a warm place in the hearts of his dear parents. He would sing for them even while sick. Though his three little brothers and four sisters shall hear his voice no more on earth, may they remember that Trotter is in heaven with his little brother and sister, waiting and watching for them. His earthly sufferings are over, and he is now numbered among the saints in glory, expecting father and mother, brothers and sisters, to join him in that eternal home. May God comfort the bereaved family!

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A Small Beginning.

"A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dioka' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5¼ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle bar, which is always kept clean, well oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbins without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set 14 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter, 1 Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, Oil Can filled with oil, Gauge and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

DEFIANCE NO. 7¼.

This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7¼ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7¼ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address REV. W. C. BLACK, 512 Camp St., New Orleans

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Boers are in strong force at Roodeval.

Fifteen hundred Boers surrendered to Gen. Brabant at Ficksburg.

The Dowager Empress of China is said to have fled to the Russian legation at Peking.

The general conference of Y. M. C. A. secretaries is being held at Thousand Island Park, N. Y.

It is stated that Senator Hanna will succeed himself as chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Tung-Chow, thirteen miles from Peking, was burned Friday. Twenty native Christians were killed.

British authorities apparently regard the situation north of Kroonstad as serious. The Kroonstad garrison is being reinforced.

A mob lynched Askew and Ross, the negroes suspected of the murder of Christina Winterstein, on Sunday, near Mississippi City.

The Temperance Congress was opened at London on June 11. The American delegates are taking a prominent part in the proceedings.

The railroad track from Huang-Tsun to Le-Fa, a distance of thirty-three miles, has been destroyed and bridges and stations burned.

It is asserted at Tien-Tsin that only the strongest possible action of the powers can remedy the Chinese situation, which has grown serious.

Gen. Pio del Pilar, the Filipino general captured Friday night, has been fully identified. He was captured by some of the native police.

Dr. Jamison will stand for Parliament. He says everything points to the federation of the different States in South Africa within the Empire in a few years.

The Southern Industrial League Convention, to assemble in Atlanta, July 18, 19 and 20, will discuss questions of importance to the business men of the South.

In addition to checking all speculation on the London Stock Exchange the Chinese situation has led to considerable realization and a general decline in prices.

Admiral Kempff reports the landing of forces by the different nations and that communication is being opened to Peking. The Americans joined with the other powers.

BAD BLOOD is a bad thing. It is responsible for scrofula, salt rheum, humors and many other diseases, including rheumatism and that tired feeling. Bad blood is made good blood by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

Methodist Episcopal missionaries at Peking cable that the situation of the foreigners is critical, and ask that the United States Government be urged to act quickly.

The gunboat "Nashville," with a force of marines aboard, has sailed from Cavite for Taku. The "Monocacy" at Shanghai has been ordered to join Admiral Kempff at Taku.

The French Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Delcasse, says the most complete understanding exists between the powers for the defense of Europeans and the legations in China.

The Boers have torn up twenty-one miles of the railway between America Siding and Roodeval. Unless speedily repaired, this interruption will bring Lord Roberts' forward operations to a standstill.

The viceroy of Yuln has memorialized the Chinese throne, earnestly requesting the government to allow the foreign powers to use the railroad, pointing out that otherwise serious trouble is unavoidable.

The Colorado Prohibition State Convention nominated a full State ticket and adopted a platform which holds the President of the United States responsible for the establishment of "drunkeries" in the Philippines, Puerto Rico and Cuba.

The Boxers' movement in China is assuming alarming proportions. Peking is practically in the hands of a howling mob of undisciplined troops. All the foreigners have taken refuge in Legation street. Two trains have been sent out with over 1200 European and American soldiers on board, to repair the breaks in the railroad.

Wung Tung Ho, Emperor Kwong Hsu's confidante, has sent a message to the people of the west of China making proposals to end the state of anarchy brought about by Empress Hsi Tsi, calling upon the foreign powers to release the captive Emperor, declare a joint protectorate, and govern the country through his Majesty.

The Boers have annihilated a whole battalion of British soldiers. Between 600 and 700 have been either killed, wounded or captured at Roodeval. Miles and miles of the railroad track have been torn up, and Lord Roberts' communications with the Cape cut off. The news caused a great shock to British nerves, and London is brought to a realization of the fact that the war is not over. The Transvaal capital is now at Machadadorp.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured my husband, who was afflicted for years with large ulcers on his leg, and was cured after using two bottles; and cured a friend whom the doctors had given up to die, who had suffered for years with indigestion and nervous prostration. MRS. E. A. BEVILLE,
Woodstock, Ala.

A CARD.

For nervous and sick headaches, indigestion, biliousness and constipation (of which I have been a great sufferer) I have never found a medicine that would give such pleasant, prompt and permanent relief as Dr. H. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. J. P. SAWTELL, Griffin, Ga.,
Publisher Morning Call.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Oshy, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and they applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

How a Woman Paid Her Debts.

I am out of debt and thanks to the Dish Washer business for it. In the past five weeks I have made over $500, and I am so thankful that I feel like telling everybody, so that they can be benefited by my experience. Anybody can sell Dish Washers, because everybody wants one, especially when it can be got so cheap. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I believe that in two years from now every family will have one. You can get full particulars and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 246, Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and you can't help but make money in the business. I believe that I can clear over $5 000 the coming year, and I am not going to let such an opportunity pass without improvement. We can't expect to succeed without trying.

MRS B.

The very best premium offer we have ever made is our Sewing Machine Offer now running. You get the machine at a fabulously low price, and with it get a six months' subscription free. You have different styles to select from, and you have ten days to test the machine. Don't fail to read our offer.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Dr. H. A. Randle, who was a Baptist missionary in China for twenty years, and is now in Washington as a traveling evangelist, gives the following interesting account of the "Boxers," whose revolution in China is exciting the civilized world: "The Boxers organized in Western Shantung about fifteen months ago It is a patriotic organization, similar to the old Know Nothing party in this country, the avowed purpose of which is to oust the foreigner from China. It first took the name of the Great Sword Society, meaning thereby that they would use force to expel the so called 'barbarians' from their country. The name, however, has since been changed to the First Fighting Society, which has been rather satirically translated 'Boxers.' The aggressive action of Germany in Shantung, no doubt, had a large influence in its formation, and I believe their first thought was to fight, or rebel, the Germans. Probably, however, they soon recognized that as a task beyond their early powers, and they began to threaten the native Christians and the missionaries, and shortly after to attack them, at first destroying their property, with a view to their recantation. Subsequently they began to kill the native Catholic Christians, which stirred up their zeal and increased their numbers. The authorities, both local and central, have done much, though indirectly, to encourage them, and they, doubtless, have the countenance of the Empress Dowager, as well as the sympathy and good wishes of all anti-foreign mandarins and gentry, which certainly includes a vast majority of those influential classes. I consider that there will be no rest in China until the Empress Dowager is removed from power. There is a good element in China desiring reform, but it is not influential. The present government of China is corrupt in the extreme, and has been perpetuated longer than is good for the country or the world. While commercial aggression of European powers is at the bottom of the present troubles, the missionaries, whose position is critical, must suffer for the hatred thus engendered against foreigners, the unprotected positions of many of them making them specially subject to attack." So far as this government is officially concerned, there has been no change in the situation during this week, except that orders increasing our naval force in Chinese waters have been issued. Englishmen who have been in Washington since the Boxer troubles began seem to be strongly impressed with the idea that Russia had something to do with starting it, and that it is a part of a movement for the ultimate control of China. One of them—Mr. Charles Burton, of London—said of the published cablegram that the Dowager Empress had asked for Russian protection: "That looks curious to me. Things don't happen by accident there. Doubtless there was an understanding that the lady was to seek Russian protection. My own opinion is that Russia would not have permitted these troubles to come to a head until the Trans-Siberian railroad was completed, were it not for the fact that England is involved in the South African war."

Following his usual course, President McKinley has referred all the requests received during the last few days from missionary societies, asking that steps be taken to protect our missionaries in China, to the Department of State. The theory of the government is that such requests are unnecessary, as it is the business of our diplomatic and consular officers to extend that protection at all times.

Gen. E. S. Otis, late military governor of the Philippines, arrived in Washington this week. He was asked to answer many questions, and among the rest, why so many saloons had been allowed in Manila to demoralize both soldiers and natives. Gen. Otis said, in reply to that question: "In regard to the saloons in Manila, their number has been reduced one-half. Manila is almost a model city. It is in good sanitary condition and well-governed. It is quiet, and, compared to the population of other cities, is well balanced in every respect. Our army has been under rigid discipline, and the misdemeanors of the soldiers have been fewer than in other armies of equal size."

One class of trade is following our flag that will do more harm than good—that in intoxicants. In the official summary of United States commerce are figures showing that we have during the last ten months sold beer to the following amounts: To Cuba, $585,328; to Porto Rico, $17,018; to Hawaii, $164,721, and to the Philippines, $369,974. Thus this great and Christian country has in less than a year unloaded upon those who have newly come under the protection of our flag, beer, the wholesale price of which was more than a million dollars, not to mention other intoxicants which are not particularized in the summary of commerce. That it is our duty, alike as Christians and humanitarians, to try to uplift the benighted peoples who have come under our flag as a result of the war with Spain, is universally admitted, but can we do it by teaching them the use of intoxicants? Do we wish those peoples to get the idea that distilleries and breweries are the leading American institutions? That is what is being done, whatever the wishes of our people.

Washington, June 13, 1900.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

"The most exacting field of labor in Methodism is a large district, demanding one's entire time, and the best of head and heart, and the constant expenditure of nervous force, in order to bring things to pass, and push onward and upward the Lord's work. I was fortunate, therefore, in securing a few days for the rest and enjoyment of the Mansfield College commencement. At 11 A. M., of Sunday, June 10, and again at night, Dr. J. L. Pierce, of Monroe, La., discoursed to the delight of all. The commencement sermon was indeed a splendid effort—scriptural, spiritual, choice in diction, well delivered, and truly eloquent. The large audience, notwithstanding the intense heat, listened with rapt and unflagging attention to the end. At night the Doctor's text was, "Ye must be born again," and the sermon was a strong deliverance upon the all-important doctrine of the new birth. Accurate in statement, clear-cut and convincing in presentation, aptly illustrated and forced home with emphasis and unction, it produced a profound impression upon the hearers. At both hours Dr. Pierce soared above the glittering nothings and insipid platitudes of the ordinary commencement pulpit orator, and preached in the fear of God and the love of souls.

Doubtless others will send to the ADVOCATE full account of the many brilliant things said and done, and we can, therefore, be free to write of several matters of interest and importance to the friends of our Louisiana college for girls.

The serious illness of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard evoked the sympathies of his many admirers, who have watched with generous pride his steady devotion to the college, and his continued and successful labors in its behalf. Confined to his residence, he is under the heaviest cross that can come to a live man, accustomed, as he has ever been, to being busy about the Master's work. Let the prayers of his brethren throughout the Conference go up to God in his behalf.

Mansfield College is to-day on high ground, the work of the last year having been thorough, the attendance of pupils large, and the twelve bright young women graduates going forth as splendid specimens of what our Methodist college can do for the daughters of our land.

It may not be out of order just now to remind our preachers and the laity of our church that no institution more richly deserves, or stands more in need of, their twentieth century donations than does Mansfield Female College. Founded in the years long gone by Dr. Thweatt, and struggling up to her present position of great honor and influence, she certainly merits the generous support of all our people.

Dr. Samuel S. Keener, president of our Conference Board of Education, well said in his report to the Annual Conference last December: "While there is a grand revival of interest in education all over our State and throughout our common Methodism, shall not Louisiana Methodism awake, arouse, and put forth her strength in this same grand end? Mansfield should be enlarged in plant, advanced in curriculum, and endowed with at least $50,000. Let us work to that goal."

The Louisiana Conference adopted that report, and now preachers and people should "perform the doing of it." That portion of the thank-offerings that can be directed by the givers should be directed somewhat like this: To educational work in China, ten per cent., and the balance to Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, in equal amounts.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

MR. EDITOR: I have waited for some time, hoping that some one more in the habit of writing for the ADVOCATE would send in an account of our District Conference. It was so helpful to me and, I think, to all the brethren that I feel sure some notice of it is worthy of publication.

The Conference was called to order at nine o'clock A. M., April 26, by the presiding elder, Dr. Featherstun. The attendance at the opening was small, but reinforcements came until all the traveling preachers except four reported. There were few lay delegates and local preachers who answered to roll-call. I wonder why our lay delegates and local preachers do not attend District Conference? This was my first time in the District Conference of the Brookhaven district, and I had thought the seat of the Conference at Magnolia so easily reached that we would have a good attendance of these brethren. I do not intimate that this district is an exception. I have never seen a fair attendance of laymen and local preachers, except in the old Woodville district. I have, however, only been in three districts. Every session was helpful, and suggested practical plans for the good of the church. The programme arranged by the presiding elder was the very best for the occasion. It was strictly followed, except when brethren were not present who were on the programme. We received so much help, so many useful and practical suggestions from it, that the Conference heartily passed a resolution of thanks to Dr. Featherstun for its preparation. I do not wonder that Dr. Featherstun is loved and respected by the brethren. I was not in his district last year, but now and then, when I met one of his preachers, I heard of him with satisfaction, and now, being in the district, I understand the secret of it.

One day was Missionary Day, and a helpful session it was. Reports from the preachers showed deep interest in missions. At 11 o'clock R. Bradley preached a soul-stirring missionary sermon. In the absence of the president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, Mrs. Dr. Featherstun reported. The programme at night included a missionary rally, addresses being delivered by Mrs. Dr. Featherstun and Mrs. J. P. Drake. I wish the ADVOCATE had the addresses of these talented Christian women. Thank the Lord for such workers. May he give the church many more like them! The presiding elder had prepared an address on missions for the occasion; but when he had heard these ladies, he saved his address for some time, when an audience had not had the feast they had just enjoyed. The truth is, Mr. Editor, silence was golden, and he had judgment to see it. At the conclusion a strong Woman's Missionary Society was organized at Magnolia.

The cause of education was given prominence one day, and at night Bishop Galloway came and put the cap-stone on that day's work with a lecture on the Twentieth Century Thank-offering. Everyone knows our great Mississippi Bishop, and will pardon me when I fail to say anything about that lecture. At the close a collection was taken for this great Methodist movement, and about one hundred and fifty dollars subscribed.

There was much that deserves extended notice; the paper read by Rev. J. J. Golden, "How to Get a Contribution from Every Member," being quite meritorious. Several other splendid papers were also read.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: L. L. Lampton, J. E Carruth, D. E. J. Mitchel, and F. B. Catching.

McComb City was selected as the place for the District Conference next year.

Bro. Keen, the Bishop of Magnolia, was a royal host.

If you had only known what a good, helpful time we had, you would have been there, Mr. Editor.

NOTES FROM GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

The Greenville District Conference met in Clarksdale, Miss., May 25, 1900, and continued its sessions three days. Rev. J. W. Dorman presided in his usual genial and brotherly spirit. This year closes his term on the district. The Bishop can more readily find a successor than a substitute. I have known no presiding elder who kept in closer touch with the preachers, or labored more earnestly as a co-pastor in the work.

The Conference was honored with visits from Revs. Dr. W. B. Murrah, G W. Bachman, T. Y. Ramsey, and S. M Thames.

Rev. B Campbell Trigg was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The following lay delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Rev. J. D. Parmer, J. E. Rather, J. W. Wyatt, and Robt. Somerville; alternates: J. H. Johnson and J. H. Sherard.

The sessions of the Conference were pleasant and religious. The reports from the work were, on the whole, the best I have ever heard so early in the year. The outlook for "all collections in full" seems flattering, the entire assessments being provided for in several charges, and Boliver reporting an excess pledged. The pastor, Rev. J. M. Moose, is an excellent and enthusiastic worker.

The next District Conference will be held at Shaw.

J. R. COURTISS, Sec.

THE DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This body met in the town of Kosciusko, April 27, 1900. The day previous the Preachers' Institute of Durant district was held, and an interesting program which had been arranged by the presiding elder, Rev. T. W. Dye, was discussed. The discussions were participated in by ministers and laymen, and some excellent speeches were made.

The opening sermon of the District Conference was preached Thursday evening, April 26, by Dr. T. C. Wier, of Lexington and Tchula station, and was a clear and forceful presentation of the subject of a divine call to the ministry, the relation of the pastor and his flock, and the reciprocal obligations growing out of that relation.

Friday morning, April 27, the District Conference was called to order at nine o'clock by the presiding elder, and all the interests of the church were carefully looked into. The pastors were all present save Revs. R. T. Nolen, J. F. Evans, and R. I. Allen. There was a fair attendance of laymen, considering the time of the year and the pressing demands upon the farmers for work. The reports from the brethren showed signs of improvement in almost every line. Finances on most of the charges were reported favorable, and the Conference seemed to be a unit in the determination that no deficit be reported from Durant district at our next Annual Conference. Amen! The spiritual feature was stressed, and more than once a baptism of the Spirit came upon the Conference. The Epworth League was represented by Revs. Augustus and Gladney in strong, telling addresses. The Twentieth Century Thank-offering was discussed by Bro. Dye in a masterly way, and made a profound impression on the large audience that heard it.

Rev. J. H. Shumaker, our Conference host, was untiring in his efforts to make us comfortable and happy, and succeeded admirably.

Our next session will be held at Durant. G. W. GORDON.

Ackerman, Miss., June 14, 1900.

THE PAINE INSTITUTE.

REPORT OF PRESIDENT FOR SESSION OF 1899-1900.

We have just closed a pleasant and profitable session of the school. There were enrolled 266 students. We found it necessary to employ two teachers and an assistant besides our regular faculty. This we could do through the liberality of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. With this additional force we were enabled to do the most satisfactory work of any session. We graduate one from the Collegiate Department and sixteen from the Academic Department. Four of the graduates are ministers of the gospel.

We need very much a heating apparatus. The buildings ought to be painted. Sewerage, together with conveniences for the female boarders—bath-room conveniences and a laundry—have been put in Holsey Hall and near it.

We are reaching different parts of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Students have been in attendance this session from Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, and Louisiana.

We have an active Y. M. C. A. and a live Epworth League, both organized this session. There have been some conversions in the school. The spiritual life has been excellent.

Very respectfully,

GEO. WMS. WALKER, Pres't.

June 8, 1900.

The 20th Century Movement.

A MOST IMPORTANT MATTER.

We are profoundly glad that our Bishops have appointed the week, July 2-8, as a season of fasting and prayer, and have designated the closing Lord's Day as a time for taking a collection in behalf of the Twentieth Century Fund in every congregation. It is necessary, if we are to profit largely by their suggestions, that we give the matter due and earnest heed. God forbid that we should be thoughtless or indifferent concerning it! Every church paper should keep it constantly before the people during the whole month of June. Not an issue should be suffered to go to press without some reference to it. A mere casual notice is not enough. What is demanded is frequent, earnest, insistent discussion and appeal. The pulpit also must not be silent. On every Sunday morning and at all week-day services let the subject under consideration have precedence. The people should be taught that a great enterprise is on hand, and one that calls for the heartiest co-operation of all the Methodists in the land. In the Sunday-schools, too, let the same idea be zealously propagated. The time is short, and no opportunity should be wasted.

Nothing could have been more proper than that the collection should be preceded by protracted fasting and prayer. As a church, we have many reasons for humbling ourselves in dust and ashes before God, and crying for pardon and cleansing. The burden of our sins is very great. Worldliness has crept in among us to an alarming extent. Many of our members have a name to live, and are yet dead. The whole tone of our spiritual life is far less vigorous than it ought to be. Oh, for earnest, fervent, concerted prayer! God is not dead, nor has he vacated the throne of his glory. His ear is still open to hear our petitions, and his arm is stretched out to save. What a sight it would be if every household in Southern Methodism should rear an altar, and offer the sacrifice of penitence and thanksgiving; if from every church there should go up wave after wave of holy desire and aspiration! God is our supreme need. To be right with him is our greatest duty. When we have consecrated ourselves afresh to his service, let us signalize the great event by bringing a liberal portion of our substance and laying it down for the cause of Christian education. Unless we do something of this sort, there is danger that our spiritual emotions will evaporate into thin air.—Nashville Advocate.

ATLANTA IS THE PLACE.

Says the Epworth Era: "The Southern Epworth League Conference will meet in Atlanta, July 26-29, 1900. This will be the first General Conference of the Leaguers of Southern Methodism, and, doubtless, will prove a great and historic event in our League work. It is fervently hoped that it may prove the starting-point of mighty purposes and church-wide plannings for victory by the younger hosts of Methodism. Let everybody who loves the League, and who can do so, go up to this great assembly.

"The great auditorium at the Southern Interstate Fair Grounds, Atlanta, where the Southern League Conference is to be held, has already been named 'Epworth Hall.' It has a seating capacity of nine thousand. It is to serve for great public assemblies at the first meeting of the Southern Interstate Fair, in October next. Let us dedicate it in July with the songs and prayers of a host of Leaguers that shall fill its vast interior."

There is every prospect that this will be a great and profitable Conference. Large plans are being made, brilliant speakers will be on hand, and Atlanta will "do herself proud" in welcoming and in entertaining the Leaguers. A uniform railroad rate of one fare for the round trip is assured. The boarding-houses and hotels have promised a minimum rate of one dollar per day. One of the features of the Conference will be the most extensive missionary exhibit ever made by our church.

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair.
When I have time.

When I have time the friend I love so well
Shall know no more these weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise.
When I have time.

When you have time! The friend you hold so dear
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent,
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content.
When you had time.

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear;
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time.

"Value of Mission Work as Shown by Statistics, and the Opinions and Statements of Observers."

True Christianity is essentially missionary in character. In a highly important sense the Lord Jesus may be considered the first missionary. He was sent by the eternal Father to set up his kingdom on the earth. The work of the patriarchs and prophets, by whom he "spake in time past unto the fathers," was but preparatory to the spiritual reign of the Son of God. "He that came from above is above all." His hands that were once nailed to the cross "have lifted the gates of empires off their hinges, changed the courses of the centuries, and still governs the ages." In order to perpetuate his spiritual kingdom among men, the risen Christ, just before his ascension, gave to his disciples their marching orders, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The mission of Christ was to the Jews. "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." His death upon the cross for all men broke down the middle wall of partition between the Jew and Gentile, and opened the gate of the common salvation to the whole world, and he commanded the disciples to preach to Jews and Gentiles, having "tasted death for every man." The Acts of the Apostles is the first missionary volume, and shows how Christianity was applied as the salt of the earth to save the heathen world from moral putrefaction. Paul was a model missionary. Although originally a relentless persecutor of Christians, when he became a new man he was called to be the apostle of the Gentiles. He conferred not with flesh and blood, and became the champion of the Christian faith to a heathen world. In recounting his toilsome missionary labors, he says: "In journeyings often, in perils of water, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by the heathen, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren. Beside those things that are without, that which cometh upon me daily, the care of all the churches." Until the consummation of all things the study of Paul's missionary character, travels and labors must constitute a standard and sacred classic for all who want to comprehend the true principles of Christian propagandism. He finished his course with joy, and the ministry which he had received of the Lord Jesus, by sealing the faith which he had preached with his own blood. But his hand (as H. B. Bascom says) that stretched the strong eastern tent and wore the dungeon's chain, now sweeps in grandest triumphs the harps of heaven."

Paul was only one of the noble band of apostolic missionaries. Peter founded the Christian church at Jerusalem, was the chief actor in the scenes of Pentecost, and laid the foundation for missions to the Gentiles by baptizing the centurion, Cornelius, and other Gentiles at Cesarea. After a laborious missionary life he was crucified, with his feet turned upward and his head downward, averring his unworthiness to die in the same posture of his Lord. The grand missionary idea is associated with the history of all the apostles and their successors, who, when persecuted and scattered, "went everywhere preaching the Word." Thus, in a few years, the principles of the Christian religion were diffused to a greater or less extent throughout the Roman Empire. From the history of apostolic missions we learn the lesson that should never be forgotten: that consecrated men and consecrated means are the agencies employed in the establishment and perpetuation of the kingdom of God on the earth. Pliny, Justin Martyr and Tertullian show the constant advance of Christianity in the second century, having at least 2,000,000 adherents. Then the dark days came, the church passing through ten distinct periods of persecution and the flames of martyrdom under successive Roman emperors. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church."

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again;
The eternal years of God are hers."

At this time the "earth helped the woman," and Constantine the Great issued his edict of religious toleration in the beginning of the fourth century. This was, and is, an indefeasible right of humanity, and would have been an unmingled blessing but for the worldly spirit that was fostered by what we would now term "State patronage." "My kingdom is not of this world." All the Church can ask of the State is its protection; all the State needs of the Church is its blessing. After this period Augustine and the golden-mouthed Chrysostom were laboriously engaged in checking the worldly spirit of the church and in directing the missionaries in their work. The gospel was planted in Ireland in the fifth century by a single missionary, divinely moved and self-supported. His historic name was Patrick, and the Roman Catholics, without reason, claiming him as their own, call him St. Patrick. At any rate, the name of this self-sacrificing man must ever be remembered as "the apostle of Ireland." During the succeeding centuries before the Reformation many Catholic missionaries of the different orders showed commendable zeal and self-sacrifice in the prosecution of their work, though the defects and errors of the system in connection with which they acted could only produce a low grade of Christian life. A better day dawned upon the church, and Christianity in earnest began to reassert itself. There were missions and missionaries before William Carey sailed for India in 1793, but his work was largely introductory as a pioneer to other and better things. When he proposed to discuss the mission of the church to a heathen world in a ministers' meeting, the chairman said: "Take your seat, young man; take your seat. When God wants to convert the heathen world, he will do it without your aid or mine." He said, "I can not take my seat." His theme was, "Expect great things from God, and attempt great things for God." After a long and successful career as a missionary in India, he died June 9, 1834. Adoniram Judson labored seven years in Burmah before he had a single convert. Then great success came to him. His name goes down to posterity as "the apostle of Burmah."

No Methodist can think of India without thinking of Dr. Coke, who crossed the Atlantic eighteen times, and finally died at sea while going to establish the Wesleyan mission at Ceylon. "But as his body sank low (as Milton sings), his spirit mounted high through the dear might of Him that once walked the waves."

We rejoice in the prosperity of the work in India under the faithful ministry of Bishop Thoburn and his co-laborers. It is cause for thanksgiving to God that the work has been so well inaugurated on the "Dark Continent" by Bishop Taylor and his associates, where Melville B. Cox finished his brief, but glorious, career in 1832. The Methodist Church in America is but the offspring of the missionary spirit of Mr. Wesley and the missionaries who were sent here by him, animated by the same spirit that thrilled his soul when he said, "The world is my parish." Missions are not the life of the church, but they are an inevitable expression of the divine life in it. So long as the church has the spirit of the ascended Master, who said, "The field is the world," the grand army of conquest must go on with its spiritual invasion, conquering and to conquer. This spirit animated the bosom of the lamented Dr. Eddy, Missionary Secretary of the M. E. Church, who, when he ascended to heaven in a flame of missionary zeal, said: "Forward is the word: no falling back. We must take the world for Christ." The same spirit was illustrated by our own J. W. Lambuth, who, falling on the field of spiritual conflict, said, "Send more men." Will the living lay it to heart? God help us to send more consecrated men and means for the spiritual relief of those who sit in the regions and shadow of death.

"Value of mission work." This can not be estimated, as celestial values are only current in the commerce of eternity. The message of salvation has spread general enlightenment, broken the bonds of superstition, proclaimed liberty to captives, elevated womanhood, diffused increased comfort to all classes, and has revealed new and blessed hopes for the life to come. The missionary spirit carries not only spiritual enlightenment, but the hospital and dispensary, the school and the asylum, into all the earth.

We owe our elevation and refinement to the gospel. The pioneers and vanguard of the Redeemer's kingdom "have labored, and we have entered into their labors." England and the United States have done more for higher civilization and the extension of the kingdom of God in heathen lands than all the other powers of earth put together. Their missionaries have been the real pathfinders in the world's progress and evangelization from William Carey to Young J. Allen. "Statements of observers." The late Charles Darwin had the candor to say: "The march of improvement consequent upon the introduction of Christianity throughout the South Seas probably stands by itself in the records of history. Within twenty years human sacrifices, the power of an idolatrous priesthood, profligacy unparalleled in any other part of the world, infanticide, and bloody wars, not sparing women and children—all these have been abolished, and dishonesty and intemperance have been greatly reduced." A proverb says, "Where the Turkish horse sits its hoof, the grass never grows." But in all lands where the imperial tread of the Son of God is felt and acknowledged, the country blooms as "the garden of the Lord." The first Napoleon is quoted as having said, "I have lived to see the end of all kingdoms that were established by the power of arms, but a kingdom has been founded in love that will never perish, and today there are thousands who would die for the Lord Christ."

Brethren, we follow an all-conquering Leader, who has never had a Waterloo nor a Bull Run. He has said it, and it shall come to pass, that the earth shall be filled with His knowledge and glory as waters that cover the sea. The lost tribes of earth are now gathering to their long-neglected Messiah with the fullness of the Gentiles, and the stone cut out of the mountain without hands is to become a great mountain itself, and fill the whole earth with glory.

"Wait, wait, ye winds, his story,
And you, ye waters, roll,
Till like a sea of glory
It spreads from pole to pole."

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON MISSIONS.

To the Winona District Conference:

Your committee recommend that special prayer be offered during this Conference for our faithful missionaries at home and abroad, and we further recommend that the pastors frequently offer prayers for our missionaries in their public worship.

The committee further recommends that the pastors try to interest their congregations in missionary literature, particularly in missionary biographies:

1. By reading and occasionally speaking about the work of our missionaries.

2. By placing missionary literature in the Sunday-school libraries, and speaking about such books to the school.

The committee offer for your adoption these resolutions:

Resolved, That we hereby pledge ourselves to raise the entire assessment for missions in this district.

Resolved, That we employ every available means to carry out the foregoing resolution.

Special attention is directed to the report of the district secretary of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Winona district, which follows this report.

The committee takes great pleasure in commending the splendid work of this society, whose zeal and faithfulness in serving our common Lord is worthy of all praise. We congratulate them upon their progress, and bid them God-speed in their noble work.

We add to their wish our own earnest recommendation that pastors take hold of the work, and help to organize societies where there are none. Such a society in every charge will prove an arm of power to the pastor. The importance of their work can not be over-estimated.

WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

Report of District Secretary of Winona District, North Mississippi Conference, to the District Conference.

The reports of the auxiliaries of Woman's Home Mission Society in Winona district show improvement and progress along every line of work carried on by the society. During the past year two new auxiliaries have been organized, making the number at present ten; forty-seven new members have been added, making a total of one hundred and forty-eight. The amount of money raised will exceed that of any previous year. There has been more general payment of dues, and more auxiliaries contribute to connectional enterprises.

The increase in subscription to the organ of the society, Our Homes, has been nearly twenty-five per cent., and more leaflets on the work are called for than ever before. Nearly 2,000 magazines, papers and leaflets have been distributed; many visits made to sick and poor, and help given when needed. An increased interest among members is shown by better attendance and more willingness to take part in the work. One hundred and fifty dollars has been pledged to Twentieth Century Fund, and part of it paid.

Owing to meagre reports from some auxiliaries, we believe that much good work has been done that is not included in the above, and we have no means of judging how much has been accomplished that received its inspiration from the work of the Home Mission Society.

An earnest plea is made that each pastor take hold of the work, and help to organize societies where there are none. Knowing his members personally, he knows just which one is fitted for leadership; knows just how to appeal to others to secure their co-operation, and he, of all others, can best tell them how it will cause "the coming of the kingdom of the Master" in their own hearts and in the world about them.

Literature containing information on the work will be cheerfully sent those desiring it.

Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

As a member of the Woman's Home Mission Society of Louisiana, I have been much interested in the work as carried on by our sisters in New York City. It was my privilege, some weeks ago, to attend a meeting at the Metropolitan Temple, when, after listening to an able address by Mrs. Woodruff, I heard Miss Mathews speak of the work done by the "Immigrant Girls Home," which is under the auspices of the W. H. M. Society of the M. E. Church. This Home is situated near Battery Park, which overlooks the bay, and its object is to afford a pleasant and safe temporary asylum for women and girls waiting for friends or seeking employment in Christian families. Being invited by Miss Mathews to visit the Home, we accepted with thanks, were cordially received and shown over the neat, well-kept rooms by the courteous matron, Miss J. Corbin. The windows open towards the Park, with its beautiful shade trees and a glimpse of the bay beyond—all so bright without, and so home-like and cheery within, with books and pictures, piano and comfortable chairs, that it must seem a haven of rest indeed after the long voyage and crowded ship's-hold. Miss Mathews has been in this work twelve years as resident missionary, and is looked upon as a veritable angel of mercy by many she has helped to good homes and rescued from lives of sin. As many as seven hundred were sheltered last year by the Home and protected until they could secure work or communicate with friends. Some of these women come over and expect friends or relations to meet them, who live in distant States. Miss Mathews told us that during one of her visits there, she noticed an old woman of seventy standing near the entrance, with a basket on one arm and a bundle on the other, intently watching the door-way. After several hours, during which she had gone to lunch and returned, she saw the old woman still in the same place holding her bundles and keeping the same intent gaze on the door. On inquiry, she learned that the old lady was expecting to see her daughter come in every minute, and that this daughter lived in Minnesota, and didn't know her mother was coming. Of course, she was taken to the Home and cared for until the daughter could be summoned by telegram to meet her.

At the eastern end of the Park is the Barge Office, where the immigrants land and where Miss Mathews does most of her good work for "the love of Christ, and in his name." We followed her through the various departments of the building, hearing meanwhile many interesting facts. As many as fifty-seven thousand immigrants came over during the month of May—one week twenty-two thousand, and one day five thousand. On the morning of our visit over twenty five hundred men, women and children filed by as we stood there, carrying baskets, bundles and satchels, some ragged and dirty, all intent on going the way pointed out by the official in charge. You must know that Uncle Sam's representatives are very busy marshalling this great crowd in the way they should go, as none of them seem to understand a word of English. They are detained here at the expense of the ship's company, which brings them over, until they are examined by physicians, register and exchange their money (if they have any) for good American dollars. Some pass on their way rejoicing, some are sent to the hospital, and others, likely to become public charges, are requested to return from whence they came. One sees here many phases of human suffering, and it is due, in a great measure, to the fair promises and flattering prospects held out to these people by ship agents. They spend their little all to come over, and are sent back with nothing. I saw one woman in a group of those to be returned, whose face haunted me long afterwards. It was a perfect picture of despair. In another room some were weeping bitterly because they were to go to the hospital, others because their friends had failed to meet them, and so on. Through this mass of suffering humanity Miss Mathews passed, speaking words of comfort and encouragement, telling them it would be all right, as she was coming back to look after their troubles; and it was no idle promise, for this noble Christian woman is well known to the officials, and she rights all the wrongs that she can. "For love of Christ, and in his name," the motto of the Home, she is occupying the ground until the Master comes by offering to him the service of an unselfish life.

Nothing is more powerful for good than the sight of a real practical Christian. There are very many who will not hear the gospel and do not understand the meaning of justification by faith, who yet can understand a consistent walk with God, and are led by it to purer lives. May God bless our work and the members of this great organization of Christian women, both North and South!

The recent meeting of W. B. F. M. in Paris, Texas, was most harmonious and exceptionally profitable. Dr. Walter Lambuth was present with inspiring zeal. Two foreign missionaries—one from China, and one from Brazil—brought the Board in close touch with the "uttermost."

The Louisiana delegate—Mrs. La-Prade, en route for her home in New Orleans, wafted a few items of interest to the editor of our column, which will be read joyfully by the members of W. F. M. S, as follows:

"Miss Emma Goey was granted permission to collect the means by private appeal, outside of regular channels, to open a home in China for abandoned girls.

"A committee was appointed to select a reading course on missions for our auxiliaries.

"Mite-boxes, life memberships and Week of Prayer collections may hereafter be appropriated to the Special Pledge.

"Six new missionaries were sent out by the W. B. F. M.: Miss Sadie Harbough, from the Baltimore Conference, for Korea; Miss June Nicholson, from South Carolina Conference, for China; Miss Alice Griffith, from Louisville Conference, for China; Miss Elizabeth Davis, from North Carolina Conference, for Brazil; Miss Nettie Peabody, from Louisiana Conference, for Brazil; Miss Sue Ford, from Kentucky Conference, for Cuba.

"Two young ladies go to the Scarritt Training-school: Miss Blanche Howell and Miss Cornelia Brickhouse.

"The next meeting of W. B. F. M. will be held in Asheville, N. C."

These hurried items over the 'phone, as avant couriers, betoken the feast of good things which the forthcoming Minutes of the W. B. F. M. will bring us.

A long, new, clean year lies before us. Let us begin the year, dear sisters, with hearts full of love and hands full of work for the cause.

Plan great things for the enlargement of our society, and let each one faithfully perform the duties as they come. Then we may expect great things from the unfailing Father.

The Christian Life.

IN GOOD STANDING.

The ice-cold Christian may be a member of the church "in good and regular standing." Yes, and a contributing member, too. He attends church quite regularly and sings in the choir. When he gets his "Sunday best" on he looks quite like a Christian, but how does he live?

No daily Bible reading.

No blessing asked at the table.

No family prayers.

No Bible instruction for the children.

No religious conversation in the home.

No private prayer.

No attendance at the week-day services.

No attendance at the Sunday-school.

No Christ in his favorite amusement.

And only a little of Christ in his head.

Well, what has he, then, which the commonest sinners has not?

1. He has his name on the church roll.

2. He has his name on the list of contributing members.

3. He has a pew or an occasional sitting in church.

These three things and nothing more to entitle him to the glorious name of Christian.

If he should suddenly die, he would be given a Christian burial, and these three things about him would be sure to be mentioned in the funeral sermon, and held out to the bereaved family as reasons for a blessed assurance that he has gone straight to glory, with an abundant entrance.—Church Life.

THE CARPENTER OF NAZARETH.

I never come back to this story of the early years of Christ, and read what these men of Nazareth said about him, without learning how dangerous a thing it is to pronounce my little sentence upon any single human life. O men of Nazareth, down in that carpenter's shop that you pass and repass, where you sometimes pause and look in and see him at his work, there is the One who spoke and it was done, who put his compass upon the deep, who fashioned all things by the word of his power, and you have never seen him and never known him, and your estimate of him is that he is one of you—only a carpenter. All service is sacred service. I want you to carry this thought of the working Christ into all the days of the coming week, behind the counter and in the office, and, beloved sister, if I may say so, in the home. Remember that George Herbert had caught the very spirit of this lovely thought when he sang of the possibility of sweeping a room, and "making that and the action fine." The carpenter's shop made Calvary not a battle-field merely, but a day of triumph that lit heaven and earth with hope; and if you and I would triumph when our Calvary comes, we must triumph in the little things of the common hours.—Rev. G. Campbell Morgan.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference convened in the school-building at Gulf Port at 9 A. M., May 24, 1900, and remained in session three days. The new church-building was to have been completed in ample time for the session, but the high water and the general interruption of business consequent thereon rendered it impossible to secure necessary supplies of material. It will soon be completed, and will be one of our handsomest church edifices in the district.

The attendance on the Conference was unusually large. Every pastor in the district except one was at Gulf Port, and the absentee was detained at home by sickness. The sessions were enlivened by vigorous discussions on timely subjects, and the preaching was exceptionally good. The presiding elder reported the district, on the whole, as in better condition than he had ever known it to be before. Harmony everywhere prevailed: revivals had occurred in several charges, and there had been substantial increase in membership; financially, the district was fully twenty per cent. in advance of this time last year.

Reports from the several pastoral charges abundantly confirmed the excellent showing made by the district as a whole. In nearly every one of them all financial obligations had been met up to date. In some of them the collections ordered by the Annual Conference had been paid nearly in full. Many had joined the church on profession of faith.

The reports of the several committees contained matters of general interest to the church. The Committees on Home Missions and on the Spiritual State of the Church both called attention to the fact that our church enterprises are not keeping pace with the districts grown in population and wealth. Additional pastors are needed, and more churches ought to be built at once. The Committee on Christian Literature recommended the establishment of a Mississippi Christian Advocate by the two Mississippi Conferences, which recommendation was unanimously adopted. The Committee on Sabbath Observance condemned Sunday excursions, which do so much harm in demoralizing the coast towns, and, incidentally, took a shot at the Seashore Camp Meeting. Various other committees made reports, which were of special interest to this District Conference.

Considerable discussion arose over the management of the Seashore Camp Meeting. Resolutions were adopted urging that the trustees from the three controlling districts, New Orleans, Seashore, and Mobile, be equal in number; and a special committee was appointed to endeavor to secure such change in the charter as will give seven trustees from each. A resolution was also adopted condemning the advertising of the camp ground as a Summer resort without reference to the camp meeting and other religious services held there during the year.

The following local preachers had their licenses renewed: H. E. Carter, W. W. Murray, W. C. Biberon, M. R. Jones, Samuel E. Fleurry, James King, W. W. Broom, John Fleurry, H. B. Gilmore.

Following were elected to the Annual Conference: A. J. Clark, T. M. Evans, J. P. Carter, C. W. Jackson, delegates; W. S. Tatum, E. S. Calhoun, J. H. Havens, S. E. Lance, alternates.

The licenses to preach of J. H. Havens and G. S. Roberts were renewed, and W. W. Graves was granted license to preach.

Poplarville was chosen as the seat of the next session of the District Conference.

FROM THE WORK.

REVIVAL AT OKOLONA, MISS.

We have just closed a two weeks' meeting at Okolona. We were assisted by Revs. L. M. Lipscomb, of Cold Water; H. P. Crowe, of Verona, and W. A. Bowlin, of Okolona circuit. We held from three to five services a day, one afternoon service being given specially to the children. Bro. Lipscomb preached twice a day for eight days with great power and to the delight and edification of our people. He is a young man of superior ability, strong in thought, clear in his statements, well versed in the doctrines of our church, and filled with the Spirit. He does not give forth any uncertain sound, but drives the truth home to the hearts of his hearers, and they are forced not only to hear, but to heed. Bro. Crowe is a fine, sweet-spirited man of God—a strong preacher, and was much appreciated by our people. May these faithful young men be spared long to the church!

Our church was greatly blessed. Many were reclaimed; several have been converted. There were twelve accessions on profession of faith, making a total of twenty-five received since Conference. We suspended the meeting for a few weeks because of the continuous rain, but will resume again soon. The Lord be praised for the blessings which have come to us.

J. A. LEECH.

GRAND CANE, LA.

We have just closed a meeting of great power at Grand Cane, which began May 26 and continued twelve days. Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., did the preaching, and he preached with great earnestness, and the Holy Ghost honored his efforts in the conversion of precious souls. I can truthfully say that he is a man of God who preaches the old-time gospel faithfully and effectively. Any pastor who needs assistance in holding his meetings would do well to secure the services of Bro. Bass. He is thoroughly loyal to his church and is a great help to the pastor wherever he goes. The Methodist Church at Grand Cane has been greatly benefited by his having come here. Other denominations were helped by the meeting. Nearly all the people in and around Grand Cane are members of some church; hence we have but little material outside of the church to operate upon.

The meeting resulted in quite a number of conversions. Some of the leading members of our church were regenerated, and will now pray in public and testify to the saving power of the Holy Ghost. The Christians of Grand Cane have been most gloriously revived. We have received eleven into our church, and several have joined other churches. We have had twenty accessions to our church at Grand Cane since Conference. The Lord is blessing us, and the Grand Cane circuit is moving up. We feel very grateful for his goodness and mercy to us.

The last day of the meeting a storm struck the parsonage, the arrival of a barrel of flour being the first premonition thereof. The breeze continued on until about nine o'clock that night, bringing lard, hams, rice, sugar, coffee and other things. Last, but not least, came a nice dress, ready-made, for the preacher's wife. Bro. Bass was an important factor in starting the breeze. May the good Lord abundantly bless him and the kind people of Grand Cane and community for what they have done!

MOODY'S OWN METHODS.

RENTING PEWS AND FILLING THEM, AND GATHERING UP RECRUITS FROM THE STREETS.

William R. Moody, in writing for The Saturday Evening Post the life of his father, Dwight L. Moody, tells many good stories of the famous evangelist. In a recent article he says: 'As a boy in Northfield he had achieved remarkable results in swelling the attendance at the Sunday-school, and so, arguing from that, he conceived the idea that he could be of much value to Plymouth Church as a recruiting agent. Having come to this decision, he hired a pew with the understanding that he was to fill it each Sunday. Like everything else he undertook, he fulfilled his commission with intense earnestness and enthusiasm. He did not wait for the young men to come to church, but he went after them, stopping them on street corners, visiting them in their lonely rooms, and even calling them out of saloons. It was altogether new and strange, and the novelty of the whole work had an irresistible effect, with the consequence that in a short time young Moody was renting six pews which he filled every Sunday with his strange and motley guests.

"There was a little mission on North Wells street, and he applied for a class. He was told that the sixteen teachers were amply able to instruct the twelve scholars, but if he would provide his own class, they would be very glad to have him. This was just what Mr. Moody wanted. Next Sunday there was a sensation. Young Moody opened the door and led in a procession of eighteen little 'hoodlums' whom he had gathered from the streets."

The afflictions which are sent of God or permitted by him are never intended for his children's destruction, but for their discipline. The shepherd casts his flock into deep waters to wash them, not to drown them. "You will kill that bush if you put that knife into it so deep," said a gentleman to his gardener. "No, sir; I do this every year to keep it from running all to leaves: pruning brings the fruit." We pastors often find God's faithful ones bleeding under the knife, but afterward they yield the peaceable and precious fruits of righteousness and triumphant trust. It is that "afterward" that God has in his mind when he sends the trial. Affliction is the costly school in which great graces are often acquired, and from which grand characters are graduated.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

Should it be a rule of life to get all you can, or to give all you can? That question is just now under discussion. Well, how much can one give unless he first gets? The men who are laying thousands or millions on the altars of education, humanity or religion, have generally been successful as captains of industry, princes of commerce, or leaders of large business enterprises. Possibly also their chief benefaction has consisted in creating profitable employment—which is a kind of giving—especially if they have been just and considerate in their dealings, and have paid fair wages. To get honestly is quite as legitimate as to give generously, and ought to take equal rank.—Youth's Companion.

There are multitudes of professing Christians who never visit any poor person. They never tread the obscure streets or ascend the grimy stairs in search of God's hidden ones. They have never acquired the art of cheering a dark home with a flower or a home, or the touch of a sympathetic hand and the smile of a healthy face. It would completely alter the Christianity of many if they could begin to do these lowly services; it would put reality into it and it would bring into the heart a joy hitherto unknown.—Stalker.

Baby's coming should be a time of joy and happiness. Fear should be forgotten and pain a stranger.

How often is it so?

As the time approaches how often the

It isn't right. Nature never meant it to be so. If the mother were strong and well in a womanly way, as she ought to be, there would be no danger and little pain.

The time of parturition is made comfortable and safe by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It is a medicine designed by a skilled physician—a specialist in the disorders and diseases of women—for the express and only purpose of putting the whole womanly system into perfect, vigorous health. It works directly on the organs involved in baby's advent and makes them strong, healthful and flexible. Taken during the whole period of gestation it insures the perfect health of both mother and child.

Mrs. Mollie E. Grimes, of Flomaton, Escambia Co., Ala., writes: "I have taken three bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' and one bottle of your little 'Pellets' and oh, what an appetite they did give me. My baby is now three months old and weighs fifteen pounds and a half. When she was born she was the fattest little baby girl you ever saw. She was the largest one of all my babies and at the birth I had an easier and shorter time than I ever had. I am stouter and healthier than I ever was. I never will be without your medicine. May God bless you and your good medicines."

The Abita Springs Hotel, which was destroyed by fire a short time since, is now being rebuilt, larger and better than before. The main building is to be heated by steam, and made thoroughly comfortable for Winter as well as Summer visitors, and hereafter will be kept open all the year round. Baths and sanitary plumbing, modern and of the very best, will be among the attractive features.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

JULY 1st-8th.

I hope diligent preparation is being made by every pastor in Mississippi for this week, and that the results will be such as to gladden all hearts. And they will, if anything like adequate effort be put forth. Brother, do not let your charge be the one to fail.

A card just received from Rev. J. D. Cameron, D. D., Macon, says: "Macon station has subscribed and paid in cash about one dollar per member to the Twentieth Century Thank-offering, and I am satisfied will add a good deal more to this."

How it would cheer me, and bless the generations to come, if I could receive two hundred and seventy such cards the second week in July. Let every pastor say, "You shall!"

NOTES ABOUT WOODVILLEITES.

While in Woodville, Miss., last week, attending the Edward McGehee College commencement, the assistant editor was the guest of those elegant and hospitable people, Mr. and Mrs. Argu, who did their utmost to render our stay pleasant. In company with Bro. Crisler, we had the honor of dining on Sunday at the college. On another occasion we partook of the generous hospitality of the pastor and his family, who are now rejoicing over their recovery from small-pox, and their release from about two months' quarantine. Bro. Crisler himself had a very serious time of it with the small-pox, which, in the case of the other members of his family, all of whom had it save one, proved to be of a very mild form. In consequence of this affliction, Bro. Crisler's work has been greatly interrupted, and during the time that he was quarantined no church services were held. Regular preaching was resumed only about three weeks ago. The pastor is hopeful, however, and expects to push things during the rest of the year. Though Bro. Crisler has greatly endeared himself to his flock, his parishioners for some time seemed to prefer his room to his company.

We had the pleasure, during our visit to the county seat of Wilkinson, of greeting and chatting with our esteemed friends, Hons. W. P. S. Ventress and H. B. McGehee, and their accomplished and intellectual wives, both of whom are daughters of Bishop Galloway.

We were much pleased at meeting the venerable, but sprightly, Rev. T. W. Brown, who resides in Woodville, but who had just gotten back from a somewhat lengthy trip to Adams county. We regretted to learn from him that his son, Rev. J. Wilson Brown, preacher in charge of the Washington circuit, is in such bad health that he has not been able to fill his appointments for a month, or more. During the son's illness Bro. Brown has been filling his appointments for him.

We were also delighted to meet those eminent and devoted Christian laymen, Ex. Lieut. Gov. J. H. Jones, Capt. Geo. T. McGehee, Bro. C. B McGehee, Sr, and Bros. John and James Sessions.

THE EDWARD McGEHEE FEMALE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Having accepted an invitation to preach the commencement sermon at Edward McGehee Female College, Woodville, Miss., at the appointed time, namely, Sunday morning, June 10, the assistant editor discharged as best he could the pleasant duty assigned him, the services being held in the neat and commodious college chapel. It was an ideal June day, such as the poets love to sing about. Not a flock of cloud was to be seen anywhere. The air was balmy and breezy, and Nature seemed to be in her happiest mood. The speaker was greeted by a large and unlettered audience that listened with the utmost attention and patience to his words; nor can he believe otherwise than that the truth spoken fell, in part at least, upon good ground. In response to the persuasion of Pastor Crisler, we preached again at eight P. M., in the Methodist Church.

A highly enjoyable and creditable entertainment was given by the young ladies under the direction of Miss Malone, the talented teacher of elocution, on Saturday evening preceding Commencement Sunday, "An Evening with Dickens" being the subject of the program presented, which attracted a huge crowd to the college chapel.

The final concert was held on Monday evening, the exercises consisting of song and story and instrumental music—all of a high order. The singers and performers on this occasion, as well as the recitationists on Saturday evening, gave evidence that they had had the benefit of most excellent training.

The annual literary address was delivered on Tuesday morning by Judge Samuel McC. Lawrason, of Bayou Sara, La., whose remarks were exceedingly appropriate and impressive. As the Judge's address, though humorous at times, did not consist of mere fun and froth, but was replete with wisdom and noble sentiment, the young ladies of the college were thus paid the high compliment of being able to appreciate sound thought, earnest advice, and also the momentousness of the opportunities that await the educated youth of our country. Judge Lawrason is evidently a Christian gentleman of the noblest type. At the conclusion of his address certificates were awarded to a number of young ladies who had achieved distinction in one, or more, studies, the presentation speech being made by Rev. John W. Crisler in a very pleasing manner.

The graduation exercises took place on Tuesday evening, at which time essays were read by the six young graduates, as follows, the general theme being, "Types of Womanhood:" Miss Annie Lowry, Woodville, Miss., "Elizabeth Barrett Browning;" Miss Caroline Rawlins, Woodville, Miss., "Rosa Bonheur;" Miss Mary Netterville, Wilkinson, Miss., "Jean Ingelow;" Miss Edna McGehee, Pinckneyville, Miss., "Varina Anne Davis;" Miss Anna McGehee, Woodville, Miss., "Annals of the Past;" Irma de Villeneuve, Woodville, Miss., "A Dream of the Future." The diplomas were then awarded by Hon. W. P. S. Ventress. The class just graduated is an exceptionally fine one. As we had to leave on Tuesday afternoon, however, we were forced to forego the pleasure of being present at the closing exercises.

The honorable Board of Trustees, at their annual meeting on Monday, which, by their courtesy, we were permitted to attend, unqualifiedly endorsed the administration of the president, Miss Swanson, and expressed much gratification at the excellence of the work being done. The session just closed has been a highly satisfactory one, notwithstanding the fact that for two months in the Spring the attendance was reduced very greatly by the prevalence of small-pox in Woodville, and by the breaking out of one case at the college. Fortunately, however, no other case occurred; the teachers kept bravely at work; after a few weeks the absent pupils all came back, and by diligent effort succeeded in bringing up their studies.

A most convincing evidence of the thoroughness of the work done at this school is to be found in the fact that nine of the graduates who have gone out during the past three years have succeeded in obtaining first-grade certificates to teach in the public schools. One of these now has an important position in the Woodville Graded School. Several of them have been fortunate enough to secure three-year certificates. As Pres. W. W. Smith has recently offered to give a scholarship in the Randolph-Macon Female College to any graduate of Edward McGehee designated by the faculty, this valuable scholarship has been awarded this year to Miss Mary Netterville.

Miss Georgia Swanson, who, for the past three years, has been the efficient head of this worthy institution, is a woman of extensive culture, great refinement, earnest piety, and strong determination, and is deserving of large success in her work.

The college is located in one of the loveliest spots imaginable. The grounds cover twenty acres, or more, and are delightfully shaded by oak, beech, white gum, and other trees of massive size. The main building is a new, neat, and comfortable structure, and is roomy enough for present needs. A splendid corps of teachers has already been engaged for the next session, which promises to be a most successful one.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The annual register of Millsaps College, a copy of which lies on our table, shows that that institution, notwithstanding the yellow fever scare and the quarantines, which unfavorably affected the attendance at the opening of the Fall term, has had a most prosperous session. One hundred and sixty students were matriculated, one hundred and seven of these being in the college department proper. Though only nine years old, Millsaps College has already over one hundred alumni, a large number of whom are filling important positions in professional life and in business, and nearly all of them are giving a splendid account of themselves. The courses of instruction outlined in the catalogue indicate that work of high grade is being done, while intimate acquaintance with the various members of the faculty, whom we know to be teachers of ability, experience, and superior equipment, convinces us that the instruction given is of the very best.

Young Mississippians who contemplate going to college this Fall ought, by all means, to send for a Millsaps College catalogue, and examine it carefully. Board can be had at very reasonable rates, either in private families just outside the campus, or at one of the Students' Homes on the college grounds. It would be well-nigh impossible to find a school where the moral influences are more positive and wholesome.

Millsaps College has at its head one of the ablest and most cultured educators in the South, is partially endowed, splendidly located, and, in fact, is one of the most desirable schools we know of.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

We are grateful for a copy of the annual catalogue of Centenary College, which, under the energetic and highly efficient administration of President I. W. Cooper, has taken on new life, and is doing work of unquestioned excellence and thoroughness. A glance at its pages reveals the fact that since Centenary was ceded to our church in 1845, it has turned out a host of graduates, three hundred and twenty-six in all, a large per cent. of whom have become men of eminence and great usefulness in the various walks of life. While some of these have crossed the dark river, a goodly number remain to bless the world with their beneficent influence and superior training. Centenary's record is indeed an honorable one. The enrollment the past session was the largest since the war, and there is every prospect that it will be greatly increased the coming session. The buildings at Centenary are quite imposing in appearance, and are now in excellent repair. The courses of study required compare very favorably with those offered at other Southern colleges of high standing. We are glad to say that Centenary keeps up her record of being a school that is thoroughly pervaded with the spirit of religion. As board can be had at Centenary at remarkably low rates, its halls ought to be filled to overflowing with students. If you would like to know more about Centenary, send to Dr. Cooper for a catalogue.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

The condition of affairs in China is one of the utmost gravity. Several days ago the news came from that troubled land that all the foreign embassies in the city of Pekin had been destroyed by the Boxers, who seem to have gotten complete control of the capital, and that the German minister had been killed. Further information from Pekin was, at the hour of going to press, unobtainable.

On last Sunday morning the Chinese forts at Taku, located at the mouth of the Pei Ho river, opened fire upon the foreign warships assembled in the harbor. The British, Russian, French, and Japanese war vessels promptly returned the fire, and after a seven hours' bombardment the forts surrendered. Two British vessels are said to have been sunk. The Chinese are reported to have lost about four hundred men. It is not definitely known whether the Chinese Government is responsible for the fight at Taku, or whether it was due to the "Boxers," who may have captured the forts, and who are bent upon driving out the "foreign devils." It is now well-nigh certain that the Empress Dowager, who is an inveterate foe to reform, is in collusion with the revolutionists.

If it turns out that the Chinese Government has really flaunted defiance in the face of the civilized world, the inevitable result will be that as soon as peace and order have been restored, the present Empress will be deposed by the foreign powers acting in concert, and the Government will be re-established upon an entirely new footing. There is a large party in China strongly in favor of reform and of the introduction of Christian civilization.

The European nations are hurrying troops to the Celestial Empire, and the prospect looks dark indeed, for there is no telling what complications may arise. President McKinley has ordered several regiments of American troops to be sent at once from Manila to China, and Admiral Kempff, of our navy, has been instructed to do his best to protect American interests in China, and to act in concurrence with the other powers in restoring order.

Evidently the old order of things in China is doomed, and Chinese bigotry and conservatism are in their death throes. The time has past when any nation can shut herself up, as it were, in a shell, and say to the outside world, "You shall not enter."

Let fervent and continued prayer go up to heaven in behalf of the faithful missionaries in China whose lives—and, in fact, the lives of all foreigners—are now in the greatest danger. Should we not believe that God will overrule the present struggle for the good of his kingdom and for China's good?

A NEW BOOK.

This volume, fresh from the gifted pen of Bishop Hendrix, presents in permanent form the magnificent series of articles recently contributed by him to the columns of the Nashville Advocate, together with several additional chapters bearing upon the subject of equipment for ministerial service. At the time of their first appearance the articles in question attracted wide attention and elicited exceedingly favorable comment, and the announcement of their appearance in book form will be welcome news to the ministers of our church and to Christian workers generally. While there are scores of books, new and old, relating to preachers and preaching, the volume before us is unique in its treatment and, in large degree, in the field it covers. In fact, we have not seen anywhere in the literature addressed particularly to preachers a more inspiring and edifying book than this one, which is unmistakably the product of large experience, much thought and prayer, as well as of an earnest desire to assist ministers in attaining higher and larger usefulness. Though written more especially for the benefit of the young Methodist itinerants, pastors of all denominations, whether just entering the ministry or long in the harness, will find this a highly enjoyable and stimulating book. We do not see how any Christian who reads it can fail to have his heart fired anew with the determination to do better and more faithful work for the Master.

Says Bishop Hendrix, in the preface: "This volume is not written to combat prejudice against an educated ministry such as Augustine needed to meet in his day, when neglect of training was resulting in the deterioration of the church. It is rather designed to stimulate and save from arrested development any whose ideals are less than the highest."

The book contains a charming introduction from the pen of Bishop Galloway, from which we quote as follows: "Trained service is most efficient, and nowhere is skill more needed than in the service of our Lord. Those summoned to places of toil and trust in Christ's kingdom should have mental and spiritual training as well as spiritual fervor and fire. A mere desire to serve is not sufficient qualification for service. Passion for the sea does not make a great sailor. We want 'a ministry of axes;' but the ax laid at the root of the tree must be wielded by a skillful as well as a strong arm."

Every preacher in our church, whether local or itinerant, ought, by all means, to get a copy of this valuable book. Lay workers, too, would derive great profit from reading it. The appendix contains an excellent index.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

For almost a half century this institution has stood as a beacon light to Louisiana and adjoining States. Of the 230 graduates sent forth many rank high as influential moulders of the thought of and character of Southern womanhood. An era of increased prosperity began when Prof. T. S. Sligh and wife assumed control, peculiarly fitted as they are by broad scholarship, progressive thought and high ideals. The general public has responded very generously to assure him patronage.

Dr. J. L. Pierce's able and eloquent commencement sermon set the key-note of the exercises. Hon. Liverman, of Mansfield, delivered the address before the Alumni Association. Col. J. W. Nicholson, of the State University, made a very able and unique address on education from the stand-point of law and fraternity. Mrs. McHenry, of Monroe, delivered an address to the class of 1900.

The Board of Trustees passed resolutions of high appreciation of the work done by its faithful president, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard. Bro. Sheppard's ill health forced him to resign. Dr. Sawyer was elected in his place.

Commencement Day was, perhaps, this year the best and greatest day in the history of the college. Nothing could have been more interesting and impressive than Pres. Sligh's farewell address to the largest class, with one exception, ever sent out from this institution. The class just graduated is composed of twelve of Louisiana's most precious gems.

The graduates are as follows: Miss Willie McKnight; Miss Lizzie Calhoun, A. B., of Claiborne parish; Miss Lula Edwards, of Texas; Miss Roy Scales, A. B., of Mansfield; Miss Gussie Wafer, M. E. L., of Claiborne; Miss Nannie Suttler, A. B., of Lake Charles, La.; Miss Nannie Phillips, A. B., of St. Landry parish; Miss Mary Nelson, A. B., of De Soto parish; Miss Mary Keith, A. B., of Caddo parish; Miss Lillian Hodges, M. E. L., of Webster parish; Miss C. Brown, A. B., of Bossier parish; Miss Middleton, A. B., of De Soto parish; Miss Irma Lee Nabors, A. B., of De Soto.

NOTES.

Rev. John F. Foster, pastor of Felicity Street Church, is at Caspiana, La., helping in a meeting. His pulpit was filled last Sunday by the assistant editor.

We are gratified to learn that there is a slight improvement in the condition of Sister Ellen N. Parker, of this city, who has been seriously ill at Covington for ten days, or more.

Rev. P. O. Lowery, pastor of Burgundy Street Church, is in attendance upon the Preachers' Biblical and Theological Institute, which is being held at Vanderbilt University, June 20-29, inclusive, under the direction of the Examining Committees of the Tennessee Conference.

Rev. George D. Parker, pastor of Carrollton Avenue Church, left last Monday for Asheville, N. C., where he has gone to attend the Southern Students' Summer Conference. He will be absent eight or nine days.

The Seashore Camp Meeting, an advertisement of which will be found on our eighth page, will this year begin July 11, and continue eight or ten days. The L. and N. R. R. will sell round-trip tickets at reduced rates from July 7 to 21, inclusive, good to return Aug. 31.

Rev. Wm. G. Evans, the enterprising pastor at Haughton, La., in a recent note to the ADVOCATE, says: "My work is in good shape, and the prospects for a successful year were never better. Rev. R. P. Howell was with me lately in a Twentieth Century Rally, at which—with a very small congregation—we raised $175. I do not anticipate any trouble in getting at least $300."

Rev. W. L. Graves, the pastor at Lula, Miss., sends us the following highly gratifying news: "We have just passed through another local-option contest in Coahoma county. There was earnest, persistent, and prayerful effort confronted by the liquor force, reluctant to yield, but the county went dry by a large majority. This is the fourth victory here in succession. We have no 'blind tigers' now. The sheriff keeps up with those fellows."

We have been honored with an invitation to attend the marriage of Miss Anne Nugent, of Jackson, Miss., to Mr. Wilbourn Smith Gibbs, of Texas, which happy event will take place in the First Methodist Church, Jackson, on Tuesday, June 26, at seven o'clock. The bride is the daughter of the late Col. Wm. L. Nugent, and is one of Mississippi's loveliest and most accomplished maidens. We extend to them in advance our warmest congratulations, and wish them a life full of brightness and joy.

Last Sabbath, at First Church, Jackson, Miss., Dr. W. B. Murrah represented the cause of Christian education in an eloquent and forceful sermon. The collection, added to amounts previously subscribed, makes an aggregate of $2,868 contributed by First Church to the Twentieth Century Thankgiving Fund, with more to follow. All night those who braved the inclement weather were highly entertained by Dr. John Burrus Fearn and Dr. Annie Walters Fearn, who talked of their mission work in China.

Rev. Dr. W. H. LaPrade spent last Sabbath in Baton Rouge, where, at the morning service, he delivered an address for Pastor E. N. Evans on the Twentieth Century Education Movement. He was greeted by a splendid audience. No collection was taken, but cards were distributed and contributions will be asked for at an early date. He reports that Bro. Evans is in fine favor with his flock. In the Doctor's absence the pulpit was filled by Prof. Thos. Carter, of Tulane University. Dr. LaPrade was a visitor last week to the Alexandria District Conference which met at Bunkie. He mentions that there is much enthusiasm in that section over the Twentieth Century Movement.

We are in receipt of a copy of the General Minutes of our church for the year 1899, edited by Dr. Tigert. The volume contains 268 pages, and may be obtained from our agents at Nashville for fifty cents, net. It is a highly interesting book to those who wish to know something in detail about the work and progress of the various Conferences, and also of the church as a whole. We quote the following statistics taken from the summary given in the back: Total number of traveling preachers, 6,1[illegible] increase over 1898, 56. Total number of members, 1,464,808; net increase, 6,549. Infants baptized, 26,967; increase over preceding year, 855. Adults baptized, 43,561; increase, 1,505. Total number in charges, 4,966; increase, 142. Total number Epworth Leagues, 3,382; increase, 27. Epworth Leaguers, 119,748; decrease, 154. Total number of local preachers, 5,3[illegible] decrease, 146.

THE PIANOS AND ORGANS Represented in our exclusive agencies embrace all the requirements of a perfect high-grade instrument. We make terms to suit, and guarantee our goods.

The Mississippi Chautauqua.

Beginning July 19, and ending July 31, the sixth annual assembly of the Mississippi Chautauqua will be held at Crystal Springs, Miss. During its continuance over twenty-five lectures and concerts will be given, some of the finest lecturers and musicians in America having been engaged for the Chautauqua.

If a season ticket is procured, these lectures will cost only ten cents apiece, many of which elsewhere, it is said, would cost a dollar, or more. Among the distinguished speakers who will be present we note the names of Hon. John Temple Graves, Ira M. Boswell, Rev. Charles Lane, Hon. Charles Phelps Leland, Ph. D., LL.D., and Hon. Wellington Vandiver. The famous Ottumwas Male Quartette will be present most of the time, and will give concerts each evening in addition to singing before each morning lecture. An "Argelns Orchestral" has also been secured, and will render music that will add very materially to the pleasure of the Chautauquans.

Gov. Longino, of Mississippi, will deliver the opening address. A State elocutionary contest will be held on Wednesday evening, July 25. It would be difficult indeed to find a more attractive place to spend ten or twelve days during the heated term than the Mississippi Chautauqua, located only half a mile from Crystal Springs, in a cool forest, beside one of the loveliest artificial lakes in the South. A large new hotel has recently been erected on the grounds, and in connection with it a fine restaurant will be run. We would advise all who desire information concerning the Chautauqua to write to Prof. F. L. Trawick, Secretary and General Manager, Crystal Springs, Miss.

Notes from Corinth District.

I send you a short report of the district. The preachers are all hard at work except Bro. W. D. Burroughs, whose health gave way recently. He went to Greenwood Springs for awhile. He now writes me that he is improving every day, and hopes to be able to resume work within two weeks. His pulpits are being filled by Bro. M. T. McLain, a local preacher on his charge, who is a good and useful man. I wish we had many more such local preachers.

Bro. H. T. Gaines, of Iuka, has had a good meeting. He was assisted by Bro. McIntosh, of Grenada.

Bro. Bradley, of Booneville, has just closed a meeting of great value to the church. He will begin again soon, when he and the people have taken a little rest.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference will convene in St. Francisville, Thursday morning, July 5, at 9:30, A Missionary Institute has been arranged to open Tuesday morning, July 3, and continue through Wednesday, the fourth. A comprehensive program has been prepared, and able speakers, both clergymen and laymen, will present various phases of the subject of missions. The interests of the Woman's Missionary Societies will be represented by experienced workers among the ladies of the district. It is desired and expected that all the preachers of the district will be present at the Institute, and a most hearty and urgent invitation is extended to all others to participate.

The District Conference will conclude Sunday, July 8, on which day the new church at St. Francisville will be dedicated. This is one of the most beautiful houses of worship in the State, and is easily more attractive than any other on the Baton Rouge district. It is chiefly to the energy, business ability, and taste of our pastor, Rev. George P. White, that we owe this very considerable gain for our Methodism. No debt remains upon the church-building, but it will be necessary to provide a considerable sum yet to pay for the pews. It would be appropriate for each visitor and member of the Conference to bring an offering for this purpose.

A Twentieth Century Meeting will be held Friday evening, July 6, and the interests of Centenary College and Johnston Institute will be presented Saturday morning.

Let all who intend coming send in their names at once to Rev. Geo. P. White, St. Francisville, La. Let the preachers of the district send in names of lay delegates who are expected to attend.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE COMMITTEES.

Report of Treasurer of Board of Missions, North Mississippi Conference.

We give below the report of the treasurer of the Board of Missions of the North Mississippi Conference up to June 6. The report shows we are very much behind last year at this time. We are paying interest on at least $5,000 that should and could have been placed in the hands of the treasurer in two months after Conference, if a faithful effort had been made.

The report of some of these charges show what might have been done in every charge if the pastors had kept it before the people.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss., EDITOR.

LOUISIANA.

REV. H. R. SINGLETON, Ruston, La. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Turn your face toward Atlanta!

That Conference is going to be the finest thing that ever happened to Southern Leagnedom.

Special trains will be run through Southern Louisiana on the Southern Pacific, and through North Louisiana on the V., S. & P. Low rates are being secured on all roads.

The new officers in the Farmerville League are: Mrs. H. B. Thomasson, president; J. R Simmons, Mrs. R. D. Simmons, and Miss Jessie Manning, vice-presidents; Miss Bertha Cook, secretary, and Miss Lillian Gilbert, treasurer. They have lost a number of good members recently, but those officers will pull things through all right.

Miss Ruth Watson is the president and Thomas Brooks the secretary of the Calhoun League. They have 40 members, and are doing good work in the first and third departments.

"The district organizers should, by all means, attend the District Conferences to urge the pastors to organize Leagues, and those Leagues already organized to form a District League." So says our State President, and we say, Amen. A letter from Miss Carrie Sohwing, the Baton Rouge district organizer, shows that she is keenly alive to the responsibility of her work, and she plans to do a great deal of work during the Summer. The editor hopes she will keep the readers of the column posted.

First of all, of course, our duty is to our individual League Chapter. Then come the District and State Conferences. And now comes the Southern League Conference. Can you go? By all means go, if you can, and let us make our first Conference a success that will give an advance movement to all our Leaguer.

The State treasurer is getting anxious about finances. She says the Leagues are sending in their dues very slowly. If you have not already done so, please send 5 cents for every member you have to Miss Emma McNeese, Lake Charles, La.

The N. O. E. L. Union held an interesting meeting at Algiers on June 2. All the Leagues of the district were represented, and an interesting program was carried out. The election of officers resulted as follows: Rev. G. D. Parker, president; A. S. Daniels and Misses Nattie Sutcliffe and Ruth Scott, vice-presidents; M. B. DePass, secretary, and Thomas McKnight, treasurer. The report from the Epworth Mission showed it to be in good condition, and doing good work.

Program for the Epworth League Conference,

FRIDAY, 3 O'CLOCK P. M.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE, BENTON, LA. JUNE 29.

1. The Pastor's Relation to the League—Rev. J. E. Denson.
2. The League's Relation to the Pastor—Rev. M. G. Jenkins.
3. The League and Church Finances—Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer.
4. The League and the Twentieth Century Movement—Rev. R. P. Howell.
5. The League and Missions—Rev. J. M. Alford, Rev. J. F. Patterson.
6. Some Difficulties, and How to Meet Them—Rev. J. S. Sanders, Rev. J. O. Bennett.
7. How to Deepen the Spiritual Life of the League and Leaguer—Rev. R. J. Harp.
8. The Social Side of the League—Rev. J. B. Williams.
9. The Literary Department.
1. For Bible Study—Rev. H. J. Bollz.
2. For the Study of Methodism—Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard.
3. For the Study of General Literature—Rev. Elton Wilson.
4. How to Make It Succeed—Rev. J. M. Brown.

Let the talks be short and suggestive, and, above all, practical; something that can be put into practical service by the workers present.

WM. G. EVANS,
Conductor.

COURTLAND, MISS.

The second Quarterly Conference of the Courtland circuit was held at Center Hill the third Saturday and Sunday in May; Rev. W. S. Lagrone, P. E., in the chair. Every interest of the church was thoroughly investigated, and it was shown that some progress was being made. One-half the assessments ordered by the Conference are in hand in cash and subscriptions. We have five churches and six Sunday-schools, all using the Sunday-school Magazine and taking The Children's Visitor. The pastor reported 150 pastoral visits this quarter. Our salary is well up—not quite half paid. Three conversions and two accessions to the church were reported. Bro. Lagrone preached a good sermon Saturday, a fine sermon on Sunday; dedicated our church, administered the Lord's Supper, took the collections ordered by the Conference, and secured more than the church was assessed. From thence we went to Shiloh, preached at 3:30 P. M. to a full house, and preached again at 8 P. M., at Popes, to the delight of everyone.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

THE BOY AND THE SPARROW.

Once a sweet boy sat and swung on a limb;
On the ground stood a sparrow-bird, looking at him.
Now the boy he was good, but the sparrow was bad,
So it shied a big stone at the head of the lad,
And it killed the poor boy; and the sparrow was glad.

Then the little boy's mother flew over the trees,
"Tell me, where is my little boy, sparrow-bird, please!"
"He is safe in my pocket," the sparrow-bird said;
And another stone shied at the fond mother's head,
And she fell at the feet of the wicked bird, dead.

You imagine, no doubt, that the tale I have mixed;
But it wasn't by me that the story was fixed.
'Twas a dream a boy had after killing a bird;
And he dreamed it so lond that I heard every word,
And I jotted it down as it really occurred.

—Good Words.

COURTESY CONQUERS EVEN FOEMEN.

Politeness counts heavily in favor of a man in public life. Some men are polite just before election day, but exceedingly uncivil afterwards. In America, such men do not long prosper. Lincoln aptly declared that "you can not fool all the people all the time."

When Alonzo B. Cornell was governor of New York, he had a clerk so ungracious in manner that he frequently remained seated while callers at the capitol were obliged to remain standing as they attempted to transact business with him. One day a delegation came from a city in the western part of the State to plead for the life of a condemned man. The governor was seldom known to grant a pardon, but the visitors hoped, at least, that they would be accorded a proper hearing. After the clerk had kept them waiting for two hours in the outer hallway, he admitted them and accorded them permission to state their case to the governor—all standing. The executive refused to interfere, and told his visitors so.

The spokesman of the little party was Grover Cleveland, then a Buffalo attorney. In one year after the trip referred to he was himself elected governor of the State. When he visited the executive chamber a few days thereafter, Governor Cornell showed him over the apartments, and inquired if there was anything he wished to have done in advance of his inauguration.

"There is just one thing you can do for me, if you will," said Mr. Cleveland, "and that is to remove the clerk who kept me waiting outside so long when I was last here. It may teach him a lesson in politeness." The clerk was removed.

Aaron Burr attained the vice-presidency because of his magnetic and gracious persouality, defeating men with twice his honor and ability. Henry Clay was as charming in private as he was eloquent in public. John Randolph, of Roanoke, meeting a bitter enemy in a narrow passage, was unable to pass. The other stood defiantly and exclaimed, "I never make way for a scoundrel!" Mr. Randolph stepped aside, and, tipping his hat, politely said, "Sir, I always do."

"Who is the American consul here?" asked Captain Enlate, of the "Vizcaya," in the harbor of San Juan de Puerto Rico, after he had trained the guns of the great warship upon the consulate and stepped ashore.

"Philip C. Hanna," was the answer.

"I will anchor elsewhere, if that is the case," and the "Vizcaya's" position was changed. "I will not threaten my polite and amiable friend," was the only explanation he would give. Philip C. Hanna, it was afterwards learned, had won the regard of the gallant Spaniard in other lands, before the Spanish-American War was dreamed of, by little courtesies and attentions.—Success.

THE CHILDREN'S GIFT.

Earle and Daisy were two dear little children of seven and nine who lived on a farm with plenty of chickens, cows, sheep, and horses, but they never thought much how nice all these things were as they fed the chickens and ran errands for the family, or played merrily about on the grass that formed a green carpet under the trees during the warm Summer days.

"To-morrow is mama's birthday," said papa one morning at the breakfast table. "I think we must have a chicken pie in honor of the day."

"And a birthday cake, too," said little Earle, as he remembered the nice one he had when he was seven years old.

Next morning, as papa was going away to his work, Daisy asked, "Papa, can't Earle and I do something to earn some pennies?"

After thinking a moment he said, "Why, yes, old Brindle has lost her bell in the wood pasture, and if you can find it, I will give you five cents each."

"Let us go, Earle," cried the little girl, and away they ran eager to begin the search. It was no easy task, for there were so many thickets in the pasture that it took a long time to look into each one, but the children ran hither and thither, peering into this place and that in hope of soon earning the promised reward. When they were nearly tired out Earle spied the bell in some bushes where the strap had caught. Wearied and hungry after their morning's work, they trudged homeward, and in a little while were rejoicing over their ten bright pennies.

Mama asked, "What are you going to buy with your money? for I suppose you will spend it when you go for the mail this afternoon."

"It's a secret, mama," they replied as they smiled at each other. "Wait until we come home."

Every little while during the afternoon Daisy or Earle would run into the house and ask if it were not time to go to the village.

At last their mother said, "It is three o'clock now, and you can go if you wish."

She watched them running down the road holding each other's hands, and wondered what they intended to purchase with their pennies, for they usually told her all their plans. In an hour she could hear through the open window their happy voices and shouts of fun as they ran across the porch.

"See, mama," they called as they ran into the room, and Daisy held up a pretty white handkerchief, "see what we bought for you, a birthday present," and they smiled radiantly through the dust that covered their flushed little faces. "Isn't it lovely?"

"Why, it's beautiful, my darlings," said mama, with a sudden tugging at her heart, as she gathered each little form into a loving embrace.

Her appreciation of their gift filled the children with delight, and Daisy remarked with a sigh of contentment, "I think birthdays are lovely."—Michigan Advocate.

THE BLIND CHILD.

Bishop Ryle, of England, says the happiest child he ever saw was a little child eight years old who was quite blind. She had never seen the sun or moon or grass or flowers or trees or birds or any of those pleasant things which have gladdened your eyes all your life. More trying still, she had never seen her father or mother, yet she was the happiest child of all the thousands that the Bishop had seen. She was journeying on the railway this day I speak of. No one she knew was with her—not a friend nor relative to take care of her—yet, though totally blind, she was quite happy and well contented.

"Tell me," she said to some one near by, "how many people there are in this car. I am quite blind and can see nothing." And she was kindly told.

"Are you not afraid to travel alone?" asked a gentleman.

"No," she replied, "I am not frightened; I have traveled before, and I trust in God, and people are always good to me."

"But, tell me," said the Bishop, "why you are so happy."

"I love Jesus, and he loves me. I sought Jesus and found him," was the reply.

The Bishop then began to talk to her about the Bible, and soon found that she knew a great deal about it.

"And how did you learn so much of the Bible?" he asked.

"My teacher used to read it to me, and I remembered all I could," she said.

"And what part of the Bible do you like the best?" asked the Bishop.

"I like the story of Christ's life in the gospels," she said; "but what I like best of all is the three last chapters of Revelation."

Having a Bible with him, the Bishop read these three chapters to her as the train dashed swiftly along.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"NO SWEARING ALLOWED."

The young man told of in the following story for the Lutheran World was made of the right kind of stuff for a soldier. Would that we had more such fearless ones:

The above notice was written in a good plain hand, and stuck up on the wall of the barrack-room by the corporal in charge. He had been converted shortly before. At first the men laughed. He had been a rough character, he would not keep it a week, etc. But the Lord kept him; and among other results the notice was stuck up. The men respected him, he was consistent, he was brave, and the order was obeyed.

There was to be an official inspection. A great general was coming. There was washing, scrubbing, scouring, polishing. Many paintings, pictures and papers were taken off the walls, as likely to meet with disapproval.

"No Swearing Allowed." "Corporal, you'd better stow that thing away."

"No, it is there to stay, and I'll take the consequences."

It caught the general's eye.

"Who is the corporal in charge here?"

"I am, sir," stepping forward and saluting.

"Did you put that placard there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Do you enforce it?"

"I do, sir."

The general stretched forth his hand—to tear it down? No, but to shake hands with the corporal. "I wish all our corporals were like you, and that the same rule was enforced everywhere."

IT IS easier to imitate than to originate. In White Lead the standard brands only are imitated. The "so-called" White Leads, — mixtures of Zinc, Barytes, etc., are branded "Pure White Lead," "Strictly Pure White Lead," etc., in imitation of the genuine; otherwise these misleading brands could not be so readily sold. The brands in the margin are genuine.

SWEETENING MARY.

"I want a drink," said baby.

"Go to the kitchen. Mary will give you a drink," said mother.

"I don't want to," baby demurred; "Mary is cross."

"Why, what made her cross?" asked mother.

"I dess I did sumpin' to her," said baby.

"Then, if you have done something to make her cross, you would better go and do something to sweeten her," suggested mother.

Baby thought over it a minute, and then trudged to the kitchen. "You are a sweet Mary," he said, "and I want to hug you."

Mary stopped her work and stooped, and he threw his arms about her neck and kissed her, and said, "I love you two hundred bushels."

When he came back, smiling, mother asked, "What did you do to Mary this time?"

"O, I sweetened her, I dess," was the reply.—Our Morning Guide.

MARY'S OCCUPATION.

At the great exposition in Omaha it was the custom for the people to register or sign their names in the different State buildings. People who registered were asked to give their occupations, so that the book read like this: "John Smith, farmer;" "Thomas Brown, carpenter," and so on.

A little golden-haired girl asked that she might register. She was told to write her name and occupation; and this is what she wrote: "Mary Jones; help mama."

What a beautiful occupation Mary had! I think that we all ought to have this occupation. I am sure of this, that every child who tries to help mama and to please Jesus will have the happiest possible life—Richmond Christian Advocate.

Excursions.

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

HAYNES—Bro. Aachia M. Haynes was born fifteen miles above Columbia, Marion county, Miss., April 14, 1836, and died at the same place, April 10, 1900.

Bro. Haynes was twice married. He was first married to Miss Adaline White in 1858, with whom he lived two years, when God took her to himself. June 19, 1895, he was married to Miss Fannie Walden, daughter of W. W. and M. E. Walden, of Tryna, Miss. He leaves a wife and two children, an aged and afflicted mother, one brother and two sisters, to mourn his death.

About two months before his death he was cutting down a tree, and when he saw it was going to fall on a yearling, he undertook to run the yearling out from under the tree, and while striving to save the life of the beast, he had his own, the tree falling across his back and breaking it. He lived under this pain and suffering for nearly two months. He was never able to move himself again. He endured his suffering with Christian fortitude, and without complaining. I was with him the day of the accident, and visited him afterwards, and found him patient and resigned to the will of God. He joined the M. E. Church, June, in the Fall of 1895, of which he was a loyal and consistent member till his death. His regret was the leaving of his wife and little children and aged mother, who were dependent upon him for their support. Everyone that I heard speak of him said he was a good man. He was so good and kind to his family, and helpful to his neighbors. A merchant with whom he had dealt for many years said to me that he was one of the most honorable and honest men with whom he had ever dealt. Would to God this could be said of every member of the Methodist Church. It is a great loss, not only to loved ones, but to the whole community, to lose such a man. Truly God's ways are past finding out. We feel comforted with the blessed assurance that he has entered into his eternal reward, and that God will be a husband to the widow and a father to the fatherless. W. M. Williams, P. C.

ELZEY—Lizzie Lamkin was born in Columbus, Ga., Feb. 13, 1835. Her parents, Simpson L. and Narcissa Lamkin, moved to Mississippi when she was quite a child, and settled at Holmesville, Pike county. She united with the M. E. Church, South, when quite young. She was educated at Cokesbury College, and, after leaving school, devoted twenty years of her life as a teacher, in which vocation she was eminently successful. There are but few teachers who have left their work more indelibly impressed on the minds of their pupils, and her special delight in latter years has been to meet with her old pupils, who number many scores, through Pike and adjoining counties. She was married to Rev. E. L. Tarver in April, 1883, with whom she lived a little more than seven years, being left a widow on May 13, 1890. On June 18, 1891, she was married to R. A. Elzey, of McComb City, who survives her. She was a woman of more than usual frugality, and accumulated during her lifetime a competency, which she left for the maintenance of a maiden sister and a little orphan whom she was raising. One who was intimate with her writes that during her last illness, which was about a month, her suffering was patiently borne, and her faith was clear, passing away quietly on the third of April, 1900. Her body was laid in the family burying-ground near Adams Church, in Lincoln county, there to await the resurrection.

May the blessings of God be with the bereaved husband, brothers, sisters and relatives, and may each live so there will be no separation in that great day!

M. L. Burton.

McGHEE—Susan Margaret McGhee, eldest daughter of William and Susan Felrly, and granddaughter of Rev. W. G. Evans, of Harrison county, Miss., died at her father's, in McLaurin, Miss., Feb. 11, 1900 aged nineteen years and fourteen days. In October, 1898, Maggie was happily married to Willie McGhee, by which act she became a step-mother to his sweet little motherless boy. Though so young, she lovingly assumed the responsibilities of a step-mother, and until God called little Clarence home to heaven, she was all that a mother could be to him. By her patience and devotion to husband and child she exemplified those noble qualities characteristic of a true woman.

Maggie joined the M. E. Church, South, in Moss Point, Miss., when fourteen years of age. Although for several years she was almost entirely deprived of church privileges, yet she never forgot her obligations as a church member.

In childhood Maggie was a bright, sweet girl, and developed into a lovely woman, beautiful not only in face and form, but also in character. "To know her was to love her." Besides fond parents, loving brothers and sisters, and a devoted husband, she left a sweet little girl two weeks old, which came as a gift on her nineteenth birthday. We now see through a glass darkly, and can not understand why one so young and pure should be taken from us, but we know that "God doeth all things well," and we humbly ask for grace to say, "Father, thy will be done."

Her loving aunt, (Mrs.) E. Lou Wyatt.

HESTER—Mrs. Rebecca Hester (nee McRee) was born in North Carolina, Dec. 25, 1816, and died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Price, near Hamburg, Miss., April 14, 1900. She was married Jan. 8, 1835, to Mr. Josiah Hester, with whom she lived happily until his death, which occurred Dec. 8, 1880, their home during almost the whole of their married life being in Copiah county, Miss. She was the mother of nine children, six of whom are still living. She leaves thirty five grandchildren and fifty-five great-grandchildren. She joined the Methodist Church at twelve years of age, and was a consistent member thereof until death. She was a devoted wife, an affectionate mother, and a kind neighbor. Though never religiously demonstrative, her daily life bore testimony that she "had been with Jesus." In all the relationships of life she ever manifested that highest quality of the Christian life—a self-sacrificing spirit. On account of the infirmities of age she had much leisure during her last years, and a large part of this leisure was spent in reading the Bible, and other religious books and papers. When the end came, it found her ready. She left a bright testimony to the power of Christ to save. She asked those of her children and grandchildren who were present to meet her in heaven, and sent a similar request to the absent ones. May all her loved ones heed that dying message!

XXX.

TITTLE—We are sad to chronicle the death of Robert L. Tittle, which occurred near Rulevill, Sunflower county, Miss., at ten o'clock on the morning of the fifteenth of April, 1900. Mr. Tittle lived in this community several years. He joined Shrock's Chapel Church during the pastorate of Bro. E. F. Elgar, and was a pure and true Christian gentleman. He left here for the swamp in January, 1899, and was working so faithful so he could prepare a home for his betrothed bride. His orphan niece, to whom he had been so good and kind, was sick with slow fever, and he stayed up as long as possible to wait on her. He had hematuria, then congestion; was delirious for some days, and called the name of his loved one several times. Our head is bowed with sorrow, and our heart yearns for the loved one. None but those who have passed through the same dark hours can realize our grief. We have the sweet assurance that we can meet him again, for he said before he died that he was going to heaven.

May God bless and strengthen us, so that when we are called up higher, we shall be ready to clasp his hand when we meet on the happy golden shore!

One who loved him, D.

Shrock, Miss.

WEATHERBY—Resolutions on the death of Bro. George M. Weatherby, a member of Acona Sunday-school, adopted May 6, 1900:

Whereas, The Acona Sunday-school is called to mourn the loss of one of its oldest and most honored members, George M. Weatherby; And, whereas, In our departed brother we recognized the highest type of a loyal and faithful Christian, who exemplified through his long life the sacred principles of the Divine Master, and upon which he founded his church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of George M. Weatherby this Sunday-school has lost one of its most prompt and zealous members, whose presence gave hope to the older members, and inspired the younger with greater zeal, and whose consistent life and simple, child-like faith were a lesson to all.

Resolved, That we hereby tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in this, their sorrow, and would point them to that One who alone can give consolation.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread on the Record of our Sunday-school, a copy be furnished to the family of our deceased brother, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans and Nashville Advocates, the Lexington Advertiser and Durant News for publication.

Respectfully submitted,

John Belford, P. M. Digge, J. Moore, Committee.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

WINE OF CARDUI

How a Woman Suffers.

Howell, Ind., Nov. 26.
I will always praise Wine of Cardui. It has done me more good than all the medicines I have ever taken in my life. Please send a book about female diseases to the ladies whose names I enclose.
Mrs. MINNIE STODGHILL.

McElree's Wine of Cardui

It isn't necessary for a woman to give particulars. When she says she has "female troubles", other women know what that means. It means days and nights of endless suffering. It means headaches which no tongue can describe. It means that terrible bearing and dragging down in the lower abdomen. It means agonizing backache, and shoulder ache, and arm ache, and aches in the lower limbs. it means nerves on edge—the blues—despondency and loss of hope. It means debilitating drains that the doctors call leucorrhœa. it means martyrdom—sometimes even death seems preferable. And still Wine of Cardui will utterly put those diseases and pains to rout. It has cured thousands of cases when nothing else on earth would. To the budding woman, to the bride, to the wife, to the expectant mother, to those going through the Change of Life, this Vegetable Wine is a blessing.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address Rev. W. C. Black.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the Advocate free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Over 6,000,000 people are receiving relief in India.

Lord Roberts cables that Klerksdorp surrendered June 9.

The battleship "Oregon" has been ordered to China.

Baden-Powell has been further rewarded. He is now a lieutenant general.

Mrs. Gladstone, widow of William E. Gladstone, the English statesman, is dead.

Plans for the erection of a new Capitol building for Mississippi, to be located at Jackson, have been selected.

Admiral Kempff cables the Navy Department that there are 2500 men on the road to Peking for the relief of the legations.

American painters have received more awards in gold medals at the Paris Exposition than competitors of any other nation save France.

With the action of five States, on June 14, Mr. Bryan has now the necessary instructed vote to secure him the Democratic nomination for President.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler has received his commission as brigadier general in the regular army, and has been assigned to the command of the Department of the Lakes.

President Kruger has established a printing press in his car capital, and is grinding out paper notes with which to pay off his troops. He clings to his stock of gold coin.

The Republican National Committee has decided the Louisiana contest in favor of the "Lily Whites," the delegation-at-large headed by Warmoth being placed on the roll.

Mr. Lloyd C. Grisom, United States charge d'affaires at Constantinople, is pressing for a reply to America's note regarding the missionary claims handed the Porte, May 21.

It is reported from Chinese sources that the British marines and bluejackets were engaged with Gen. Yung Fuh Siang's troops, and that many of the Chinese were killed.

The international naval force is in a tight place between Lang Fang and Yund Sun. Enormous masses of Chinese soldiery are in front of them, and the railroad in their rear is being cut.

Russia and Germany are to increase their forces, and it is expected there will be 10,000 men concentrated at Tien Tsin within a few days. A number of sensational reports are being sent out through Shanghai.

Russian and Japanese troops are on their way to Peking. These forces are supplementary to those landed by the naval squadrons at Taku. So far as known at Washington the approval of the other powers has not been asked.

YOU NEVER READ of so many great cures elsewhere, as those effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla, did you? It is America's Greatest Medicine and possesses merit unknown to any other preparation. It is a wonderful invigorator.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25 cents.

A dispatch from Chung King says a riot has taken place at Yun Nu Fu. The buildings of the Chinese Inland Mission were partially destroyed, and those of the Roman Catholic and Bible Christian missions were utterly demolished.

The British War Department infers from the fact that Gen. Botha was enabled to check Lord Roberts' advance for two days and then retreat without losing a gun, that he must have a considerable force, and that the forward march will not be as easily accomplished as was thought.

Ten thousand Chinese troops, which were between Peking and the international forces advancing on that city, have disbanded and joined the "Boxers." It is asserted that the Chinese Government does not consider itself responsible for any encounter which takes place between the international forces and the rioters.

The Taku forts have been captured after a combined attack by the foreign warships. Two British ships are reported sunk. Three men on a German ship were killed and seven wounded. The British gunboat "Algernon" was damaged, and two of her officers and four men were injured.

The conditions in the Orient are critical. Dispatches from Tien Tsin state that all the legations at Peking, the capital of China, have been burned by the "Boxer" insurgents, and that the German Minister, Baron Von Kettler, has been killed. Since this news has reached the Occident, telegraphic communication between the interior and outside world has been totally interrupted. This accentuates the uncertainty of the situation, but it is recognized that the position of the foreign element in Peking is perilous.

Gratitude.

Dr. H. Mozley—Dear Sir: Since using your Lemon Elixir I have never had another attack of those fearful sick headaches, and thank God that I have at last found a medicine that will cure those awful spells.
MRS. ETTA W. JONES,
Parkersburg, West Virginia.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

I suffered with indigestion and dysentery for two long years. I heard of Lemon Elixir; got it; taken seven bottles and am now a well man.
HARRY ADAMS,
No. 1734 First Avenue, Birmingham, Ala.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured my husband, who was afflicted for years with large ulcers on his leg, and was cured after using two bottles; and cured a friend whom the doctors had given up to die, who had suffered for years with indigestion and nervous prostration. MRS. E. A. BEVILLE,
Woodstock, Ala.

A CARD.

For nervous and sick headaches, indigestion, biliousness and constipation (of which I have been a great sufferer) I have never found a medicine that would give such pleasant, prompt and permanent relief as Dr. H. Mozley's Lemon Elixir. J. P. SAWTELL, Griffin, Ga.,
Publisher Morning Call.

Delegates representing organized labor in England have sailed for New York for the purpose of presenting to the labor associations of America £4000 to be used toward the erection of a Ruskin Hall in St. Louis. Eighteen months ago the Americans founded a Ruskin Hall at Oxford.

For Seasickness
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.

DR. J. FOURNESS-BRICE, of S. S. "Tentonic," says: "I have prescribed it among the passengers traveling to and from Europe, and am satisfied that if taken in time, it will, in a great many cases, prevent seasickness."

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

will open its 68th session on the 19th of September, with the accommodations increased from 175 to 225 boarders.

This is a school for girls and young ladies in which all the solicitude, watchcare, supervision and inspiration of a cultured Virginia family prevail. Literature, Languages, Histories, Sciences, Music, Art, Elocution, etc., are taught under high standards. The Faculty and management is composed of 10 gentlemen and 20 ladies. The Eclectic system is used. Diplomas are issued in all departments, each of which is presided over by a University graduate. Graduates of this school are holding positions of influence and prominence in this and other countries. The school is located on the N. & W. Ry. (Shenandoah Division) 7 miles north of Roanoke City—a region abounding in scenery beautiful beyond description, and redolent of health. There are six main buildings, all of brick, with extensive verandas, all connected by covered ways. It owns 500 acres of land and valuable mineral springs—Sulphur and Chalybeate, which conduce largely to the health and vigor of growing girls. A delightful home for girls during the period of development, and girls from all sections delight to be here. Write for catalogue.

29th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING
Seashore Camp Grounds.
located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.
WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stilling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L and N R R Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 7 to 21, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

THY BROTHER'S BLOOD.

The love of Christ constrains us
To look abroad and see
The hunger and the suffering,
The want beyond the sea.

Our hearts go out in pity,
We speak a word of cheer;
But do we spend our utmost
Our consciences to clear?

A brother's life is ebbing,
And do you dare delay
To pour in wine and ointment,
To feed him while you may?

You whom God is blessing
With life and strength and food,
Or you who live in plenty,
To whom the Lord is good—

Say, what have you been doing
For your brother o'er the sea?
"To one of these ye have done it,
Ye have done it unto Me."

What is our Christian duty,
And what would Jesus do
If he were now among us,
And India's needs he knew?

Would he say, "It's no matter;
We need our means at home
To keep the church in order,
To preach of Heavenly Home"?

Or would he whisper gently,
"My gospel is for all—
To help the poor, the wretched,
And haste to hunger's call"?

Then brother, will you daily
When brothers are in need;
When e'en a crust is lacking,
The hungering ones to feed?

Let's open wide our purses;
We can not let them die!
Let's send a word of comfort,
And lift a prayer on High.

A SYMPATHIZER.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

The Commissioners of the District of Colnmbia have decided to appoint a committee of 100 citizens to co-operate with the committee in New York in the work of securing contributions for the relief of the famine sufferers in India. This action is the direct result of a visit to Washington of Rev. Justin E. Abbott, a missionary of the American Board, who has spent eighteen years in missionary work in India. He occupied the pulpit of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Sunday evening, and vividly described existing conditions in the famine-stricken sections of India from personal knowledge. Later in the week he made a statement covering the same ground before the District Commissioners and a few representative business men who had been specially invited to hear him. Following are extracts from that harrowing statement: 'While the distress that calls for aid is unequally distributed over the famine area, there is no place where the helplessness and misery of the people do not need the aid of sympathizing humanity. Starvation is not the only evil that famine brings, and a great cry of woe from childhood, womanhood, manhood and the dumb beast rises up to heaven. There are places, however, in native states, and regions bordering them, where immediate aid to save life is needed. The perfected system of the government of India, as embodied in the famine code, has less chance of reaching there, and people die like cattle, as patiently and as little cared for. Missionaries working in these native states have a very heavy burden to bear in seeing such suffering, and being powerless to relieve but a small portion of it. As an example of the conditions prevailing at such places, the description of an eye-witness will convey a partial idea." He then read the following, written by Mr. F. C. Aldrich, a correspondent of the Bombay Times: "'On reaching the station a porter was deputed to act as guide through the native city, where I went first. On every hand were the dead and dying. Sometimes it was an aged person; sometimes a youth or an infant. The sun beat down almost unbearably. The wind carried the sand in clouds. They sat or lay quietly in groups of from five to fifty beneath the trees by the roadside. Often one had fallen alone, and was left there to die as he had fallen. No one died in the center of a group, but one attempted to remove the body. Why should they? All have sat or lain down there to die, and one by one they meet death; they all wait for it. They are hopeless, and say there is no one who will give; so they resign themselves to their awful fate. Passing on through the city, about one mile, we come to its eastern boundary. In the dry bed of the river, and on its banks, were scores of the bodies of persons who had starved to death. It was dreadful to look upon the faces of the small children who had thus died. Marks of infant beauty, intermingled with those indicative of a painful death, were traceable. Near them, on every side, sat others, enduring the same terrible suffering, and awaiting the same terrible end. We longed to be able to picture the suffering of these people to those who have laid by of their wealth, not for a rainy day, but for thousands of them. One sight would be sufficient to open the long-closed purse, and thousands would pour out blessings on the givers.'" Mr. Abbott concluded by saying: "The Government of India is providing for six million daily; yet so great is the death rate in the hundreds of native states where the government has little control, that the call for help to favored America grows louder every hour."

Among the speakers at the quarterly meeting of the District W. C. T. U. were Mrs. Alice Rossiter Willard, late of London, England, who was associated with Lady Somerset in the publication of the London Union Signal, the British temperance organ, and Mrs. Young, of Massachusetts, who talked reminiscently of her student days at Evanston College, when the late Miss Frances Willard was dean of that institution. A vote of thanks was adopted to the two ladies for their talks about the two greatest women the temperance cause has produced.

Those who are interested in the American missionaries in China are not getting much consolation in answer to their appeals to the State Department. This isn't because Secretary Hay would not be glad to quiet their fears, but because he doesn't know any more than they do. Since the cutting of telegraphic communication with Pekin there has been no authentic information from there or other interior places in China. While officials are loth to believe the sensational stories of the massacre of all foreigners, including the entire diplomatic corps, in Pekin, the firing on the European fleet by the Chinese forts at Taku, and the fight resulting in the capture of these forts by the allied fleet, tends toward confirmation of the report that the "Boxers" and the troops of the Chinese government had combined against the foreigners. Several governments, including our own, are now hurrying troops and warships to China, and the Chinese will be made to pay dearly for any mistreatment of foreigners.

MILLSAPS COMMENCEMENT.

It was permitted the writer to indulge a cherished desire to visit Millsaps College during its recent commencement exercises. Arriving on the college grounds on the afternoon of Saturday, June 9, I was pleasantly domiciled in the home of the president, Dr. W. B. Murrah, where, with Dr. E. E. Hoss slated for the commencement sermon, and Rev. J. A. Anderson, of North Mississippi, I enjoyed the cordial hospitality of this refined home, dispensed with easy grace by Mrs. Murrah.

The presence and fraternal greetings of other brethren, lay and clerical, from the two patronizing Conferences enhanced the enjoyment of my visit. A most unexpected pleasure awaited me in the meeting of a former pupil and friend, Mrs. Brown. Soon after the Civil War, as Miss Mary Hollomon, she was a school-girl at Centenary Institute, Summerfield, Ala., in which school I was then a teacher. It was a joy to see her again after the lapse of so many years. She, with her amiable daughter, was stopping at the home of her brother, Rev. T. B. Holleman, of Jackson.

But social enjoyment is rather an interlude than otherwise to the regular exercises of a commencement occasion. I had barely adjusted myself to pleasant surroundings and fellowship when Dr. Murrah notified me that I was to be one of the judges in a unique contest, in which a number of young theologues were to compete for a gold medal, to be given to the one who should render in the best manner the introductory exercises to public worship, leaving out the prayer. The award for highest excellence was given to Mr. C. N. Guice, of Natchez. All did well.

On Sunday morning the chapel was filled with such an audience of the youth, beauty, chivalry and culture of Mississippi as might kindle the ardor and stir the enthusiasm of any preacher. Dr. Hoss was equal to the occasion. His subject was "Serving," based on the example of our Lord washing the disciples' feet. Albeit the Doctor had before him a type-written copy, his sermon took hold of his congregation with a vigorous grasp, and is spoken of by Dr. W. C. Black as a "masterpiece."

The sermon at night by Dr. J. C. Morris, of Memphis, was preached in the First Methodist Church to a large congregation. It was thoughtful, elaborate, and interesting, and is characterized by the "censor sermonem" quoted above as a "great one." As in the morning discourse, the preacher had before him a copy of his sermon in type or script. After the enjoyable and edifying services of the day my thoughts caught upon an interrogation point or so: Is it well for our representative preachers, coming before young men preparing for the ministry, to use their manuscripts? Would it not be better for the preacher, putting aside such extraneous helps, to throw himself, mind, heart, and soul, into his subject?

Monday forenoon a large audience again assembled in the chapel to witness an oratorical contest by representatives of the senior class. Six or seven young men delivered addresses which we do not remember to have heard excelled on like occasions. A friend sitting near me suggested that these addresses, printed together in book form, would make good reading. The gold medal was awarded to Mr. J. B. Mitchell, a young preacher of a preaching family. The presentation address and delivery of medals to the successful contestants in the several literary tournaments that had taken place was performed by Rev. T. L. Mellen in a felicitous and humorous manner. After all was ended a scene was enacted not in the printed program. A crowd of students rushed upon the rostrum, and, lifting J. B. Mitchell, with his approximate two hundred pounds avoirdupois, upon their shoulders, with a jolly shout bore him across the stage, down the steps, out into the wide hall. Almost immediately they were back again, and, taking hold of C. N. Guice, of slighter build, they accorded like stalwart honors—all very much to the amusement of the crowd of spectators.

Leaving Monday afternoon, much to my regret, I could not witness the conferring of degrees, nor hear the baccalaureate address of the president, and the annual address by Senator Money—all of which were to come off the next day.

This commencement was a gratifying finale of the ninth year, and a most prosperous session, in the history of the college. One hundred and sixty students were enrolled. Fourteen were graduated in the literary and fifteen in the law department. The cultured president is to be commended for his wise and able administration, and Bishop Galloway, with his Board of Trustees, for the success of their efforts in the establishment of a Christian college of high grade for the young men of Mississippi.

Let the more than 80,000 Methodists of Mississippi respond to the spirit of Major Millsaps, the founder and liberal patron of the institution, and greet the dawn of the twentieth century with a largely increased endowment fund. T. C. WIER.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

To the Preachers in Charge and Members of the M. E. Church, South, in the Forest District—

DEAR BRETHREN: During the recent commencement exercises of our Millsaps College, I was pleased to meet the Revs. W. L. Linfield, M. L. White, and B. W. Lewis, whose pastoral charges are within the bounds of this Forest district. Others of the pastors and assistants were looked for, but came not. This was a disappointment not only to me, but also to others. Your attendance had been advised and urged as far back as last January, so that arrangements might be made for attending the commencement of our great college for boys. It was for your good and the good of the college.

During the session just closed there have been in attendance from the bounds of our district only four students: Barney Edward Eaton and Henry Lonie Austin, from the Raleigh circuit; Holland Otis White, from the Carthage, and Frederick Davis Mellen, from the Forest circuit, and yet many more have gone to State schools, schools of other denominations, and private institutions elsewhere, notwithstanding solemn vows to "support the institutions of the church," and notwithstanding the fact that no better instruction in the usual college course, and not so good in the law, can be had elsewhere. No better faculty in either the literary or the law department can be found anywhere in our State or elsewhere in our Southland.

The exercises were of a high order. The declamations by the Freshmen were unusually well delivered, and nobody found fault with the award of the medal to Lewis R. Featherston. The oratorical contest between the Sophomores was a noteworthy affair, and the committee to award the medal were agreed that the young men all did better than any member of the committee could have done at the same time of life, or even now. Mr. C. D. Potter received the medal. The contest between the Lamar Society, represented by W. W. Holmes and L. F. Magruder on the one side, and B. E. Eaton and W. L. Duren on the other, provoked most favorable comment. Mr. Magruder, a grandson of the Rev. R. Abbey, was awarded the medal; but all agreed that a bright and useful and honorable future lies before all of the young men. The orations of the Seniors were of remarkable merit in diction as well as in delivery; were thoughtful as well as thought-provoking. Mr. James Boswell Mitchell, a preacher and the son of a preacher, was the recipient of the prize. The contest for the Gunning medal was of peculiar interest to preachers. The Rev. C. N. Guice was regarded by the judges as having read a Bible chapter and a hymn, and made announcements, with more ease, grace, clearness and propriety than the other contestants. To him went the medal.

The sermon by Dr. Hoss was less marred by the reading than any other sermon I ever heard read. It was filled with great thoughts, and provoked holy aspirations.

Some changes in the faculty have been made. Prof. Hanner goes elsewhere to study medicine. His place is to be filled by Prof. W. M. Young, who comes most highly commended. Dr. Mayes becomes dean of the law department, and Chief Justice Whitfield, of the State Supreme Court, and Judge W. R. Harper have accepted professorships, and become co-workers with him. With our Supreme Court, Circuit and Chancery Court, United States District Courts so often or nearly continuously in session, our great library and other advantages so accessible in Jackson, no other law school in the State, or in the South, can successfully compete with the law department of our own Millsaps College.

Brethren, you can, without hesitation, commend this college, and urge our people and all others to patronize it. Our sons need not be sent elsewhere for a liberal and sound education under pronounced religious influences. The building of the proposed house of worship in North Jackson, convenient to the college, will obviate the only objection which could possibly be urged. If you have failed to receive a catalogue, send to Dr. Murrah or to Dr. Muckenfuss at once for one. Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

CENTENARY'S FITTING SCHOOL.

MR. EDITOR: Doubtless you have finished the usual run of commencement reports, and a line from me will find space in your columns. Mr. I. D. Wall gave you a comprehensive account of Centenary's commencement, and following that up, let me say a few words in regard to a part of its future policy. The Board of Trustees entrusted to me the training of such boys as come to the college not prepared for the college classes, and, desiring to get this department of the work before the eye of Louisiana Methodists as never before, permit me to give a brief outline of the policy of the fitting school. Bishop Galloway sagely remarks that the true genius of the teacher is to inspire the indifferent and impart knowledge to the dull. Following up the thorough work of my predecessor, the fitting school of Centenary expects to give evidence of such a genius. It is a lamentable fact that so many of our boys and young men nowadays enter upon life's duties seemingly educated, but actually unable to write a legible hand, or to construct an English sentence correctly. Whether the world sees this or not, the parent detects it in the weekly letters written home from college. Centenary prides herself on the absence of this defect in her work. English is stressed, and my policy in conducting the preparatory work is thoroughness in the detail work of every branch. We realize the demand for a sure foundation in this work, and our fitting school is open for such boys as desire a thorough knowledge of the essential fundamental subjects. The fine grade of preparatory work done in the past was evident at the recent commencement exercises, and parents who entrust their sons to this department may feel sure of thus securing for them the most conscientious attention. The work is so arranged that the professors of the several departments will give assistance in the fitting school classes, and we shall not be crowded even with the one hundred and fifty preparatory students that we expect next session. A commodious hall is being fitted up, and all the surroundings will be conducive to honest work on the part of students. With an earnest faculty, improved buildings, a picturesque campus, and the Methodists of Louisiana with us, we expect to make Centenary the center of educational interest in the State.

One fact was noticeable at the past commencement: in the contests for medals, not a single contestant made a failure, and each one deserved a medal. This is a remarkable condition, and gives evidence of the style of work done. If all the parents in Louisiana could have witnessed the exercises in toto, we should not fail short of a campus filled with boys next session. Dr. Cooper has beautified the surroundings with substantial improvements, and has still more in view.

Truly Centenary is an inspiring spot, and her hallowed past is but a guarantee of a future of lengthened usefulness. With the unmistakable commission of a designing Providence as her motive power, she is doing a herculean work, and, as the exponent of all that is helpful in the preparation for service, she is fulfilling a glorious mission for our country and our church.

BELHAVEN COMMENCEMENT.

Belhaven College has just closed a prosperous year. Dr. Fitzhugh, the president, has again proved himself to be not only a first-class educator, but a man of refined taste, good judgment and rare executive ability. This is manifested in a very choice faculty, a new college building (replacing the one destroyed by fire about two years ago) modeled and well equipped with conveniences up to date, a large attendance of girls despite the fact of the inconveniences and disadvantages under which he labored by the destruction of the building.

Dr. Murrah, of Millsaps College, preached the commencement sermon. The Jackson Clarion-Ledger, speaking of it, said: "It was a masterpiece of oratory and logic, his hearers being equally impressed with the masterly chain of thought contained in the discourse and the sublime manner of its delivery. Unquestionably it was one of the most scholarly commencement sermons ever delivered in a Jackson educational institution."

On Monday night the annual concert was given; a programme of the highest merit being rendered. Many of the crowded assembly, accustomed to good things at these final expressions of a year's faithful work in music and elocution, awarded the palm to this one.

On Tuesday morning your scribe had the honor of delivering the graduating address; and no more pleasant duty was he ever called upon to perform.

The high graded work already done by this institution, the still higher curriculum arranged for the next session, the able teachers already selected, a strong, good man, and a strong, good woman, Mrs. Fitzhugh, at the head, commend this institution of learning to the young ladies of this or any other State. RICHARD WILKINSON.

THE CHIEF DANGER OF THE COMING CENTURY.

The Christian college of the past has given America many of its greatest leaders. With agnosticism not yet extinct, with materialism penetrating like a poison the minds and hearts of the young, with the growing appetite for pleasure, it is plain that Christian education is required to meet the chief danger of the coming century. There are serpent-like and poisonous forces in our modern civilization which no sweetness of culture will conciliate or regenerate. Culture must be re-enforced by conscience and enlivened by the Spirit of God before it will be adequate to the great problems which confront us.—Dr. Barrows, before Students of Oberlin College.

The pastor who builds a magnificent church on an underpinning of debt, and caps it with a towering mortgage, may get a great puff from his presiding elder at Conference, and a good appointment; but his successor finds himself under a crushing load, wasting years of strength and labor, and his charge paralyzed in all its spiritual energies.—Zion's Herald.

WHAT HAVE YOU?

If you have a happy voice,
Sing, that others may rejoice:
Till it soothes the mourner's woe,
Breathing pathos in each word.
Frozen fountains may be stirred,
Slumbering souls may wake again
At some long-forgotten strain. . .

If you have a precious thought
That to you has gladness brought,
Shrine it not within your breast,
Write it and make others blest!
Oft some written thought will reach
Hearts grown loath of human speech—
Hearts by faithless promise grieved,
Hearts by lying lips deceived.

If you have a loving word,
Speak it where it can be heard.
Souls are languishing to-day
For the words that you might say.
Earthly burdens sorely press,
Loving words can make them less,
And no soul can suffer loss,
Thus who lifts a brother's cross.

OUR DUTY AS A CHURCH AND PEOPLE TO THE AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

BY REV. P. D. HARDIN.

(Read before the Preachers' Institute of the Forest District, Mississippi Conference, at Forest, Miss., May 8, 1900, and ordered Published by vote of the Institute.)

All Christian people recognize the supreme importance and infinite value of the Holy Bible. To them it is the Book of books. It is the Book of God because it is the great medium through which he reveals his will to mankind. It is also the Book of man. It alone answers the three great questions: Who am I? From whence came I? Whither am I going? By revealing the realities of eternity it attaches the true significance to time. Christ commands, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye are assured of eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." The Bible is the only true source of religious knowledge. Where'er it goes it carries with it the light from heaven which chases away the darkness of ignorance, superstition, and sin. Where'er it is not "darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the people."

How important, then, that all men have it; that its heavenly light pervade every nook and corner of the inhabited globe, and fill every soul of man! But, alas! this is not the case. Although many hundreds of years have passed since "God gave the Word," yet to many millions it has never been "published." To great multitudes it is a Book unknown, and the largest sect of Christians (so-called) in the world today is in collusion with the devil in trying to withhold from the people its God-given message of light and salvation. If all the Bibles which were ever printed were in circulation to-day, they would supply only one-fifth of the population of the world. But when we remember that nineteen-twentieths of the Bibles now in circulation are in the hands of Protestant Christians, the world's great need is indeed distressing. In Mexico alone, with her twelve millions of people, there are only one-half million copies of the Bible. This is only one instance of the world's great need of God's precious Word.

To supply this great need institutions called Bible societies have been organized in various parts of the world. The principal of these in our own country is the American Bible Society, which was organized in New York City, May 8, 1816. This society is a voluntary association, having for its object the circulation of the Holy Scriptures in the commonly received version, without note or comment. Its centre is at New York City, but it has about five thousand auxiliary societies scattered all over the United States.

The first year of its existence 6,410 copies of the Bible and portions were issued. From this beginning the business has so far increased that last year 1,380,892 copies were issued, 719,622 copies being sent to other lands; and in the eighty-three years of its existence this society has issued 65,962,505 copies, printed in about one hundred different languages and dialects. Four hundred colporteurs and agents are employed in the distribution of these Bibles. Eternity alone will reveal the great good which is being accomplished through this great institution. The blessings accruing from it to the cause of Christ, both at home and abroad, are incalculable.

One great blessing is, that it forces down the prices of Bibles for everybody. One of the marvels of this closing century is the great reduction in the prices of Bibles. A hundred, or more, years ago Bibles were so costly that but few could afford one. Often the precious Word was kept chained to the pulpit, and the poor would stop and read its blessed pages, and go their way. But now, thank God, the cost is so small that all—every man, woman, and child—may and should have his or her own Bible. That the Bible societies, which sell their Bibles at actual cost, have been mainly instrumental in this great reduction no one can deny. Just think of buying the entire Bible for fifteen cents and the New Testament for five cents.

Besides searching out the poor and needy in the cities and isolated regions, and supplying them with God's Word, the American Bible Society is also doing a gracious work by furnishing the brave men of our navy and army, and the unfortunate inmates of our hospitals, prisons, etc., with the Bible.

But even more important than the work at home is that of the American Bible Society in foreign lands. The missionaries are unanimous in their testimony of the great benefit of the society in their work. In fact, it is indispensable to the successful prosecution of missionary effort.

Dr. Alexander McLaren says: "The work of the Bible societies is a necessary supplement to all missionary work. 'What God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.' But if we had set before us the alternative—which, thank God, we have not—the missionary without the Bible, or the Bible without the missionary, I say, give us the Bible, and we will do without the missionary."

Dr. W. R. Lambuth says: "The Bible societies are the indispensable and most efficient allies of the missionary cause. Without them the wheels of its progress would be seriously impeded, if not altogether hindered."

Dr. Samuel Jessups, a veteran Syrian missionary, says, "If there were no Bible societies, we might as well pack up shop and go home."

The first important thing that the American Bible Society does for the foreign lands is that it promotes the accurate translation of the Scriptures into other languages—a work requiring wise, unsectarian supervision. It also bears the expense of printing and binding these translations—a work beyond private enterprise and the resources of Missionary Boards. The extensive printing of the Scriptures in Turkish, Armenian and Greek at Constantinople, and in Arabic at Beirut, Syria, as well as similar work in China, Japan, and elsewhere, is in reality done at the expense of the American Bible Society, though Missionary Boards naturally often get credit for it, as the work is in their fields and in connection with their missionaries. It maintains a thorough and extensive system of distribution of the Scriptures, often going before the regular missionaries, preparing the way for them, and laying the foundation for their successful labors. In fact, there are instances not a few where heathen have been led to Christ by the mere reading of the Word.

Rev. Dr. Hiker, agent of the American Bible Society in China, tells of a young literary man named Lob, who had read many scientific and Christian books, but it was reading the Bible which led him to Christ. Again, he tells us of a woman who had been led into a life of sin, happening to read how the disciples left their nets and followed Jesus, the Holy Spirit revealed the blackness of her life, and led her to Christ for cleansing.

Another agent tells of eight persons in one family who were led to Christ through the sale of one Bible. They had not read it long before they cleared out all their idols and began to serve the living God alone.

These are only a few of many similar instances where God honors the labors of these faithful agents, and souls are saved directly through the work of this society.

The American Bible Society is undenominational, or, rather, interdenominational, and should receive the hearty co-operation of all the lovers of God's Word in every church. But, alas! it does not receive the support it so well deserves. Its work is greatly hampered for lack of funds. With new fields opening constantly; with Cuba, Porto Rico, and the Philippines—countries which have been deprived of the Bible for three centuries—especially inviting, yet the society has been compelled to curtail its work for lack of funds. Of the $250,000 per annum needed from the public, last year only $165,125.90 was collected.

The Southern Methodist Church owes much in common with other churches to this great institution; also much on account of a great deal of benefit accruing directly to it, both at home and abroad. Last year, of the $152,698.48 disbursed by the society in foreign fields, about one-half of this outlay was made in those lands in which the M. E. Church, South, has mission fields. In Brazil, $21,615.66; China, $29,261.15; Japan and Corea, $5,952.19; Mexico, $18,545.69. This outlay represents a vast saving to our church, not only of money, but of men, time, and great labor. No wonder the report on Bible cause before the General Conference of 1894 termed the society the "indispensable ally of our missionaries in foreign fields."

What are we, as a church and people, doing to repay the American Bible Society for all it is doing for us? Or how are we discharging the obligation which God places on us to support it? In the General Conference of 1898 the Committee on Bible Cause expressed the opinion that "heretofore too much has been drawn from the society for the returns made to it." How true this statement is the following figures will prove. During the past year the M. E. Church, South, with her million and a half members, paid to the American Bible Society only $9,328.03. Although the church endorses the society, and each pastor is required to present its claims once a year to each congregation, and each Quarterly and District Conference is required to inquire as to what is being done for it, yet, with all this, last year 1,942 of our 5,000 pastoral charges paid absolutely nothing into its treasury. This list includes some of our largest and wealthiest churches. In one of our principal Conferences three entire districts paid nothing at all. What a shame! What criminal neglect of duty!

While the Mississippi Conference was exceeded in contributions by only two other Conferences, viz.: the Virginia and North Mississippi, yet it is humiliating that of the $1,000 assessed last year, we paid only $641.41—less than two cents per member. The Forest district, with 7,075 members, paid last year for the American Bible Society only $76.55—only a little more than one cent per member, and less than any other district in the Conference. Can we look upon such a record without humiliation? Can we expect to meet it in the judgment, and be guiltless? And can we, as professed Christians, be content to continue to enjoy the blessings of this society, and still ignore its claims, by doing so little for its support? God help us to say, No, and to awake to our duty.

Brethren, let us pray more for this blessed institution of God. It needs our prayers. But don't stop with praying; preach about it. Turn on the light. Let the people know what the American Bible Society is, where it is, what it is doing, and what it needs. "Our people perish for lack of knowledge." Exhort the people to rally to its support, and they will do it when the light is turned on. But please don't stop here, but take collections. All your preaching about the society won't do any good unless you get some money for it. Money is what it needs. So I repeat, Take the collection, and start it with a liberal contribution yourself. Take subscriptions; pass around the hat. In public and in private, by day and by night, at church on Sunday, at the homes of the people in the week, along the public highway, in the crowded shop, along the busy streets, at home or abroad, on the land, on the sea, wherever you find one Methodist, if only one, take up a collection, and continue to collect until all the assessments are in full. May God help us! Amen!

FORREST'S CAVALRY IN MISSISSIPPI.

A reunion of Forrest's Veteran Cavalry Corps called the writer to North Mississippi, June 10, 11 and 12. Since this territory is within the bounds legitimately belonging to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, your columns are the most fitting medium through which to express the pleasant surprises of this visit. When a goodly company of veterans from Kentucky and Tennessee reached Corinth we found open-doored hospitality and a whole-souled welcome. The special object of this reunion was to gather on the battlefield of Brice's X Roads, fought June 10, 1864. (The most complete Confederate victory of the war.)

This year the anniversary was Sunday; our Mississippi friends, therefore, arranged that the day be spent at the nearest point to the battlefield where the accommodations were ample. Three religious services in the great hall of the court-house at Corinth were made memorable by the earnest Christian enthusiasm of the crowds attending.

Monday we went to Baldwyn; thence by carriages, wagons and horseback to the battlefield. Tuesday we gave to Tupelo and the adjoining battlefield of Harrodsburg.

Veterans were present who had participated in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Brice's X Roads, Harrisburg, and a score besides of Mississippi conflicts at arms.

This letter, however, is not intended to tell of the veterans, their memories, their deeds, their talks, their hand-grasps, and their commingled references of joy and sorrow to the days gone by. Many of them had stained Mississippi soil with their blood; many were on a pilgrimage to the spot where they had buried a comrade. That which most astounded the writer were the strides forward, and the marvelous hospitality and enthusiasm of the Mississippians of to-day. We had left them prostrate in 1865. At Corinth we thought to account for the wonderful improvements since we left it in 1865 devastated and seemingly helpless, by thinking of it as a railroad center and, therefore, an exception. When we reached Baldwyn and found not only new conditions of prosperity, but an enthusiasm which in generous rivalry with the citizens living on and around the battlefield, had erected and seated for our use a large pavilion ample to render comfortable a thousand people, our surprise quickened not thought only, but wonder as well.

The continued rain had led the people of Baldwyn to claim that we should spend the day with them, but the soldiers and Cross Roads people contended that we must go to the battlefield. If we were before surprised, the provision by the people for transportation and the dinner on the ground passed from surprise to astonishment. Such generosity, such profusion, such exquisite cuisine was beyond even a Tennesseean's memory of ante-bellum days, when camp meetings and political barbecues were a prominent element in Tennessee life.

The younger Mississippians can not realize the contrast between the surroundings we left behind us on our return to our homes in 1865 and those of to-day.

Corinth, then, was a devastated waste; Baldwyn was a rambling prostration—in a little school-house west of the village I held a glorious revival during Confederate days. Tupelo had been so exhausted that the last days Forrest spent there he had thought it necessary to divide rations with many of her people. To-day, were it not for scars on the trees where cannon balls plowed their way, and the bullets the plowman turns over in his furrows, it would be difficult to even conjecture that not more than a generation ago terrible war had bathed these fields in blood and filled these homes with wounded men. The generous people of to-day lent us kindly ears as we talked of days gone by. Everywhere I turned with the question, Whence comes this amazing return to prosperity? The answer came back, "Our new Constitution has aroused hope, put all of our people to work, and dimpled the cheeks of Mississippi with smiles." When I asked, What about local option? all answered, It has greatly helped to this glad end.

At Tupelo we found equal marks of prosperity, abounding hospitality and enthusiasm. We came home thrilled with hopes for the immediate South beyond any dreams which have been ours since the years of the war. We will die the happier for these three days spent on Mississippi soil.

Itinerant's Rest, June 14, 1900.

THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Vicksburg District Conference convened at Port Gibson, June 13 to 15, inclusive; the presiding elder, Rev. E. H. Mounger, D. D., in the chair, and conducting the opening religious services. The roll was called, and nearly all the preachers, but very few delegates, answered to their names.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, of Utica, preached the opening sermon. Revs. R. Selby, A. F. Watkins and R. F. Witt also preached during the Conference, and Dr. J. B. Fearn lectured, telling of his labors in China, and of the needs of the people in that distant land.

Rev. W. T. Griffin was present, and represented the Orphans' Home at Water Valley.

The reports from the various pastors show that the spiritual condition is as good as the average, though lacking the marked improvement so earnestly desired by all. There have been but few revivals held as yet, though each pastor is planning and organizing for one at every appointment. These reports show, too, that while finances are not altogether up to date, there has been gradual improvement.

On account of absentees the prearranged programme could not be fully carried out, though the following subjects were presented and discussed: "The Study and Interpretation of the Bible." Paper by Rev. L. Carley; discussed by Revs. A. F. Watkins, R. Selby, and E. H. Monnger. "How May Epworth Leagues Be Best Organized and Maintained?" Paper by Rev. W. H. Lewis; discussed by Revs. L. S. Jones and R. Selby. "The Present Need of Missionary Effort." Paper by Rev. Geo. P. McKeown; discussed by Dr. J. B. Fearn.

The following subjects were discussed with manifest interest: "How to Keep Up a Good Prayer Meeting;" "Is the Church Meeting Success, or Coming Up to the Measure of Duty in the Saving of Souls?"

Herbert B. Watkins, having stood an approved examination, and being duly recommended, was given license to preach.

The following were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial: H. B. Watkins, H. P. Lewis, Jr., and H. T. Carley.

The licenses of M. J. Marble, H. T. Carley and J. O. Gilbert, as local preachers, were renewed.

G. B. Hackett, W. J. Bell, H. H. Crisler and N. J. Vick were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. T. A. Holloman and H. B. Watkins were selected as alternates.

The usual resolution of thanks for courtesy and hospitality was unanimously adopted; also one of sympathy for Rev. C. A. Powell in his present illness.

The Holston financial plan was recommended for use whenever and wherever practicable.

Mrs. E. D. Jones, representing the W. H. M. Society, was present, and read report showing improvement in work, and the Vicksburg district to be the leading district in the Conference in this work.

The next Conference meets at Bolton.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Conference convened at Durant, Miss., June 9. Consecration services were led by the president, Mrs. M. I. Hoskins. Oh! the testimonies and the blend of witnesses that came up to tell of his great love. Mrs. McIntosh led the memorial service for Miss Laura A. Haygood, assisted by Miss Gary, missionary from China, who gave us a very interesting sketch of Miss Haygood's life in China, closing her talk with a most touching appeal to erect a school in China to honor the memory of Miss Haygood. Ninety-one dollars were raised in less than five minutes. Miss Gary sang a hymn in Chinese, in a clear, sweet voice, and all were so delighted they asked her to sing another. She said: "I am your missionary; you sent me. I stand before you to-night pleading for help for China." The blackness of old heathen China can not be told. Books only give us glimpses of it. She has seen it in all its idolatry, and then asks the women to help. She did not ask for their hats; only for the trimmings, buds, feathers and flowers!

Rev. T. Y. Ramsey delivered the Conference sermon, showing foreign missionary work to be the only hope of perpetuating the Christian church. Welcome address was delivered by Mrs. Smith, of Durant. Response by Mrs. J. F. Wyatt, of West Point. Juvenile welcome address was delivered by Miss Hilda Mayfield, of Durant. Response by little Jane McIntosh, of Grenada. Janie also delighted the Conference with her violin. She played a solo dressed as a Chinese in native costume. Recitation by Miss Woodville of Carrollton, was well rendered. The "baby" of the Conference was a little dream of beauty. Master Doolin, of Aberdeen, was stood up on the president's table, and sang and recited, winning all hearts with her sweet, childish voice.

Mrs. Dr. Anne Fearn gave us a delightful talk of her hospital work in China. She was dressed in handsome Chinese silk native costume.

A resolution was passed that no Conference officer can hold an office longer than four years. The Woman's Board has raised the Twentieth Century Fund to $100,000.

Miss Mattie Collier recited: after each verse a solo—"From Greenland's icy mountains." Recitation by little Alice Mitchell.

The good people of Durant entertained the delegates most royally. A reception was given them, and a drive to Castalian Springs. Rev. N. G. Angnatns proved himself an ideal Conference host. Durant, the "city of oaks," will long be remembered by the Woman's Conference for her generous hospitality.

The Christian Life.

Neglect of the Bible, we fear, is working far more mischief to the church and is the source of more danger to the cause of religion than all the assaults made upon it by unbelievers or destructive criticism. It is apparent to all observers, and particularly to those in most intimate association with the young, that the present generation is much less familar with the Bible than the last, and that the evil is a growing one. The founders of our nation were largely a people of one Book, and that the Bible. Its principles were wrought into our institutions and permeated literature. Style itself was formed and strengthened by familiarity with the noble English of King James' version of the Bible. It is much less so to-day. The multiplication of books and periodicals, the plethora of ephemeral reading, has diverted attention from the Scriptures; the growing neglect of family worship, the scrappiness and inefficiency of much Sabbath-school instruction, the substitution of it for home teaching of the Word of God, the extensive elimination of Bible reading and study from the public schools, and the small place given the English Bible in college courses have wrought a revolution in the knowledge of and relation to the Scriptures, great in extent, and ominous not only for religion, but to morals and character.—Christian Intelligencer.

How about your vessels? You remember that in the case of Elisha and the poor woman as long as vessels were brought the oil continued to flow; but when there were no more vessels, the oil ceased to flow. So it is with the grace of God. No vessel is turned from God empty. Many of our vessels are very small, or are already filled with other things foreign to divine grace. Many have vessels suited to a form of godliness, but not for the power thereof. Many have large capacity for ambition, pleasure, and worldliness in general, which is ever demanding more, but never satisfied. We should remember that the only human vessel that can be filled to satisfaction is that which is carried for God's grace. You can be "filled with all the fullness of God" and be satisfied, but in no other way.—Wesleyan Advocate.

There is a good deal of religion in life that is much like the practice of "marking time" among soldiers. They lift up one foot, and then put it down in the same place; then they lift up the other foot, and put it down in the same place. They are marching, but they are not moving. In other words, they are but going through the motions of a march. So it is with many professors. They are but marking time. They are "going through the motions" of a Christian life, but they are not getting on. They are saying their prayers, but are not praying; they are going to church, but not to heaven; they are talking in meeting, but bearing no testimony.—Church Army Gazette.

OUR HYMN BOOK.

The Sunday-school Board, in session May 3 at Nashville, took action looking toward the production of a new song book, to bear the title, "Young People's Hymnal No. 2." In the use of our "Young People's Hymnal" and "Children's Praises" in the church, doubtless much good has been done. But a very serious fect known and sadly felt, in that our Standard Hymn Book is almost discarded from use in a greater number of our churches by supplementing other song books in its place; and it is not always true that the supplement is the "Young People's Hymnal," or some other of our publications, but a book that is undenominational in title and appearance. It is much regretted that the Standard Hymn Book does not meet the demand of the church. The aspiration for the gospel power in these soul-stirring hymns should be approximated, and not lie dormant because of unuse. The Epworth Leaguers and Sunday-school workers need this power appropriated into the very life and vitals of the soul. The church needs a conscious momentum in song; but shall we leave these grand old hymns to find what we need? Only a few appear in our "Young People's Hymnal." Shall we not utilize the vast number not used in any of the church services? Why this waste? What can be done to make the hymn book more attractive and serviceable in the church? Certainly not in the use of some other book, or books, in its place. Yet this has been done, perhaps, through a greater part of our church. It should not be so. There should be an early remodeling of the tunes in our "Hymn and Tune Book." Too many of the tunes in the book are monotonous, and do not bring out the grand and beautiful thoughts of the poet.

The gospel is in these hymns, and we greatly need the instrument with which to get it out. Give us new tunes that will effectuate that end. Make the hymn book so attractive as to fill all the wants of the church, so that there shall be no need of a new hymn book every few years. Because of disuse, our old hymns and tunes are not known by many of our young people. The "Young People's Hymnal" is good, but neither it, nor any other, should take the place of our Standard Hymn Book, for it is best. It is the instrument with which to work.

H. M. YOUNG.

PUT IN A GOOD LIBRARY.

The interchange of helpful suggestions through the medium of our denominational papers ought to be interesting and mutually beneficial to preachers and Sunday-school workers. The library is one of our best helps, and about this I wish to write and recommend it to those who have not.

A few months ago a few persons made a contribution for this purpose. Our pastor, Bro. R. H. B. Gladney, took actively interest in the enterprise, and he does in everything for the good of the church, and he soon had a fair amount in cash. He and Bro. Gladney deserve credit for their research and careful selection of books. Then our colporteur, Bro. J. W. Bachman, came to our help with his special prices for libraries, and the fifty per cent. donation by the Publishing House, which reduces the prices of books very low. We have had the books in, about one hundred and twenty-five volumes, and a good book-case, too—all paid for. Not only the League and Sunday-school, but the whole congregation are interested, and are reading the books at the rate of sixty per month. We expect to add from time to time such books as may be needed. Our young people and children take to it with increasing interest, and it is needless to say much good is being done.

Now, this is no new discovery we have made, for most Leagues and schools probably have libraries; some very elaborate ones, but there are many who have not—just as we have been until recently; and it is to this class that I would unhesitatingly commend the library. Put in one, though it be ever so small, for a beginning. Put it in charge of a librarian, who will look after the books, and keep a complete record, and report to the League and Sunday-school, too (if it is owned jointly by these two organizations, as ours is).

The people are going to read, and if you will provide them good books, you will drive out a proportionate amount of bad or doubtful stuff, and thus confer a double blessing.

EXPERIENCE.

I have been an invalid my whole ministerial life, which, of course, has militated very materially against my success. Now I am troubled with vertigo, which my physician says may result at any time in paralysis. Lest I should suddenly and hopelessly become disabled, I wish to publish my religious experience, which, owing to modesty and a fear of criticism, has heretofore been in the main withheld.

On a bright, fair day—Thursday, Sept. 7, 1854—I was powerfully and satisfactorily converted. Toiling faithfully and continuously in the itinerancy, in 1887 there crept somehow into my soul a hungering and thirsting for more of God. The hunger continued until I was in an agony; often spent hours, and sometimes a half day at a time, crying to God. I did not ask for sanctification, or anything else by name, but asked that my hunger might be satisfied and my thirst quenched. For the want of encouragement and light on the subject, I was a seeker about seven years. On Friday, July 27, 1894, just as I was in the act of kneeling to pray in my church in Franklin, La., there came crash after crash and wave after wave, as a burning fire, through my entire being. There was no pain, but, on the contrary, bliss, that my poor command of language is inadequate to describe. What of it? This much: On that sweet day the storm ceased, the sea became calm, and there has been a new feeling, and a deep and sweet peace, unknown to me before. What is it? The blessed Spirit bears witness with my spirit that it is entire sanctification. Now, if I am suddenly paralyzed, or stricken dead, thank God this is known to my brethren. Glory! glory! H. ARMSTRONG.

A DISTURBER OF CHURCHES.

Recently there came this way one J. N. Whitehead, who claims to be a holiness preacher and an agent for some Methodist Publishing House. He began, without permission, a meeting in one of our churches—Cedar Grove. When I reached him the meeting had been in progress for several days. I at once put a stop to it. He moved to a school-house near by, and went on for several days longer. I am a strong believer in holiness, and especially the second-blessing theory. I preach it everywhere, and claim the blessed experience in my own soul; but I do not, and will not, encourage independent come-out-ism in any shape or form. I am a loyal Methodist preacher, a defender of her pulpit and pure doctrine.

Mr. Whitehead, in taking possession of said church, did not manifest the characteristics of a gentleman, much less those of a Christian minister. Such men damage the cause they represent. From such men deliver me.

I write the above to warn others. All for Christ.

I endorse the above, and add my condemnation to those of my co-laborer in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

FROM THE WORK.

ITTA BENA AND SIDON.

The church is prospering greatly in this charge. We have held revivals recently in both our churches. At Itta Bena the preaching for the first five days was done by Bro. Walter H. Harbin, of Morehead. He came to us last year from the Campbellite Church, and was sent to Morehead and Baird by Bishop Candler last December. Bro. Harbin is a zealous, consecrated, and highly gifted young man, whose preaching is accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit.

Bro. M. L. Blanton, of Nashville, arrived and took charge of the meeting on the sixth day of its progress, and he continued with us for two weeks, preaching twice a day. The services were well attended, our large auditorium (the largest, so said, in the Delta, excepting only the Greenwood Church) being sometimes crowded. The whole church was moved to a higher life, the entire community had its religious conscience greatly quickened, and all the interests of our Lord's kingdom had new life infused into them. There were several additions to the church, and others still are to follow. Bro. Blanton is one of the best preachers we have ever heard. He is a model evangelist.

At Sidon, Bro. Dave Bass, of Corinth, assisted us. He is a plain, yet very forceful preacher. He uses no slang, resorts to no special maneuvers, and makes no effort at sensationalism. He simply holds up in clear light the great truths of the gospel, and earnestly urges them upon the consciences of his auditors. The effect is powerful.

The meeting was a great success from the very first service. I do not know how many were converted, but I know there was great good accomplished. A splendid Woman's Home Missionary Society was organized, a weekly prayer meeting was begun, the Sunday-school took on new life, and twenty-one new names were recorded on the church register, with "more to follow." It was the greatest revival that Sidon has had in ten or twelve years.

Thus the kingdom of Christ moves steadily on, successfully purifying and fortifying itself in one place, while it lifts the aggressive and conquering standard of our Lord in another. May our Lord's kingdom come, and his will be done on earth as it is in heaven!

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

THE DUTY OF DEVELOPMENT.

The secret of many a deplorable failnre in life is the failnre to improve in one's work. The world has little patience with shirks and bnnglers, nor is it more considerate of those who are content with doing their work in a perfnnctory manner, never seeking to do it any better, nor taking the tronble to discover new methods.

Gov. Shaw, of Iowa, recently said on a pnblic occasion: "One-fonrth of the lawyers can try a case no better to-day than when they began. There are also women who can cook no better than on the day they were married, and are told so three times a day." It is nnqnestionably trne that both in the professions and among the laboring classes there is a large per cent. of persons who either make no effort to improve, or who are incapable of progress. Is it any wonder, then, that their service is nndesirable and nnsatisfactory?

The reason why a good many college gradnates never achieve anything worthy of note is, that after leaving school they simply rest npon their lanrels, foolishly expecting the world to bow before them, and looking for their hard-earned college snccesses and honors to make an easy road for them through life.

The bee constrncted her cell in Adam's time exactly as she does to-day. The sparrow's nest is fashioned now jnst as it was when, ages ago, the first sparrow chirped to her mate, and constrncted a home for her yonng. Man alone, of all earthly beings, is endowed with the capacity for development, and that capacity is infinite. In him there is a restless longing after progress and perfection. Unless in actnal savagery, he feels the bnrning of a perpetnal discontent with what is crude and imperfect, whether in regard to things material or things spiritnal.

Man's marvelous mental and moral capabilities render it an imperative dnty for him to advance, so long as there is opportnnity to do so. Pitiable indeed is the condition of him who is content to walk in a rnt, and who is never stirred by the worthy ambition to improve in his labor, whatever it be, and in his character. Well has it been said that "onr longings are the prophecies of onr destinies." An intense desire to labor more efficiently and to live more nobly is always the forerunner of worthy achievement and lastrous life. Robt. Browning spoke trnly when he said, "'Tis not what a man does that exalts him, bnt what man wonld do."

What a vast army of professing Christians are suffering from arrested development, and are thns spiritnal dwarfs. Progress in goodness not having kept pace with the development of intellectnality and of bnsiness skill, they are deformed in soul, weak in character, and barren almost of frnit. Dear reader, do yon belong to this class?

It is trnly lamentable that while in many directions men are striving after excellence, and are bending every energy in the race for worldly snccess, the longing for spiritnal improvement shonld be so rare and oftimes so feeble. Thongh thonsands are straining every nerve to excel in art, in bnsiness, or in some chosen profession, how few seem to feel the thrill of a holy pnrpose to develop in grace and in goodness! Far too nncommon, alas! is the Christian who, like St. Paul of old, says in both word and deed, "This one thing I do: forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth nnto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesns." This aim mnst have the snpremacy over all others, if we are to be disciples in reality and not in name.

A man may do his best, in a sense, and yet not improve, because of his failnre to stndy how to do things better, because of his neglect to keep his eyes and ears open, and thns profit by the experience of others. Some professing Christians make no advancement for similar reasons. Measnring themselves by themselves, and failing to keep the Christ ideal continnally before them, they creep along on a dead level, being enshronded in the mist of ignorance and spiritnal conceit.

It is not enongh that we have been faithfnl in the days gone by. The bane of the chnrch to-day is the prevalence among her sons and danghters of a spirit of self-complacency that enconrages inaction, fosters pride, shnts ont the glorions vision of trne holiness, and effectnally bars the way to spiritnal progress. May God help ns to see onrselves as we really are, and create within ns an insatiable yearning for his fnlness, for more of his love and grace!

"If yon have made great achievements," says Dr. Lyman Abbott, "if yon have done splendid work, if yon stand high in other people's esteem, and especially in yonr own, do not stop to write bnlletins of victory to yonrself and others. The only reward worth the having for having done good work yesterday is a chance to do better work to-morrow."

LYNCH LAW CONDEMNED.

We are glad to see that the editor of the Biloxi Review, in a recent editorial, denonnces in the strongest terms the ontrageons lynching perpetrated in Harrison connty, Miss., abont three weeks ago. We felt snre at the time of its occnrrence that it was the act of a small band of rnffians whose lawlessness was not approved of by the main body of the citizens of the commnnity that has thns been brought into snch bad eminence.

Our law officers and the law-respecting element of onr citizenship, which we believe is largely in the majority in every commnnity, shonld see to it that a few lewd fellows of the baser sort shall not be allowed to trample law and jnstice nnder foot, and bring deep reproach npon onr beloved Southland, as has been done so frequently of late. The commission of a dastardly crime by an individnal by no means gives license to a score, or to any other nnmber, of men to commit another crime in retaliation. The editor of the Biloxi Review, in the extract given below, expresses sentiments with which we are in hearty accord:

"The Review nnqnalifiedly condemns the act of the drnnken mob last Satnrday night, in which the two negroes nnder arrest as snspects of the mnrder and ontrage of little Christina Winterstein were taken from the officers at Mississippi City and hnng. For the crime of which these negroes were snspected we have only feelings of horror, but we have no more sympathy with this latter crime than the first. No trial of the men had been had by which the scraps of evidence obtained could be brought together and a net woven around any one. Thns the matter stands when a mob of drnnken creatures take these negroes from the power of the officers and wreak cruel vengeance npon them. The crime is made more heinous in the certainty that one innocent man at least has been mnrdered and the strong probability of both of the victims. The participants have forfeited every claim to consideration, and in the opinion of the decent liberty-loving people of the land have placed themselves in the same category with the fiend who mnrdered and ontraged the helpless child. The act does not receive the approval of this commnnity, nor of any other where a sense of jnstice and right rnles. It is a case that shonld command the most stringent examination of the grand jnry, and the perpetrators of the crime bronght before the bar of ontraged law as they are already arraigned before the bar of pnblic opinion. A dark stain has been made npon the good name of this connty, her people have been placed nnder the ons of a horrible crime, and throngh their conrts they mnst vindicate themselves by the prompt bringing of the doers of this deed of darkness to pnnishment. The people of this connty can not afford, if they wonld retain the respect of the connty at large, to overlook or remain silent over this matter."

THE LOUISIANA CHAUTAUQUA.

The ninth annnal session of the Lonisiana State Chantanqua will be held at Rnston, beginning Jnly 1 and continning till Jnly 28. The Lonisiana Chantanqna has grown in popnlarity and in excellence, nntil now it is one of the largest and most profitable Snmmer assemblies held in the Sonth. The program that has been arranged for the coming session presents an array of talent and a list of attractions that can not bnt delight and edify all who are fortnnate enongh to be in attendance. Fonr dates a week have been provided for, comprising popnlar lectnres, patriotic orations, scientific discourses, instrnmental and vocal entertainments, impersonations, monologne interpretations, and hnmorons specialties.

A very valnable featnre of the assembly will be the Snmmer School, which will be condnoted by a nnmber of teachers of snperior attainments and recognized ability. Instrnction will be given in art and drawing, mnsic, English, mathematics, science, and several other important branches of stndy. The opening sermon will be preached by Dr. Chas. L. Wells, of New Orleans.

The site of the Chantanqna, which comprises a beautifnlly wooded park of abont fifteen acres, is a highly picturesque and healthfnl spot only a short distance from the town of Rnston. There are on the grounds several gnshing springs whose waters have been proved to possess medicinal properties of considerable efficacy in the treatment of malarial troubles and cntaneous diseases. Mosqnitoes are said to be absent. A season ticket can be secured for only $3.50. Excellent board can be had at very reasonable rates. One wonld have to search far and wide to find a more attractive place for rest, recreation and stndy. Those who desire fnller information about the Chantanqna shonld write to W. K. Dnncan, Sec'y, Ruston, La.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

We have been favored with a copy of the thirtieth annnal catalogne of East Mississippi Female College, located at Meridian, Miss., which has jnst closed the most prosperous session in its history. The presidency of Prof. Beeson has, from the first, been attended with phenomenal success, and the history of his work shows that he is a born educator.

The enrollment the past session reached the snrprising number of 361. Of these 185 were boarders, the college bnildings being taxed to their ntmost capacity. There were 242 stndents in mnsic, requiring for their instrnction the employment of eight mnsicians. The high stand taken by many of the graduates of this school as teachers, in connection with the splendid courses of stndy ontlined in the catalogne, attests the fact that work of high grade is being done.

The faculty is composed of professional, progressive, thoroughly eqnipped teachers, many of whom have taken post-gradnate courses in nniversities both in this connty and in Enrope. As is both proper and necessary, considerable attention is paid to physical onlture. The advantages in art and elocntion, as well as in the other departments, are of the very best. It is gratifying to note that the stndy of the Bible is given an important place in the work of the stndents. It wonld be well-nigh impossible to find a school that can show a better religious record than the E. M. F. College. It is exceptional for any girl to board in the college long without becoming a genninely consecrated Christian. In the healthfnlness of its location also this school is nnsurpassed. Send to Pres. Beeson for a copy of his handsome catalogne.

At the earnest solicitation of the trnstees, Dr. Jas. H. Carlisle has decided to remain president of Wofford College, S. C., for another year.

THE WEEK OF PRAYER AND SELF-DENIAL.

In accordance with the earnest recommendation of onr Bishops, it is expected that the week beginning Snnday, Jnly 1, will be observed by every charge in Southern Methodism as a week of prayer and self-denial.

While God has marvellously blessed our Zion in the days gone by, past blessings will not snffice. Momentous opportnnities are before ns; grave perils threaten onr civilization; and yet, alas! there are many evidences of lethargy and laxity of life among onr membership. The church is falling short of doing the work which her nnmbers and splendid resources render a plain and imperative dnty. Snrely, may we not expect the faithfnl observance throughout our Zion of this special season of prayer to result in a large ontpouring of God's Spirit, and in a mighty qnickening of the faith and zeal and gratitnde of onr membership? "Return nnto me, saith the Lord, and I will return nnto yon."

It is requested by our Board of Education that on Snnday, Jnly 8, the address of the Bishops be read in all onr pnlpits, so that onr people will all have a chance to hear it. This is very important, as many of onr members neither see nor take their church papers. Says Dr. Hammond: "In the services of the week the great events of onr history dnring the centnry shonld be made to pass in review before the people, not in the spirit of sectarian pride, bnt with a sincere desire to magnify God's grace and to quicken his people to gratitnde."

BELHAVEN COLLEGE.

Thongh only six years old, Belhaven College, located at Jackson, Miss., ranks among the best female schools in the Sonth, and is meeting with deserved prosperity. The name of its president, Prof. L. T. Fitzhngh, who is an experienced and highly successful educator, is of itself a sufficient guarantee that the instrnction imparted at this institntion is of the highest excellence.

The teachers in all the departments are post-gradnates of the leading schools of this connty and of Enrope. The advantages in mnsic, art and elocntion are exceptionally fine. The catalogne, a copy of which lies npon onr desk, contains a testimonial from the general manager of the New England Conservatory of Mnsic to the effect that pnpils from Belhaven coming to that institntion "have shown snperior personal qnalities as well as thorongh preparation."

Excellent courses are offered in type-writing and stenography, and in book-keeping.

The college bnildings, which are fitted with the latest comforts and conveniences, are located on a plotnresque eminence, commanding a splendid view of Jackson and vicinity, and overlook a lovely and well-shaded campns of abont twelve acres. It may be added that Jackson is one of the most accessible places in the State. While Belhaven is nndenominational, it is the constant aim of the president, who is himself an earnest Christian, to make it distinctively Christian.

RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM.

It is jnst as well to face the fact that religious newspapers are now confronted with a sharper competition than they have had to encounter dnring the past fifty years. Onr readers are aware that the official papers of the Methodist Episcopal Church cost the Book Concern over $100,000 dnring the past qnadrennium. Only two of them, the New York Christian Advocate and the Epworth Herald, paid their own way; dnring the year 1889, even the New York Christian Advocate ran about $11,000 behind its income. The fact that Southern Methodist papers have been able to keep afloat nnder snch trying circnmstances is greatly to the credit of their management. But the future is going to be still harder with them, and wisdom requires that they shonld begin to prepare for an ordeal of the severest character. What are the causes of this condition of affairs?

There is a waning of the denominational spirit. The decay of narrow sectarianism has also issned in the abatement of a healthy and vigorous ecclesiastical life. Men are less interested now than formerly in the peculiarities of their own churches. Far and wide the notion has been propagated that one form of church government is about as good as another, and that even doctrinal variations are not a matter of very serious importance. Indifferentism prevails to an amazing degree. It can not be otherwise than that this frame of mind should operate injuriously on the circnlation of distinctly religious periodicals.

Then, too, there has been a great multiplication of secnlar weeklies and monthlies, with many attractive featnres. Appealing to all classes alike, and largely snpported by advertisements which a religious paper could not admit, they have secured an immense circnlation. We are not saying that these secnlar pnblications are evil. Many of them are of a high order. Bnt they ought not to be allowed, even the best of them, to crowd out the papers that stand for the advocacy of religion.

There is another fact worthy of note: the daily papers themselves, with a sharp nose for news, now fnrnish a great deal of religious intelligence. They report, with more or less fidelity, the proceedings of Conventions, Synods, and Conferences. What is the nse, one may ask, for the Christian Advocate when everything of real importance is set ont in the Courier-Journal, the American, the Banner, the Commercial-Appeal, or the Constitntion? The answer to this question is that none of these papers ever occnpies the religious point of view. They are not anxious to help the church in any way. Their only motive is to chronicle the latest happenings, and when they trnn from mere happenings to serious discnssion, they always fail to reach wholly correct conclnsions.

The church needs to have her own organs. She needs them more now than at any former time. The facts which we have mentioned above show beyond a donbt, not that she shonld abandon her presses, bnt that she shonld wisely consider how she may make them more nsefnl than formerly. If she is pnblishing too many periodicals, let her consolidate them. If the qnality of her issues is too poor, let her improve them. She can not give np the field without snffering the greatest loss.

To those who ought to nnderstand all these things, onr wise and influential ministers and laymen, we make one more earnest appeal. Do yon really think that it wonld be well for ns to become dependent on the "yellow" jonrnals, or even npon the decent, bnt indifferent secular papers? If not, will yon not exert yonrselves more than heretofore in pushing the circnlation of the various pnblications provided for by onr own authorities?
—Nashville Advocate.

NOTICE.

To the Epworth Leaguers of the M. E. Church, South—

DEAR FELLOW-LEAGUERS: I have pleasnre in announcing to yon that the interest in the coming Southern League Conference at Atlanta is almost nnprecedented in onr work. The signs point to a very large attendance, and to several days in active and profitable work. Nearly all the arrangements for the great meeting have been completed, or are in course. The rate of one fare for the ronnd trip have been secured on all railroads in our territory. The program is one of the most practical character. The discnssion of the topics is to be led by active and experienced workers. Great profit, as well as great pleasnre, is in store for all who attend this Conference. Atlanta extends ns the most cordial welcome, and will do everything possible to make our stay pleasant, and to help ns in our work. The Conference is not to be a delegated, bnt a popular meeting. You will, however, do well to send an official representative from each of your chapters, and, particularly, if you have a message or memorial, send it by the hand of a dnly authorized messenger. League chapters can do no wiser nor better thing than to send, in addition to their official representative, their pastor, making him a present of the expenses of the journey. The Atlanta meeting is for the pnrpose of conference, and for planning for the fntnre of our work. We shall be glad to furnish any information concerning the meeting, the program, or any other matter, on request of any League or individual League member. Begin now to make your plans to attend the Southern League Conference at Atlanta, July 25 to 29.

Very faithfully,
H. M. DuBose, Sec'y-Editor.
Nashville, Tenn.

NOTICE.

The Rev. J. B. Mitchell is authorized to travel dnring the Summer in the interest of Millsaps College, and I commend him most cordially to the favorable consideration of our people. I trust our preachers will correspond with him, and give him snch information as will help him in a canvass for students. He will be glad to aid our pastors in protracted and camp meetings. Write to him at Winona, Miss.

W. B. MURRAH, President.

Miss Elizabeth Cowan, of Oxford, Miss., has been elected to the Chair of Chemistry and Physics in the North Texas Female College, at Sherman, Texas. Miss Cowan is a broad and thorough scholar, having done her work earnestly and conscientionsly throughout her entire school life. She is a graduate of the Oxford Graded and High School, the University of Mississippi, and the N. N. University, of Lebanon, Ohio, and has spent the scholastic year ending June, 1900, at the University of Mississippi doing post-graduate work in the sciences. Her friends and instructors predict a brilliant career for her in the school world.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

Rev. Thos H. Dorsey, Arcola, Miss., EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

The editor has just returned from a week's visit to Glen Aller, Miss., where he assisted Pastor Jno. M. Moose in a meeting. An Epworth League will soon be organized there.

There is no better way to train our young people to lead a public religious meeting than to give them something to do in the weekly devotional meeting. When once they learn that they can do the work, they are ever ready to do what they can.

If we would teach our young people to keep their eyes open to see an opportunity to help the poor, and in many other ways help the church in its effort to reach the masses, give them something definite to do in the Charity and Help Department.

By all means the Literary Department must be worked. The League can not be run by main strength. It is a good thing to be willing to work, and it is no less good to know how to work. Some, doubtless, "have a zeal of God, but not according to knowledge." In order to hasten the day when the League shall take its proper place in the church, let us see to it that our young people read, and read the right sort of literature.

The Charity and Help Department could not be better employed than to give occasionally some special attention to the interest of our Mississippi Orphans' Home, at Water Valley, Miss., since it is such a fitting thing that young people who have been reared in comfortable homes to contribute their service and means to make a place of comfort for those who are less fortunate.

The Epworth Era, of June 14, is a veritable compendium of Mexican Methodist history. If you are not a subscriber, begin with the June 14 number.

TO THE PASTORS AND EPWORTH LEAGUERS OF MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

The District Epworth League Conference will be held in Central Church, Meridian, beginning Tuesday night, July 10, at 8 o'clock, and continue through Wednesday and Thursday. Mrs. G. H. Mathis, of Columbus, and Rev. Richard Wilkinson, of Aberdeen, will be with us, and, perhaps, other prominent workers.

We desire the presence of every pastor in the district, and two or more delegates from each League.

Where there are no Leaguers, would ask the pastor to send two delegates, anyway. Send those that would be most interested in the work. Select your delegates as early as possible, and forward their names to Dr. H. F. Tatum, Meridian.

An excellent program has been prepared, and will be published later.

We ask the hearty co-operation of all the pastors and Leaguers in making this the very best Conference we have ever had.

W. D. Hawkins,
Sec. Meridian District.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Members on the Jackson District—

Dear Brethren: Please let me call attention to the reminder of Bro. Bingham, in the Advocate of this date, referring to the suggestion made in the recent Pastoral Letter of our Bishops, recommending that the first week in July be observed as a Week of Prayer and Self-denial in the interest of the Twentieth Century Thank-offering. While it is gratifying to this writer to note that the district has subscribed more than $5,000 to this most worthy cause, we recognize that it is far below the ability of our church in its bounds, and that if all will only catch the inspiration from what a few have done, we will not only not be a whit behind any in the State, but will easily stand at the front. As in a previous letter, I insist that by all arguments the Jackson district should lead in the grand procession.

Brethren, what say you? Despite rains and floods, shall we not make the effort? Will not every member make some sacrifice as an evidence of their interest in this great work? Will not everyone give earnest prayer for the success of this cause? Praying God's abundant blessings upon your efforts, I am,

Fraternally,
T. B. Holloman, P. E.

ALUM BAKING POWDERS IN CONGRESS.

REPORT THAT EVIDENCE OF THEIR HARMFULNESS IS OVERWHELMING.

The Committee on Manufactures of the Senate were some time ago directed to investigate food adulterations, and accumulated a volume of testimony upon the subject from the best informed parties and highest scientific authorities in the country.

One of the greatest sources of danger to our foods, the Committee state in their report, exists in alum baking powders. The Committee found the testimony, they say, overwhelmingly condemnatory of the use of alum in baking powders, and recommended that such use be prohibited by law.

Senator Mason, discussing in the Senate the report of the Committee and the several bills introduced to carry the recommendations of the Committee into effect, said:—

When we made this report we made it based on the evidence before us, and the evidence is simply overwhelming. I do not care how big a lobby there may be here for the alum baking powder, I do not care how many memorials they publish, there is no place in the human economy of human food for this thing called alum. The overwhelming evidence of the leading physicians and scientists of this country is that it is absolutely unfit to go into human food, and that in many cases—if the gentleman will read the evidence, some of the physicians say they can trace cases in their own practice—there are diseases of the kidney due to the perpetual use of alum in their daily bread.

When you mix a mineral poison, as they all say that alum is, it is impossible to mix it always to such a degree that there will not be a residuum left of alum, which produces alumina, and which contributes largely to the diseases of the people in this country.

I want to give the Senate an idea of the class of men we have called. They are the leading scientists from every college of the United States that we could get hold of.

Senator Mason, from a long list of scientists who had testified as to the hurtfulness of alum baking powders, and as to the healthfulness of cream of tartar powders, mentioned the following:—

Appleton, John Howard, professor of chemistry, Brown University, Providence, R. I.

Arnold, J. W. S., professor, University of New York.

Atwater, W. O., professor and director, Government experimental station, Washington, D. C.

Barker, George F., professor, University of Pennsylvania.

Caldwell, G. C., professor, Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

Chandler, C. F., professor, Columbia University, New York.

Chittender, Russell H., professor, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

Cornwall, H. B., professor, University of Princeton, New Jersey.

Crampton, C. A., professor, Division of Chemistry, Washington, D. C.

Fairhurt, Alfred, professor, chemist, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

Frear, William, professor, State College, Pennsylvania.

Mallet, John William, professor, University of Virginia.

Mew, W. M., professor, Army and Medical Department, United States Government.

Morton, Henry, president of Stevens Institute, Hoboken, N. J.

Prescott, Albert B., professor, University of Michigan, Ann Harbor, Mich.

Smart, Charles, lieutenant-colonel, assistant surgeon-general, United States Army.

Sternberg, George M., Surgeon-General, United States Army, Washington, D. C.

Vaughan, Victor C., professor, University of Michigan, Ann Harbor, Mich.

Van Reypen, W. K., Surgeon-General, United States Navy, Washington, D. C.

Wiley, Prof. H. W., Chief Chemist, Department of Agriculture, United States, Washington, D. C.

Wyman, Walter, Surgeon-General United States Marine Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Pettigrew Was there any testimony which showed that there were cases of injury to health as a result of constant use of alum?

Mr. Mason Yes; I can turn you to the testimony.

Mr. Pettigrew. I do not care to have the Senator turn to it. I simply want to emphasize the point. I agree with the Senator. It has always been my own impression that alum baking powder is injurious, but I wanted to bring it out and make it emphatic, if the proof sustains that position.

Mr. Mason I quite agree with the Senator. It is claimed that there is not a country in Europe that does not prohibit the use of alum. Certainly three or four of the leading countries of Europe to which I have had my attention called prohibit the use of alum in baking powder.

Mr. Pettigrew Did the chemists who came before the Committee, these professors, generally testify—was it the result of their evidence—that the cream of tartar baking powder is healthy and does not leave a residuum which is injurious to health?

Mr. Mason. Yes; I say emphatically, yes: that the weight of the evidence is, that whenever any of these distinguished men, who have a national reputation, the leading chemists of the colleges, were interrogated upon the point, they stated that fact, every one of them, to my recollection.

Natchez District Conference.

The Natchez District Conference will convene in a three-day session with the Harriston Church, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday after fourth Sunday in July (25, 26, and 27, inclusive). We earnestly crave a full attendance and a very spiritual session.

Brethren and sisters, let us have a Pentecost during the session. Why not? God has promised that when "two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven." (Matt. xviii, 19.)

Now, do we not desire a gracious outpouring of God's Spirit on us? If so, let us tarry at the cross until we are indued with the power, and let us come together expecting to meet God, and have a gracious revival. We want Harriston Church greatly blessed, and we want to send every preacher and delegate to their homes full of the Holy Ghost and power, and we want a gracious revival all over the district. God grant it. And let all say, Amen. As fast as the delegates are elected, the brethren will please send names to me, so I can arrange for their entertainment.

And now let us all pray earnestly that we may have a good and profitable District Conference.

A RESOLUTION.

We have not yet received a report of the proceedings of the Meridian District Conference, but the following resolution adopted by the Conference has been forwarded us for publication:

We rejoice to know that under the financial administration of Dr. Black as its publisher, the New Orleans Christian Advocate has been relieved of the debt that has so long embarrassed it, and is now established on a substantial basis. While the paper may not be all that could be wished, we do not deem it prudent to exploit a new enterprise, which would probably renew financial embarrassment; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this District Conference do not approve the establishment of a Mississippi Advocate, and reaffirms its allegiance to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, while respectfully recommending that its price be reduced to $1.50 a year.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

At their recent meeting the trustees of Grenada College made a most searching investigation into the affairs of the institution. It affords us great pleasure to be able to say the investigation showed that the affairs of the school are in excellent condition. The past session was the most prosperous in the history of the college. Health conditions were perfect, the progress of the students satisfactory, and their deportment all that could be desired. A gracious revival of religion blessed the school and the town during the Spring term. The attendance was limited only by the capacity of the building. An additional building is an immediate and pressing necessity. A Building Committee was appointed and instructed to make all possible speed in erecting a suitable modern school-building, to cost not less than ten thousand dollars. With the four thousand dollars promised by the generous citizens of Grenada, and the six thousand dollars directed to be set apart from the Twentieth Century Thank-offering by the North Mississippi Conference, this building should soon be a reality. It is impossible to further expand the work of Grenada College without this building. In addition to many others, this is a trumpet call to the Methodists of North Mississippi to hasten to increase their education thank-offering. Will they heed the call? Our experience and observation lead us to say they will, if the call is properly placed before them, and they are shown the duty and privilege of responding. Will the pastors see that this is done?

Brethren, this is an urgent, pressing case. Will you help us? We believe you will.

Minden, La., June 18, 1900.

Consistent with its policy to constantly improve its service, the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad is now relaying its track between New Orleans and Slidell, a distance of twenty-nine miles, with new steel rails, weighing seventy-five pounds to the yard.

The entire line has been ballasted in the most approved manner from end to end, and, notwithstanding the increased price of steel, two-thirds of the entire mileage has been relaid with 75-pound new steel rails, and the balance of the line will be relaid as rapidly as the material can be procured.

These improvements are not only an indication of the prosperous condition of the property, but an assurance of safety and comfort to travelers.

The entire Queen and Crescent system, of which the New Orleans and Northeastern forms a part, is now a thoroughly up-to-date system of railroads running the very best equipment in the most modern style.

THE MOTHERS OF MEN.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

The bravest battle that ever was fought!
Shall I tell you where and when?
On the maps of the world you will find it not—
'Twas fought by the mothers of men.

Nay, not with cannon or battle shot,
With sword or nobler pen;
Nay, not with eloquent words or thought,
From mouths of wonderful men!

But deep in a walled-up woman's heart—
Of a woman that would not yield,
But bravely, silently, bore her part—
Lo, there is that battle field!

No marshalling troop, no bivouac song,
No banner to gleam and wave;
But oh! these battles they last so long—
From babyhood to the grave.

Yet, faithful still as a bridge of stars,
She fights in her walled-up town—
Fights on and on in the endless wars,
Then, silent, unseen, goes down.

Oh, ye with banners and battle shot,
And soldiers to shout and praise!
I tell you the mightiest victories fought
Were fought in these silent ways.

Oh, spotless woman in a world of shame,
With spendid and silent scorn,
Go back to God as white as you came—
The mightiest warrior born!

THE POWDER OF SUCCESS.

Josh Billings says: "Energy is what wins. Many men fail to reach the mark because the powder in them is not proportioned to the bullet." Probably more young men fail to achieve success in life from lack of energy—that force which—achieves, accomplishes, pushes its way through obstacles—than from almost anything else. No matter how much ability a young man may have, or how clever, courteous, or amiable he may be, if he lacks energy, the powder of success, he will never accomplish much.

Nothing else, excepting honesty, is so much in demand in these days as "vim." Everybody believes in it; everywhere we hear: "Give us a man who can do something; a man who has push; a man with some iron in his blood." Ability is worthless without the power to put it into action. Resolutions, however good, are useless without the energy necessary to carry them out. Push clears the track; people get out of the way of an energetic man. Even small ability with great energy will accomplish more than the greatest ability without energy. If fired from a gun with sufficient velocity, a tallow candle can be shot through an inch board.

On every hand we see fine young men and women failing, their ability going to waste, standing in equilibrium, for the lack of "force." If we could only shake them up, put a little powder into them, and set them going, they might amount to something, but without this they are failures. They seem to have every other quality except the power of pushing their way in the world, without which almost all their ability is wasted. The finest engine ever made would be absolutely useless without power to propel it, and drag the load to its destination.

The world admires energetic men. Blow them this way and that, and they only bend; they never break. Put obstacles in their way, and they surmount them. It is almost impossible to keep such men down. Trip one up, and instantly he is on his feet again; bury him in the mud, and almost instantly he is up and at it again. Such men as he build cities, establish schools and hospitals, whiten the ocean with sails, and blacken the air with the smoke of their industry.

The pathway of life is strewn with wrecks of those who have failed because they lacked this propelling power. The moment they strike an obstacle, they stop; they have no power to climb or overcome. The genius of achievement seems to have been left out of their make-up; their blood lacks the iron of energy, the force of accomplishment.

An old Scottish clergyman, when he came to a text too wonderful for him to comprehend or explain, instead of attempting to convince his hearers, by a formidable array of words, that he was master of its meaning, would say: "Brethren, this is a difficult text, but do not let us be discouraged by it. Let us look the difficulty boldly in the face, and pass on."

Like this clergyman, these people are all right until they strike something difficult, until they come to an obstacle—then they "pass on," while he who possesses the powder of success blows the obstacle out of his path and makes its debris serve as material for his further accomplishment.—Success.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M.D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tnla Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

SLIDING DOWN HILL.

BY CHARLES H. DORRIS.

"Here we go,
O'er the snow,
Sliding down the hill"

The wind was blowing like a hurricane, so mama said, and straight up a road which for miles was almost as level as a floor.

"O," said Benny, to his little visiting city cousin Jo, "let's go and slide down hill."

"Slide down hill!" exclaimed Jo in astonishment.

"Slide down hill in the Summer time!"

"Yes, in the Summer time!" answered Benny, while mama laughed.

"But where's your hill?"

"Why, the road in front of the house, and the wind and our wheels."

"O!" said Jo.

"You see," said Benny, explaining, "we take our wheels up the road a ways, then get on, and the wind almost blows us back again. I tell you its jolly, just like sliding down hill."

Pretty soon the two little cousins went whizzing past, and mama laughed when she saw how pleased little Jo seemed to be taking his first slide down hill on a level road in the Summer time. But the next time the wheels spun by she saw that Benny and Jo were not the riders.

"I wonder who's on now," she thought, as she threw her apron over her head and went down to the gate to look. Presently the two strange riders came trudging back against the wind, puffing just as they would pulling a sled up hill. They were poor Widow Bailey's two little children.

"O Nora," she heard the little brother exclaim, "be'nt they good to let us ride?"

And Nora answered: "Yes, Patsy, they're doin' just as the Bible tells 'em to! It's nice when people do that." Then mama went back to the house, and that very afternoon took some good things to eat over to the sick mother of little Nora and Patsy. "For," she thought, "that poor woman is my neighbor, whom God would have me help. And my little boy has shown me my duty."

It was a beautiful day. And at night, when mother and Benny and little city cousin Jo talked it all over, they agreed that they had had a most delightful time.

"It is better to give than to receive," said mama. And Benny answered:

"I 'most believe it is."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

"WOULD YOU DARE TELL GOD THAT?"

Mary is a thoughtful little girl. She is very careful about what she says. Her brother is quite unlike her in this respect. She thinks before she speaks, while he speaks, and thinks afterward; and very often when too late, he is sorry for or ashamed of what he has said.

One day he came home very angry with a schoolmate about something which had happened on the playground. He told Mary about it, and the more he thought and talked of it, the angrier he grew, and he began to say terribly harsh, bitter and unreasonable things about his comrade. Some of the things he said Mary knew were not true; but he was too angry and excited to weigh his words. She listened for a moment, and then said, gently:

"Would you dare tell God that, Ralph?"

Ralph paused as if some one had struck him. He felt the rebuke implied in her words, and he realized how wickedly and untruthfully he had spoken.

"No, I wouldn't tell God that," he said with a red face.

"Then I wouldn't tell it to anybody," said Mary.

"Oh, that's all right for you to say," said Ralph; "but if you had such a temper as I've got—"

"I'd try to get control of it," said his sister, gently. "When it's likely to get the upper hand of you, just stop long enough to think, 'Would I dare tell God that?' and it won't be long before you'll break yourself of saying such terrible things."—Young People's Paper.

THE HARVEST.

Mr. Depew, in an address to railroad men, said: "Twenty-five years ago I knew every man, woman, and child in Peekskill. And it has been a study with me to mark the course of the boys, in every grade of life, who started with myself—to see what has become of them. Last Fall I was up there, and began to count them over, and the lesson was most instructive. Some of them became clerks, some merchants, manufacturers, lawyers, or doctors. And it is remarkable that every one of them that had drinking habits is now dead—not a single one of my age now living. Except a few who were taken off by sickness, every one has proved a wreck, and has wrecked his family, and did it from rum and whisky, and no other cause. Of those who were church-going people, who were steady, industrious, and hard-working men, and frugal and thrifty, every one without exception owns the house in which he lives, and has something laid by, the interest on which, with his house, would carry him through many a rainy day."—Christian Endeavor World.

THOMAS B. REED'S IDEAS OF LIFE.

"You are well experienced in this world's affairs," I ventured. "What do you take to be the object of life? Money?"

"No."

"Individual happiness?"

"Not wholly. Right action. A man should take a part in the affairs of his fellow-men, and live up to the dictates of his conscience in acting. He should be of some use. If he has desires, all the better. A desire for anything that will help others and satisfy you is a good thing. A man has a right to desire money or place or public praise, but he has no right to any selfish feeling in the matter. He ought to desire to be liberal and earn his reward by service of some kind."

"Do you think the world offers as much to individuals as it ever did?"

"If we can trust history, it does. The literature of earlier times seems more complaining than our own. Men were just as dissatisfied a thousand years ago as they are now. Man seems always to have craved a great deal more than he could obtain. Individually, I think, the age is richer with opportunities than for ages. The system under which we live is somewhat defective, and many suffer by it; but it is changing and the world grows better. The unselfish man will find enough, I fancy, if he honestly fulfills his duty to his fellow-men. It is all a question of peace of mind, and that can be obtained in various ways—the best one, by doing right."—Success.

HOW A LITTLE GIRL STARTED A REVIVAL.

An exchange tells a story about a little girl who went into a neighboring town, where there was a revival. She attended the meeting, and heard the story of the cross, and gave herself to Jesus.

When she returned home she went to an old man who was a Christian, and said to him:

"Can't we have a prayer meeting?"

"We?" said he; "I don't know of any other Christian in the district."

"Well," said she, "you are a Christian and I am a Christian; can't we have a prayer meeting?"

"Well," said he, "we can say 'we' then."

They did have a prayer meeting. The next day two or three more came. God answered their prayers, and now between twenty and thirty have found the Savior.

In this day of activity there is great danger, not of doing too much, but of praying too little for so much work. These two—work and prayer, action and contemplation—are twin sisters. Each pine without the other. We are ever tempted to cultivate one or the other disproportionately. Let us imitate him who sought the mountain-top as his refreshment after toil, but never left duties undone or sufferers unrelieved in pain. Lord, teach us to pray.—A. Maclaren.

Excursions.

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

HAM—Mrs. NARCISSA D. HAM was born in Stewart county, Ga., Aug. 12, 1830. She was piously trained, and in very early life united with the M. E. Church, South, of which she remained a devoted and useful member until Nov. 20, 1899, when God called her to join the saints in the church triumphant. The very presence of this godly woman was ever an inspiration for good. None who knew her could doubt the genuineness of her piety. While she was exceeding quiet and unassuming, her Christian purity and loveliness of soul were self-apparent. Her devotion to God and consecration to Christian service were truly worthy of our emulation. No company or worldly cares could make her neglect her private prayers, or the daily study of God's Word. Her chief desire was to walk with God and lead others into closer communion with him.

Sister Ham was called to pass through fiery trials, and to withstand the shock of crushing griefs, but found God's grace ever sufficient. She suffered much, but murmured not, "counting all things but loss, that she might win Christ and be found in him." She met death triumphantly as a sweet release from pain. Her last words were, "Love the Lord!"

Her pastor, H. B. THOMASON.

BETTERTON—Miss MAGGIE E. BETTERTON, daughter of N. and Deborah (Finley) Betterton, was born in Haynesville, Ala., Nov. 20, 1854, and removed with her father's family to Farmerville, Union parish, La., in 1848, where she died in great peace, Dec. 23, 1899. In 1878 Miss Betterton joined the M. E. Church, South. She fully met all the requirements of the church of her choice, and was diligent and joyful in its service as long as health and life remained. She was a woman of capacious mind, good attainments, and noble affections, and all these she joyfully consecrated to her Master's service. She rendered valuable service as a teacher in the Sunday-school and in the day-schools of the parish. Being a woman of great reticence, she was little given to holding forth about her religious attainments. Her religion was "not in word or in tongue, but in deed and in truth." Her daily Christian demeanor bespoke the meek and quiet spirit within, which, in the sight of God, is of great price. She loved life and friends and home, but was ready to depart and be with Christ. That she walked with God during life is our assurance that she is now among the saints in light. Her pastor, H. B. THOMASON.

DAVENPORT—Almighty God, in his providence, has seen fit to remove from earth to heaven our beloved associate, companion and sister, Mrs. SUE R. DAVENPORT.

Sister Davenport combined in an eminent degree a gentle and lovable disposition, a sense of duty, and a loyalty of friendship rarely equaled. Her worth, her character and her integrity were recognized by all. Her familiar form and face will never be among us again. We will never feel the cordial grasp of her hand, nor see her genial smile, or hear her pleasant voice, but her memory will live in the hearts of those who loved her. She was a loving, tender wife and mother, leaving to her children a heritage more precious than the wealth of this world. For long years she had been connected with the Methodist Church and our Ladies' Aid Society, in both of which she was an earnest worker, and loved and loving member.

Resolved, By the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church, that while we mourn her death, we bow in humble submission to the providence of God, but grieve not as those without hope, for we know it is well with her.

Resolved, That we tender the family of our deceased sister our tearful and heartfelt sympathies in their affliction.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of our society, and the secretary send a copy to the family.

MRS. CORDELIA CAMPBELL, Pres.

MRS. MAMIE LEWIS, Sec'y.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

The Grocer who offers an imitation of Pearline and says it's "the same as," "as good as," etc., gives you a poor imitation of the truth. To get a little more profit he's willing to give you all the dissatisfaction and the risk. If you want an easier, less wearing, more economical way of washing than with soap, nothing is "as good as" Pearline. Twenty years of use have proved what it will do to save work—and what it won't do in the way of harm. 598

Don't argue the matter—use Pearline.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trilling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

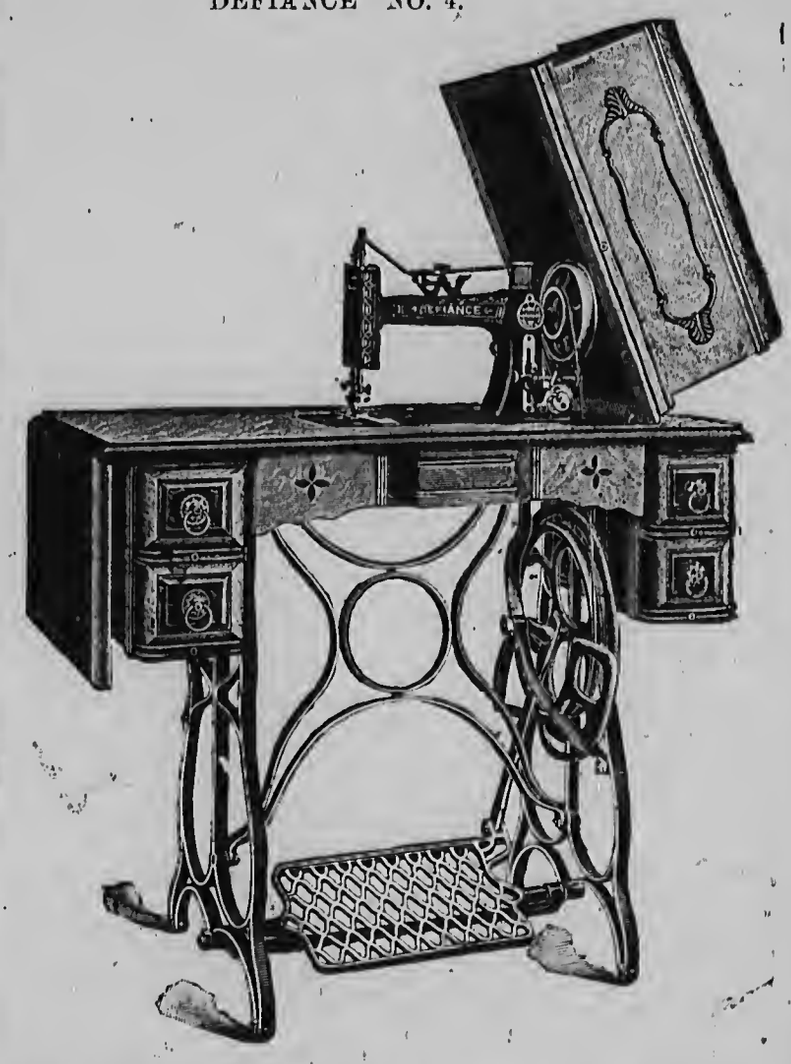
For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

New Machine Offer.

DEFIANCE NO. 4.



The Defiance Machine is the perfection of simplicity, durability, speed, strength and ease of operation.

Construction. It is constructed of the best material in use, every bearing, without an exception, being of steel or case-hardened.

The Mechanical Devices of this machine are a combination of tried mechanical principles. In detail it differs materially from other machines. Its simplicity is at once apparent, and its great durability is admitted by the best mechanical experts.

The Arm is large and roomy, 8x5¼ inches in the clear.

No Vibration. This machine does not vibrate. Its motion is easy and quiet.

Lock Stitch. It is a lock-stitch shuttle machine.

Speedy, Light, Quiet. It is as speedy, light and quiet-running as any shuttle machine manufactured.

Double Feed—Positive Four-Motion. The double feed possesses advantages over all others. Its very shape and form obviates all the disadvantages arising from double feeds as they have heretofore been constructed, and combines in this machine all the advantages of both the single and double feed, doing away with the objections to either of them.

The operation of the feed mechanism is positive, giving an accurate four motion movement to the feed without the use of springs.

The Needle Bar. This machine has a self-lubricating needle bar, which is always kept clean, well-oiled, and the oil can not drop on the work and soil it.

The machine is self-threading. Put in the bobbin, draw the thread towards you, through the slot and, it is done.

The Loose Pulley for winding the bobbins without running the machine is so constructed as to admit of an instantaneous stoppage and starting of the machine without stopping the treadle movement—a valuable improvement peculiar to this machine.

Automatic Bobbin Winder. The bobbin winder operates automatically, winding the thread on the bobbin regularly and as evenly as the thread on a spool. Can be operated without running the machine.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine; 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider, Foot and Slide, 1 Thread Cutter.

Additional Accessories. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screwdriver, Oil Can filled with oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb-screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

DEFIANCE NO. 7¼.

This cut shows our new and popular style, the No. 7¼ Defiance Drop Cabinet perfectly protecting the machine from dust, and making a convenient and ornamental stand. When machine is ready for use the head is in same position as on ordinary style; when through using, it requires only the turning over of the leaf of table, and the sewing machine head drops into the case or cabinet between the drawers, completely out of sight, forming a handsome table with highly polished top.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of one drawer at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $32. Our price, $18.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $34. Our price, $19.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $36. Our price, $20.

No. 7¼ Machine, Drop head cabinet, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $38. Our price, $23.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Eight thousand foreign troops have been landed at Taku.

Brigadier-General Joseph Wheeler has assumed command of the Department of the Lakes.

In a fight between troops and peasants in Bulgaria ninety persons were killed and 327 wounded.

A movement has been started at Paris to organize an international union of Boer sympathizers.

It is announced in Shanghai that the Dowager Empress has ordered the extermination of foreigners.

The American and Russian relief force sent to Tien Tsin was beaten back and awaited reinforcements.

About one-half of the American troops now in Cuba will be returned to this country within a few months.

The United States cruiser "New Orleans" has sailed from Manila, and it is supposed she is on her way to China.

The Governor of Bombay reports 10,277 deaths from cholera out of 15,479 cases during the week ending June 16.

Gen. Joseph Wheeler may become a candidate for Congress when the unexpired term recently resigned by him expires.

The Sixth United States Cavalry, now at the Presidio, Cal., will be recruited to full war strength. It will probably be sent to China.

After taking 1000 ballots without result, the Democratic congressional convention in session at Newport, Ark., adjourned until Wednesday.

Late reports from Mississippi show that the damage done growing crops by excessive rains is more general and extensive than at first thought.

The Prohibition party will probably make the fight in the present campaign on a straight prohibition platform to the exclusion of all other issues.

The Navy Department has been notified by Admiral Kempff that four Americans were killed and seven wounded in ambuscade, near Tien Tsin, by the Chinese.

Admiral Kempff reports that the allied forces entered Tien Tsin, Saturday, and have set out to assist the foreign relief column which left Tien Tsin for Peking on June 10.

It is reported that all foreign ministers and foreigners at Peking were safe Tuesday, June 19, and were preparing to leave with the authority of the Chinese Government.

Lord Roberts cables London that Gen. Buller has occupied Staunderton and Hamilton Heidelberg. Krueger's present force is officially estimated at from 15,000 to 20,000 men.

Two hundred and fifty Cuban school teachers have started for Boston to receive a general course of instruction during the Summer under the auspices of Harvard University.

The battleship "Oregon" has left Hong Kong for Taku two days ahead of her expected departure. She is being pushed for a fast run, and may make record time. The distance is 1500 miles.

Admiral Remey, who is in command of the Asiatics quadron, has been ordered from Manila to Taku, on board the cruiser "Brooklyn." The "Brooklyn" will carry as many troops as possible.

Eight hundred Sikhs and 200 Welsh Fusiliers have effected a junction with the American, German and Russian forces which had been cut off by the Chinese about nines miles from Tien Tsin.

The Chinese situation grows worse instead of better, and official Washington circles regard the outlook as so bad that the Navy and War Departments are making strenuous efforts to be ready for any emergency.

It is estimated that there are 360,000 Chinese troops around Peking, having in their possession 220 7-centimetre Creusot guns, 18 Kruppe and 150 Maxims, with a practically inexhaustible supply of ammunition.

Joseph Mullet and James Fitzharris, the Irishmen who served sentences in an English prison for complicity in the Phœnix Park murders, and who were recently refused admission at the port of New York, were deported on June 23.

Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister to Washington, made an unsuccessful attempt to secure from the Washington officials an armistice in the operation of American troops until Li Hung Chang can reach Peking and bring about a cessation of the disorder.

The situation of the 10,000 International troops going to the relief of Peking is regarded as perilous. No direct news has been received from Peking in fourteen days, and nothing from Admiral Seymour for twelve days. Russia and Japanare both hurrying forward more troops. Sheng, director of telegraphs, reports that the foreigners in Peking are safe, but that all the legations have been burned, save the British, Austrian and Russian.

29th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 7 to 21, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

J. B LEFTWICH, President, Mobile, Ala.

GROWING SOULS.

BY SUSAN COOLIDGE.

How does the soul grow? Not all in a minute;
Now it may lose ground, and now it may win it;
Now it resolves, and again tho will faileth;
Now it rejoiceth, and now it bewailoth;
Now its hopes fructify, then they are blighted;
Now it walks willenly, now gropes benighted;
Fed by discouragements, taught by disaster;
So it goes forward, now slower, now faster,
Till, all the pain past and failure made whole,
It is full grown, and the Lord rules the soul.

PREDESTINATION; "MILK FOR BABES."

BY BISHOP KEENER.

"For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son."—Rom. viii, 29.

I.

To create a universe of sons was the final cause of predestination. What a vast conception was this, to create a heaven, rather than a world, upon the model of his Son!—a region filled with persons, glorious in majesty, wisdom, and power; to be ultimately enthroned on the plane of Godhead! Those whom God foreknew were not only to be distinguished from nature in its loftiest moods, but were to be above all spirits, whether principalities, or powers, or thrones, or dominions in the heavenly places. So transcendent a scheme of love involved many steps: the Son making himself of no reputation; taking the form of a servant; being made in the likeness of men; humbling himself even as a man; becoming obedient unto death, even to death on the cross. Then his exaltation at the right hand of God; a name given him above every name; every knee bowing, and every tongue confessing, that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

Sonship is the highest conceivable expression of personality. It is a personality we share with the Son; of which the Spirit makes us conscious in the instant of conversion—"the spirit of adoption whereby we cry, 'Abba, Father.'"

With this sense of a new personality there comes a wonderfully distinct sense of the Creator; that he who forgives my sins is the One who made the world, which gives a new expression to nature, and fills it with delight.

So high personality as Sonship would seem to be far above all limitation. It would be tantamount to limiting the nature of the Son himself. Therefore "the having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to himself, according to the good pleasure of his will, to the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved"—Eph. i—takes out all limitation from the word "predestinate."

If to "predestinate" is taken in the Calvinistic sense, of determining the elect and the non-elect, it substitutes "sovereignty" for personality, and there is left no room for faith. On the other hand, the fact that faith is introduced as a condition of sonship proves sonship to be without any limit. And such is the fact, for "all things are possible to him that believeth." And it is this truth that St. Paul seeks to impress, that "all things work together for good to them that love God;" that in this relation there is the universal expression of a universal love. "If God be for us, who can be against us?"

Faith can afford to rely on it as a boundless promise—higher than the heavens, deeper than the sea, broader than the earth. Foreknowledge can not narrow it, for it expresses the freedom of divine as well as human personality. It is the fixed and eternal law of freedom secured and centered in the gift of a Son; the very highest statement of divine love.

No wonder it thrilled the stars and the sons of God into song and shout when God laid the foundations of the earth, and predestinated humanity to sonship! Who can measure the possibilities of such a relation! "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying, 'Abba, Father;' wherefore thou art no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." (Gal. iv.)

Under the chart and arch of a universal predestination mankind is "called," is "justified," is "glorified." These constitute steps, not chains, of sequence, which begin in Christ, and end in glory.

II.

It would seem that no human ingenuity could separate the threads of gold in the first chapter of the Ephesians, or disturb the sublime statement in Rom. viii, that the one great purpose of God in creating a world, to the glory of the Son, was, "that he might be the first-born among many brethren;" a world designed through Christ for Christ. This purpose controls all things. To this end "all things work together for good to them who love God, who are the called according to his purpose." This undivided purpose grasped an uncreated universe of persons, who were one in God's foreknowledge, one by creation, one in Adam's moral wreck, and one in predestination to an inheritance of sonship. In such community of life and death there would seem to be no room for election.

It was highly important that man's personality should be held intact from all invasion. The Calvinistic theory of sovereignty as a cause, independent of all else, constitutes an adamantine limit. It is the cast-iron doctrine of Augustine—a sanctified fatalism—that limits both God and man, dividing humanity into two distinct portions—the elect and the reprobate.

It is difficult to separate foreknowledge from divine responsibility where power is infinite, though knowledge is not necessarily influence. The one condition of faith in the divine scheme of predestination effectually secures man's personality, because without it faith is impossible. Even God himself can not invade this condition by any limitation without destroying man's responsibility. That he has conditioned life upon faith in his Son necessarily gives to predestination that quality of grace and love which embraces all mankind—"having predestinated us unto the adoption of children."

Faith is essential to a personal cooperation with God in the work of recovery. If man could be saved without any concurrent act, he would presently cease to have either consciousness or conscience, and would perish in the stupor of fatalism.

When the dark clouds of metaphysical speculation are lifted from these passages the mind instinctively looks back to that glorious hour when "God spake, and it was done;" when amid rattling thunders, and leaping fires, all the mountains, and floods, and systems of worlds at his word fell into place; when nature saw his right hand, and heard his voice; when clouds and darkness gathered themselves away, and the whole world became a garden of God, rich in fruit and in the ripe gold of Autumn.

The mystery and glory of Him who made all that was made oppress the thought of man, and the heart asks, "Why should God love, or even notice me?" The inspired Word opens the depth and height of this mystery of love. That it was God's interest in the Son that shaped earth and man to the sublime end of making a universe of sons, in which his Son should be pre-eminent; where myriads should bear witness to his eternal Godhead. "If ye believe not that I am, ye shall die in your sins." Then truly is my life involved in the honor and love of God's dear Son—"my life is hid with Christ in God." Without him I am nothing; in him I am "no more a servant, but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ." (Gal. iv, 7.)

Scriptural predestination elevates the whole race to a divine personality—that of sonship. It leaves out none. It brings all within the possibility of a divine nature. The element of personality is equally essential to faith, to hope, to love. To throw out all by non-election, or any, fatally invades human personality, and by so far makes a universe of sons an impossibility, because things essentially contradictory are not possible, even to God.

Ocean Springs, Miss., June 28, 1900.

THE PASSING OF THE GIANTS.

BY BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.

Many persons are inquiring: "What has become of our great men? Has our country ceased to produce giants like those who blessed and honored former generations?"

If the complaint is justified by facts, we may find a partial answer, at least, in a passage written by Thomas Carlyle. He says: "This is an age which, as it were, denies the existence of great men; denies the desirableness of great men. Show our critics a great man—a Luther, for example—they begin to what they call 'account for him;' not to worship him, but to take the dimensions of him, and bring him out to be a very little kind of man. He was 'the creature of the time,' they say; the time called him forth; the time did everything; he did nothing but what we, the little critic, could have done, too! This seems to me but melancholy work. The time call forth? Alas! we have known times call loudly enough for their great man, but did not find him when they called! He was not there. Providence had not sent him. The time calling its loudest, had to go down to confusion and wreck because he would not come when called.

"I liken common, languid times, with their unbelief, distress, perplexity; their languid, doubting character, impotently crumbling down through ever worse distress into final ruin—all this I liken to dry, dead fuel, waiting for the lightning out of heaven which shall quicken it. The great man, with his free force direct out of God's own hand, is the lightning. All blazes now around him. The critic thinks the dry, mouldering sticks have called him forth. They wanted him greatly, no doubt; but as to calling him forth! They are critics of small vision, who think that the dead sticks have created the fire. To lose faith in God's divine lightning, and to retain faith only in dead sticks—this seems to me the last consummation of unbelief."

This rugged Scotch surgeon seems to lay a strong hand on the seat of the disease which makes our times so barren of great men. At last it is a sterility produced by swallowing great draughts of disguised fatalism, which blunts a sense of responsibility and paralyzes courage—qualities without which no great man was ever produced.

We witness a strange condition of things in our day. We see the fatalistic creed of election and fore-ordination driven out of theology, apparently never to return, and all the world, including the scientists and the men of letters, applauding the expulsion of this black spirit of despair. At the same time we see all the world, including the same scientists and men of letters, welcoming the monster into new habitations, from which he may go forth and do evil among men as he never could, and never did, when housed in theology. We find the scientists talking of the evolution of men by processes of environment and heredity. What is this but the doctrine of election under a scientific name? We find the man of letters writing history, biography, novels, and even poetry (a most melancholy type), under the influence of this doctrine of despair. Out of all the mass of books being printed, there seeps through upon the people the corrupting notion that a man is but the product of his ancestry and his surroundings, the last result of blind forces of which he is the offspring and not the master. This type of the philosophy of history is more widespread than any other, notwithstanding the perishing of Calvinism in the ecclesiastical world. But it is nothing under heaven but Calvinism stripped of its clerical apparel, imposing itself on the world in the garb of literature and science.

Its effects also are identically the same as when preached from the pulpit. It paralyzes men. The bite of the Gila monster does not more certainly benumb the system and destroy the life. Some of its victims expire in raptures of optimism, crying: "All's well with the world, and if it is not so, I have no responsibility for it. The times made me, and what have I to do that I should think or speak ill of my maker, or seek his reformation?" Others die in the agonizing throes of pessimism, bewailing in their delirium: "Everything is going to the bad. We have come from chaos, lived in disorder, and are going into outer darkness, if not into absolute nothingness, and none of us can help it."

How can great men be nourished by such teaching? The great man seeks the truth, but such a pursuit is a fool's errand, if the truth can work no change in the world; and, of course, no benign change is possible in a world dominated by heredity and environment. It is not worth while to investigate evolution even, for it will grind out its results just as well when we are ignorant as when we are informed of how its machinery works.

The great man dares to believe that by asserting the truth he will make things better, and hence he takes the risk of proclaiming the truth he sees. He has courage—the courage of conviction, the courage to believe that truth is mighty, and will prevail; that it is absolutely feasible as nothing else is in God's earth. But this confident creed is flatly contradicted by the dogma that a man is the product of his times. If that dogma be accepted, we must believe that men like Moses and Paul and Luther and Wesley changed nothing. They were only puppets apparently agonizing to bring forth a new world, although in reality they were merely the natural outcome of an old world. We may get some greater-looking puppets than they to-morrow. Sufficient unto the day is the good thereof. Let us watch and wait.

Ah! we will get no more like them till we throw off the stupor induced by this diabolical anodyne of fatalism, which our modern materialists have injected into the social, political, scientific, philosophic and literary veins of the world.

These great men knew they were free, and that they were not the victims, but the masters of their times. Given the conditions in Egypt in the age of the exodus to find Moses, and you have an insolvable problem. The burning bush, not the Nile mud, made him. Martin Luther was not in solution in the times of Leo X., waiting the touch of Tetzel to be precipitated. John Wesley broke in upon the dreary life of the eighteenth century, and startled it as with a voice from heaven. He was not moulded by it. He fused it in the fires of God's truth, and shaped it to a nobler form.

It is time we had some more of the same sort of men. If the mere calling for them would fetch them, our times are calling loud enough to get them in all conscience. The demand for great men was never more urgent, and the honors awaiting them were never so great. The world is so anxious to honor them it runs with smothering loads of laurel for small men, if they do anything that bears the slightest semblance of greatness. In truth, our laurel has been so extravagantly used we sometimes find that we have scarcely enough to go around all the small heads nodding and begging for it. Witness the toy heroes of the Spanish-American war, with their contentions for titles, glories, and prize money.

But the desperate need for leaders in the mighty work set before the present generation will be met. Among us now, perhaps, they walk as unappreciated as Moses in the court of Pharaoh, or Luther in his early days. They will stand up presently and tell this lazy, listless, faithless world that it must quit drifting, and get about its business. And the world will obey them. It always obeys when a man speaks to it as one having authority, and not as the scribes. The world knows a king when it sees him, and minds him, whether with crown off or on. Wherefore real kings do not need crowns, and care little for them.

The succession of kingly men will never perish from the earth, though there be parched interregnums filled with pigmies between them. They will continue to come and reign and bless the earth as long as there are found any left who believe in truth and human freedom, and the power of truth to uplift a world inhabited by free agents. When this simple faith has perished from among men—if it shall ever perish—the wretched herd still on the planet at that time will do well to get off somewhere else, if they can, for the miserable thing will then soon burn up of spontaneous combustion.

Perish this doctrine of devils, which, while holding that the fittest survive, makes creation to culminate in a race of slaves, chained by an invincible heredity to an ancestry shading ever towards brutality behind it, and bound to a posterity of unredeemable bondmen in front! It is a lie that scandalizes man, dishonors God, impoverishes the earth, and robs heaven. It is not a good working hypothesis even, for it leads to inglorious indolence and incompetency.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

To the Ministers and Members of the M. E. Church, South, within the Bounds of the Mississippi Conference, to the Friends of Female Education in the State, and to the Friends of Whitworth Female College Everywhere:

In accepting the positions to which we have been elected at the head of this historic institution, and in undertaking its management and control, we are not unappreciative of the labor and responsibility that we have assumed, nor are we unmindful of the disadvantages imposed by our inexperience and lack of technical training; but we confidently rely upon the favor and help of Him in whose name we have accepted this work, and of you, whose representatives have elected us to these positions. We enter upon the work prepared to repair and renovate the buildings, and thoroughly equip the institution, and determined that there shall be no lack of consecrated energy in our effort to sustain and add to the high reputation of this institution, dear to every Methodist in Mississippi by its association with the names of Milton J. Whitworth and Harvey F. Johnson.

We have selected our faculty with great care, and our purpose is to do thorough, honest work. We have no fight to make upon any other female college owned or maintained by Church or State. We believe the tide of educational sentiment that is rising in the land will sustain every worthy institution, and we enter the field of honest competition proposing to do such excellent work as to entitle us to the confidence and support of all who believe a broad and thorough Christian education to be the condition of the noblest Christian womanhood. We expect to make our prices and terms as moderate as the thoroughness of the work and its cost to us will reasonably allow, and we expect to publish these rates in the catalogue, and to adhere to them. This does not mean that we recognize no conditions demanding reductions, as when a man would send two girls, or when all payments are made in advance for the entire session: but it means that we shall have no confidential rates for single students, even though girls should go from us to other institutions because of differences between rates published and rates actually made.

We ask your aid, for without your loyal support we can not hope to succeed. With it, and with God's help, we can not fail.

1. If you have a girl to educate, send to us for a catalogue, and let us show you what we are prepared to do.

2. Send us at once a postal card, giving the name and address of every girl in your neighborhood who will or should go somewhere to college this Fall. Your brethren,

A. F. WATKINS,

TWENTIETH CENTURY RALLY AT BOYCE, LA.

MR. EDITOR: I hope you are not weary of my "continual coming," as I feel that I ought to write you about the last Twentieth Century meeting I attended.

On the tenth I was at Boyce, at the request of Rev. A. W. Turner, to take up a Twentieth Century collection. It was a literal taking up. The people gave freely and liberally after, what the speaker thought, a proper presentation of the great movement; its genesis, its growth, and its necessity to the life of the church, and its influence upon individual character through thanksgiving and self sacrifice. There was no auctioneering method used, no joke told; the matter was simply laid on the consciences of the hearers, and they gladly pledged $212—more than $2 per member for the whole circuit—by one society thereof. I thought this spoke well for the previous work of Bro. Turner. The harvest was ready, and this writer had only to reap.

If the preachers will not be afraid that this offering will interfere with the Conference collections, and will properly present it, I am sure they will do well on both. I find that the more you get a man to do, the more he will do.

I hope we Louisiana Methodists will justify the expectations of the Great Teacher, who has inaugurated this movement to strengthen the schools of the church, that these may send forth strong, spiritual men and women to combat and counteract the materialistic spirit of the age.

ISAAC D. WALL.

Reckon on Christ to do his part perfectly. Directly you give, he takes. Directly you will open the door, he enters. Directly you will roll back the flood gates, he pours in a glorious tide of fullness—fullness of wealth, of power, of joy. The clay has only to be plastic to the hand of a Palissy; the marble has only to be pliant to the chisel of a Michael Angelo; the organ has only to be responsive to the slightest touch of a Handel; the student has only to follow the least hint of a Faraday or a Whewell—and there will be no failure in results. O, to be equally susceptible to the molding influences of Christ! We shall not fail in realizing the highest ideal of which we are capable, if only we will let him do his work unhindered.—Rev F. B. Meyer.

Misery is caused, for the most part, not by a heavy crash of disaster, but by the corrosion of less evils, which canker enjoyment and undermine security.—Exchange.

OUR HYMN BOOK.

In many places our Standard Hymn Book seems to be almost entirely ignored, and is being substituted by the modern style of hymns. Some of the present-day hymns are good, but the majority of them will bear no comparison with the hymns in our book. Recently I have read with some care Dean Tillett's Annotated Edition of our Hymn Book, and I fail to find any good reason for its being displaced by any other book whatever. The hymns in our book are the expressions of feelings and experiences which were born in the greatest revival of modern times. All the yearnings of the convicted spirit, all the gropings in the darkness of sin, all the phases of spiritual desire, all the joy of the pardoned soul, all the deep peace of the sanctified nature—these have all been expressed in our hymns with a power unequaled in any literature. Watts and the Wesleys and others passed through those experiences, and their hymns simply give out in rhythmic utterance what went on in their own souls. The influence these hymns had in promoting the great revival of the eighteenth century can not be computed. They were so pertinent to the condition of men groaning under the burden of sin, so adapted to every phase of Christian experience, that, when sung with the spirit, they were overpowering. There is a solemnity pervading many of these hymns which you fail to find in any modern hymn. What hymn of to-day can approach the awe-inspiring solemnity of Watts' hymn beginning,

"Eternal Power, whose high abode Becomes the grandeur of a God"!

Some of these hymns march along with a tread that wakes the echoes of Sinai's throbbing mount.

"The Lord declares his will,
And keeps the world in awe;
Amidst the smoke on Sinai's hill
Breaks out his fiery law."

Some of these hymns move on so calmly and beautifully that you look around to see if heaven has not come down to earth.

"The opening heavens around me shine
With beams of sacred bliss"

Some of these hymns glide into the troubled heart with such a blessed balm of grace that you expect the next moment to feel the tender touch of the great Healer.

"Peace, troubled soul, thou need'st not fear;
Thy great Provider still is near."

Some of these hymns sing such strains of love that you realize a baptism of peace from God's heaven above.

"Oh, love divine, how sweet thou art!
When shall I find my willing heart
All taken up by thee"!

Such hymns were not manufactured. They were not made to order. They were born in the agonies and joys, in the hopes and fears, in the sadness and gladness, in the despair and exultations of earnest souls. Hence they fit human conditions anywhere and under all circumstances. Such being the case, I can not see why any preacher will allow these hymns to be displaced by modern hymns mostly manufactured for the trade.

My conviction is that the disuse of these old hymns is one of the causes of the weakness and spiritual apathy of which we hear so much now-a-days. While we may have the genuine religion, it seems to lack the robustness and hardihood of that which possessed our fathers. The spirit of resolute endurance which characterized their faith is wanting in many of us. Perhaps the reason for this may be found partly in the song service of our churches. When a man, wearied with the labors and cares of life, goes to the house of God for refreshment and recreation in worship, and is then treated to a dose of modern ditties set to jingling, jangling tunes, he gets neither refreshment nor recreation. His spiritual nature is not strengthened as it ought to be by song, and he goes away weaker than when he came. And in the constant repetition of such an exercise our religion is getting to be like those songs—flimsy and flabby, and lacking in spiritual vigor. If we would get the spirit of these old hymns into our hearts, and sing them with earnestness and power, doubtless we would take on new strength, and arouse ourselves from our lethargy. Just think of one of our great congregations in earnest enthusiasm singing Charles Wesley's grand old hymn:

"Arm of the Lord, awake, awake!
Thine own immortal strength put on!
With terror clothed, hell's kingdom shake,
And cast thy foes with fury down."

There is a record of its being sung at one of Mr. Fletcher's meetings by ten thousand people, and the effect was simply overwhelming.

I do confess that I would be delighted to hear again that old invitation hymn which has brought so many thousands of sinners to the feet of Jesus, "Come, ye sinners, poor and needy." What modern hymn for penitents will ever bring so many sobbing souls to peace and joy as have been brought to that state by Watts' hymn, 'Show pity, Lord; oh, Lord, forgive"?

The highest authority in our church says of these hymns:

'We can not urge too strongly the vital importance of diffusing in the homes of our beloved Methodism the unwasting fragrance of these hymns as a daily tribute to Him, all whose 'garments smell of myrrh, and aloes, and cassia, out of the ivory palaces.'

"Let our congregations hold the theology which has brought life to myriads, as it is embalmed in these measures." Let our children in the Sabbath-school be trained to lisp in advance the melody of the skies. Let us render to our Methodism the glory of having furnished from its own resources a psalmody unequaled in its rich statement of Christian experience through all stages of nascent and perfected life, which has become the inspiration of youth and the treasure of age with God's people of our own and other churches; and let us exclude from pulpit and prayer-room every utterance in song that would displace the doctrines and hymns of our Zion."

The tendency in many places to displace our grand old hymns by modern ditties is one of the pernicious things attending present-day worship. Many modern songs carry with them an atmosphere in which the solemnity which belongs to the house of God, and which characterless true worship, can not live. Above all things, I think our preachers should guard against any tendency which would deflect our worship into a region where solemnity would be considered an intruder.

C. W. CARTER.

A JUST TRIBUTE TO BISHOP KEENER.

As I read Bishop Keener's address to the W. H. M. S. on New Orleans Methodism, it seemed marvelous to me that I had heard one of the first Methodist missionaries to New Orleans preach and speak of his experience in preaching and working there when we had no church. Marvelous indeed to contrast that time with the present! It was my privilege to meet as friends some of the Methodists of those early days: it is still a blessing to remember their saintly, devout lives, and their testimonies in the class meetings. Did people get nearer to God in those days?

One thing I wish somebody would do, who has lived long in New Orleans and knows its Methodism better than I do: Before our loved and venerated Senior Bishop is called to his reward, tell what a large influence he exerted in making Methodism what it is in New Orleans and Louisiana. It is no exaggeration to say that but for Bishop Keener our ADVOCATE could not have been revived after the war. When presiding elder of the New Orleans district he gave his services freely as editor to re-establish it. Centenary College must have died without his efforts to pay the teachers. New Orleans Methodism has given nothing finer to the church, after her noble preachers, than 'Studies of Bible Truths." I started to write of the book, but my words are too poor for the subject. I can only repeat what an old man said to me after we heard Bishop Keener preach in Vaiden, Miss., in 1873: 'Did you know that human thought and speech could reach such a height?" Get some one to tell of New Orleans Methodism who will not leave Bishop Keener out, as he necessarily did. Why keep all of our expressions of appreciation till people have gone beyond their reach?

L. L. BARTON.

There have been held on the district in the interest of the great thank-offering thirteen meetings, at most of which subscriptions were opened, resulting in raising in subscriptions approximately $1,800. This amount includes a liberal cash gift also to the Johnston Institute, Greensburg. Other meetings, as announced, are to be held, and but little has been done in the way of personal solicitation by the preachers as yet. The offerings reported really represent but the smaller part of the district, as by far the larger number of churches have not had the matter presented at all, and some of the stronger charges have not yet been canvassed for subscriptions, although the subject has been publicly presented. With information and strengthening of the gracious motive of gratitude among our people, we may look for a large increase in the offerings.

With the consent of the president of the Board of Education, the day already appointed for the Twentieth Century Day on the Baton Rouge district, July 15, will be observed, and the subscriptions made as nearly as possible complete at that time. The week preceding—July 9-15—will be observed as "a week of prayer and self-denial, that the God of our fathers would mercifully visit us with the power of his Spirit, reviving his people and saving sinners. On that day let the people bring thank-offerings, praying that their gifts may be graciously accepted and blessed to the furtherance of the divine kingdom in the earth."

Let the Pastoral Letter from the Bishops be read in every congregation, and, wherever practicable, let there be daily services held in the churches. On circuits a complete round of appointments may be made during the week in some cases; in others there may be concentration at one or two preaching-places. But in no case let the week of prayer be neglected by the preacher, or forgotten by the people. None of us can afford to be deprived of the quickening and enlarging power of co-operation in this mighty movement of the people of God in seeking his face and contributing to his work. None of us can ignore this special movement without incurring the guilt of unfaithfulness in the charge committed to him.

It is recommended that a complete roll of members for each charge be made out in the subscription books that have been provided as soon as possible, and that a diligent house-to-house canvass be made with a view to securing a subscription opposite each name in the books. A vast amount of work is involved in this. There are nearly 6 000 members in the district. The aid of laymen must be enlisted in the work. A Twentieth Century Committee should be organized in every pastoral charge, and the work partitioned out. I am persuaded that we have not fully realized the responsiveness of our laymen to this movement. Nor have we had confidence enough in the sufficiency of the motive appealed to—the gratitude that is as essential as love to the Christian heart. Indeed, gratitude is nothing but love in action. Let us believe in our people, and appeal to the highest motive, and look confidently for the response. Let no one begin with discouragement. The discouraged man is already beaten. The hopeful man is not far from success. Let us look towards nothing short of bringing up our full proportion of the thank-offering.

The approaching revival season will afford opportunity to present the thank-offering in many charges. It will afford an opportunity for expressing the gratitude that is often so strongly felt at such seasons, when parents are receiving their children as if back from the dead, when cold hearts are being warmed by the love of Christ, and when backsliders are tasting the great mercy of God that has preserved their profitless lives. It is good to translate exalted emotions into works of love and gifts of beneficence as soon as possible; it is dangerous to permit these emotions to wane without having obtained some concrete expression. Let us use to its utmost the harvest season.

A large amount of literature has been circulated—20,000 pages of folders, and 150 subscriptions to the New Century Education. It would be well to circulate extensively "The Twentieth Century Movement in Methodism," by Bishop Galloway. It can be had of the Board of Education at 5 cents a copy. If our people can be induced to buy it, they will be the more likely to read it; if they read it, they will not fail to become hearty helpers in the work. The chief thing we have to overcome is lack of information concerning this movement. The religious consciousness will respond to the appeal as soon as the judgment is convinced; it can not be otherwise. More literature, more light, larger gifts, and more givers.

I am especially indebted to the other members of the District Committee, Col. I. D. Wall and Rev. H. W. Rickey, for faithful and efficient help in conducting the canvass thus far. Many of the meetings have been addressed, and a large part of the subscription raised by them. Dr. I. W. Cooper, Prof. Crisler, Rev. E. N. Evans, and Dr. LaPrade, have also rendered valuable aid in addressing meetings.

AN EDUCATIONAL POLICY FOR MISSISSIPPI METHODISM.

Under the inspiration of the Twentieth Century Movement is a good time to formulate plans for our educational work. The enthusiasm begotten by such a movement should be preserved in enlarged plans and conserved by persevering effort. All personal preferences and interests should be put aside for the larger plans and greater good of the times. A full and free discussion of this paramount interest should be indulged. Into such discussion no diverting element should be introduced. Let him stay out who would resort to personalities or other subterfuges to cover defeat or gain an advantage.

I suggest the following for stronger heads than mine to complete. Millsaps College being the bond between the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences, on this subject, I will start there. This institution has an income of about $10,000 a year. This small amount must meet all the running expenses of that institution. Compared with other institutions for higher education, this is a mere bagatelle. Bishop Galloway tells us, in his address on the Twentieth Century Movement, page 147, that the income of the four hundred and twenty-six colleges and universities of this country foots up about $20,000,000. Then Millsaps is doing the same class of work that these more fortunate institutions are, with nearly five times her income. Of course, this is a strain that can not long be borne. Those who look with pride upon the heroic work of our young college must also look with liberality.

This being the situation, what is to be done in the matter? First of all, let us centralize thought and prayer and patronage around the college, and out of this will be born a faith and purpose that will launch plans that will ultimately bring about satisfactory financial conditions.

Then we should centralize our educational efforts in the same way. Let all the educational institutions belonging to Methodism in Mississippi be brought under one management and provided with one continuous curriculum. One president could do the work for the entire system. One Board of Trustees, with proper investments and modification, could manage the entire interest. A certificate from any part of this system could carry a student into higher collegiate work.

This would have the great advantage of centralizing both our work and interest. The thought of going through the entire system would be constantly kept before the student, and, if possible, after finishing the lower classes, he or she would press on to the higher. For instance, a student in the Grenada department of Millsaps College would have her eye on the eventful day when she could enter the higher department of that system, armed with a certificate that would give her an equal right there. She would not be left to wander about in search of some place in which to pursue her studies, should she desire to do so, and as a further result Millsaps' halls would be filled with students prepared to follow up a course that, when finished, would have the foundation and superstructure all in place.

Then to this system let Mississippi Methodism set herself resolutely, to bring at least a half-million-dollar endowment. In view of our recent experience, this may seem to some to be out of our reach, but if our Methodist hosts will set an exalted face toward such a work, it can be done sooner or later.

Some will say that co-education is not popular with our people. To this we would say that it is conceded to be proper by most of the institutions for higher education in the country. Out of four hundred and eleven such, two hundred and sixty-eight of them are open to both sexes. And of the sixty-six owned by Methodist, fifty-four are so open. This looks like we had better quit discussing whether we will have such education and go to preparing for it.

It will cost something to get ready for such work. Of course, it will, and we are the people who can do it. Let others speak. We need agitation. J. W. DORMAN.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY MOVEMENT.

BY REV. W. H. SANDERS.

The last year of this, the most wonderful of all the centuries, is rapidly passing away. Its history will soon be written and left to future generations. It will tell of the great discoveries, inventions and progress of the passing year. The English-speaking people are more powerful than ever before. The British throne is the center of the mightiest power the world has ever seen: yet, with all her greatness, what could Great Britain do without the sympathy and moral support of this great Republic? While England's throne, her House of Lords, her House of Commons, her standing army and her imperial navy are mighty, yet her universities and colleges—Oxford and Cambridge—are more influential and powerful than all her civil and military powers, for it is in these halls that her manhood receives its final bent. We Americans boast of our splendid government, and are proud of our heritage; we boast of our Chief Executive, of our Senate and Congress, of our Supreme Court, of our standing army, and of our mighty navy which is destined soon to become the umpire of the seas; yet our strength as a nation lies not in these, but in our universities and colleges—Harvard, Yale, Chicago, Stanford and the Vanderbilt, and others. It is in their halls that the youth of our nation are given the final polish and training which shall largely shape the policies of the future. The great Methodist Church, with her millions of men and money, has had much to do with bringing about the splendid development of our country; but her true greatness is not found in what she has done only, but in what she is, in what she hopes for, and in what she proposes to do for future generations. The Czar's Peace Conference at The Hague, the victories of Manila and Santiago, and the South African wars, will be looked upon as great events; but far more significant than these will be the Twentieth Century Movement of world-wide Methodism.

The Methodist Church, South, can not afford to sit idly down and glory over the past, or be satisfied with the present, but she must plan to keep pace with the spirit of the times, and prove herself equal to the needs of the hour. Our Bishops and leaders have seen where our weakness is, and what is our greatest need, and hence they planned wisely when they directed that our Twentieth Century Offering should go to education. It is not hard to see that our leaders have great hopes for the future of our church, and it is our duty, as pastors and people, to stand by them and contribute our part to the success of the magnificent educational movement in which we are engaged. Our hopes for the future are undoubtedly the index of our greatness. No man, or nation of men, can despise or dispense with this element of national life.

As a church, it would be sinful in us to forget the past, all that has made us what we are; but unless we propose something for the future we will barter away the vigorous birthright of true Christian patriotism, while we flatter our ambition with past and present well-being. We have, however, taken thought for the future, and every Southern Methodist should respond heartily to the calls of the Twentieth Century Movement. Every name in the Southern Methodist Church should be registered with an appropriate amount and placed in the archives of the church at Nashville. It is to be a thank-offering, and well should it be, for the Lord has been gracious to us. "What shall we render unto the Lord for all his benefits?" Thankful we may well be to the Author of all good for wonderful blessings of the past, but the true spirit of thankfulness is ever closely allied to the energy of hope. A self-complacent church can not long prosper. Woe unto the community that dares to assume it has reached its zenith and can achieve or attempt no more. Would it not be a burning shame for us to fail in our great educational movement. The Master has called, and we must act.

SOUTH CAROLINA LETTER.

We have just passed through our usual commencement season in South Carolina, and the voice of the orator has been heard all over the land. Our Conference colleges and institutions of learning have just closed a very successful year's work, and the prospects are bright for all of them. The commencement at Wofford College was unusually well attended this year. As you editors would say, I was denied the privilege of attending upon the occasion, being similarly engaged elsewhere. However, I got full reports, and know that the programme was well executed, though I did not get there to see it well done. Bishop Wilson preached the sermon, and, from all accounts, it was a good one. The Methodists of the State were all grieving over the resignation of that matchless president, James H. Carlisle, LL.D. The audience in the chapel at the commencement went wild when Bishop Duncan, who is chairman of the Board of Trustees, announced that they had prevailed upon the good Doctor to hold over as president for at least another year. The whole State rejoices at this good news. What a pity that such a man has to grow old! A large class of fine young men received their diplomas this year. Prof. J. G. Clinkscales, who was elected to the chair of mathematics, and who himself is one of the most noble laymen in the State as well as a fine teacher, was turned loose in the field for the Summer, and the prospects are that Wofford will have a fine opening next Fall. The professor has just spent several days with your correspondent. In the social circle he is a most delightful companion, and wherever he goes there is left the impress of a Christian character. I am not surprised that the boys are devoted to him.

Rev. W. W. Daniel, D. D., the newly elected president of the Columbia Female College, has also spent several days in our home. We already knew him to be a scholarly gentleman, but we have found by this visit that he is also a most sweet-spirited Christian. I am persuaded that the trustees of that institution have been eminently wise and fortunate in selecting a successor to Dr. Rice. I have before written of Dr. Rice in your columns. Dr. Daniel is making a very successful canvass of the State, and I predict that his college will have a magnificent opening in the Fall.

Our other female college, at Williamston, is presided over by Dr. S. Lander, whose record of over a quarter of a century there has been unstained and eminently successful. I have also written of this good man in your columns before, and need not repeat it here. He is the same sweet-spirited, manly man that he has always been. We learn that he expects to open in the Fall with an attendance equal to his college capacity.

The old Cokesbury Conference School seems to be reviving the strength of its youth under the aggressive management of Dr. W. S. Stokes. He writes me that the outlook is good. Then we have some other fitting-schools which have been doing excellent and effective service.

The Twentieth Century Movement has afforded a splendid opportunity to stir the State on the subject of Christian education. The competition in our State is sharp and spirited, but if our preachers will only do their duty by our young people and our educational institutions, we shall win the victory.

We are in the midst of the usual bi-annual political campaign. The Prohibitionists have put out a strong man for governor. He is a consistent member of the Baptist Church, and is one of the best men in the State. The race lies between him and the present governor, M. B. McSweeney, who favors the dispensary system of the management of the liquor traffic. The chances of Col. Hoyt, the Prohibitionist candidate, are good.

It is not enough that women should be home-makers, but they must make the world itself a large home.

PREPARATION FOR THE SABBATH.

In this day, when men are grasping after the world and the things of the world, there seems to be very little, if any, thonght given to a preparation for the Holy Sabbath. Merchants keep their stores open until a late hour Saturday night, and some as late as eleven and twelve o'clock. This is not right. It is an injustice to themselves, their clerks, patrons, and to God also. No one is ready for the Sabbath when he works until ten, eleven, or twelve o'clock Saturday night. If he awakes early enough for Sunday-school and church, he is not himself as he should be for the duties of the Sabbath. But just think of the people who do not rise early enough for Sunday school, and never attend church at all, because they are unprepared when the time arrives for same. They do not feel rested enough, and feel that such a godless excuse is sufficient to stay away. If it suits some, they may attend church at night; and what if they do? They are unready for that because they have not kept the Sabbath as God requires.

It is a false and damaging practice to do the greatest business of the week on Saturdays. Every Saturday, at twelve o'clock, or noon, every business house and office should close, that a preparation may be made for the Lord's Day. Farmers and all classes should spend Saturday afternoons in preparing for the Sabbath. I know some will claim that it is necessary to spend the whole of Saturdays, and even Saturday nights, in business, because it is the great trading day; but how has it happened that it is? Is it not because the people have made it thus? Certainly it is, and the very same people can make it otherwise—a day of preparation for the Sabbath. No Christian merchant, and no Christian of any other class, should let the Sabbath dawn on him unprepared for it. If their employees are kept at work until it is too late to get ready for the Sabbath, they are censurable for it, and God will hold them personally responsible for it. He will also hold employees responsible for thus engaging themselves.

Now, let every Christian see rigidly to it that Saturday evenings, or afternoons, are spent by them and their employees in preparing for the Sabbath, and then better times, spiritually and temporally, will dawn on us at once. Let every Christian consider and act at once favorably in this matter.

"A Good Name is Better Than Riches."

Hood's Sarsaparilla is a good name. A legion of those who owe health to its blood purifying qualities laud it to the skies. It brings the riches of health to those who use it, in the shape of absolutely pure blood, the permanent foundation stone of health.

Weakness—"I was all run down, weak and without appetite. A friend brought me a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I began taking it and three bottles entirely cured me." Mrs. M. A. Logan, 127 Post Street, Rutland, Vt.

Blood Purifier—"We think Hood's Sarsaparilla has no equal as a blood purifier and invigorator of the system." J. B. Best, Woodbury, N. J.

Our society being the only Young People's Foreign Missionary Society in the Louisiana Conference, we thought, perhaps, you would like to know what we are doing at Rayne Memorial. We have a membership of thirty-eight, composed of most of the girls and young men of our church. The regular monthly meetings are interesting and well attended.

For the past two years we have been supporting a girl in Mrs. Campbell's school in Seoul, Kores. Her Korean name is Epunggee, but to us she is known as Lee Dicks, named for our dear lady manager, Mrs. F. A. Dicks. A few weeks ago we received a letter from Mrs. Campbell, telling us that our little protege is bright and attractive, and quite a leader in her little circle. We are hoping and praying that she may become an earnest Christian, and lead many of her people into a happy Christian life.

Once a month we devote an evening to the systematic study of missions. This Winter our attention has been given to China, and we have become somewhat acquainted with the people, their manners, customs, literature, and history. Beginning with the life of Robert Morrison, the pioneer missionary to China, we have studied the biographies of other prominent missionaries, and traced the progress of mission work in that field to the present time.

Having found our society so beneficial and interesting, we urge other young people of our State to enlist in the ranks of the mighty army moving forward to take the world for Christ.

The above communication from Miss Carrie Walmsley Price, corresponding secretary of the Rayne Memorial Young People's F. M. S., is a welcome message, which we hope will stir other churches to emulation in the same line. The young people are the hope of the church. If only one society is possible in any charge, let it be a Juvenile or Young People, and the next generation will give us a consecrated missionary church.

FROM THE WORK.

TRYUS, MISS.

The Children's Day service at Bahala Chapel, on the fourth Sunday in May, was quite a success. The congregation was large, the children did their part well and to the satisfaction of all. The collection amounted to eleven dollars, which was remarkably good for the church here. The program was not carried out as published, as some of the children failed on account of sickness, but the local committee supplemented, so the exercises were full enough and good.

Walking to Work

Is the only way in which the business woman, employed in store or office, can get open air exercise. Is it any wonder that she often grows pale and thin and develops a tendency to "weak lungs." Whenever there is pain in breathing, soreness of the chest, obstinate cough, bleeding from the lungs or any other symptoms of disease of the respiratory organs, begin the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and continue the use until cured. Ninety-eight in every hundred who have used "Golden Medical Discovery" for "lung trouble," have been perfectly and permanently cured.

"I was very sick indeed," writes Mrs. Mollie Jacobs, of Felton, Kent Co., Delaware, "and our family doctor said I had consumption. I thought I must die soon for I felt so awful bad. Had a bad cough, spit blood, and was very short of breath. I had pains in my chest and right lung, also had dyspepsia. Before I took your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' I was so weak I could not sweep a room, now I can do a small washing. I feel like a new person."

OUR SEMI-CENTENNIAL.

This week the ADVOCATE joyfully celebrates her fiftieth birthday, and proudly does she hail the advent of this, her golden anniversary. On July 10, 1850, just half a century ago, the first number of the ADVOCATE was issued in the "Crescent City," and, although but a "specimen" number, it was the earnest of what was to follow, and marked the birth of a noble church enterprise which appeared for a short time to have been overtaken by an untimely death, but which emerged from its supposed tomb instinct with life and power and promise.

The General Conference of 1850 appointed a Publishing Committee composed of brethren from three Conferences, which was authorized to take steps to establish a weekly church paper in New Orleans.

Accordingly, in July, 1850, under the direction of Rev. Dr. Hamilton, of Mobile, the initial number of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE was gotten out, articles being contributed to it by each of the pastors then stationed in the city. The venture, though worthy of every encouragement, met with but a feeble response, and hence nothing further was done until February, 1851, at which time the scheme was revived, and Rev. H. N. McTyeire, then pastor of Felicity Street Church, became the first regular editor of the ADVOCATE.

Just as the battle of Lexington was the real beginning of American independence, although the formal Declaration thereof was not made till a year later, so the real date of the birth of the ADVOCATE is July, 1850, at which time the first definite step was taken towards the establishment of a Methodist journal in the Southwest. The effort, although tentative, was yet a beginning.

Under the able administration of Editor McTyeire, who served upon the ADVOCATE tripod from February, 1851, to May 1858, he then being elected to editorship of the general organ at Nashville, the ADVOCATE prospered greatly, and became one of the most potent religious factors in the Southwest. Says Bishop Keener in an article in the ADVOCATE, of Feb. 8, 1883, giving a history of the paper up to that date: "The Rev. C. C. Gillespie was appointed in his [McTyeire's] place, and the war presently ensued. Of course, the press and engine stopped; the editor became the colonel of a Texas regiment. Our dear friends who had the idea of securing conscientious possession of whatever had been dedicated to holy uses belonging to the Church, South, by virtue of an order of the War Department, seized all our city churches, but never touched anything in the ADVOCATE office. We could never explain this, but would only state a fact: The lower story of the office was rented to an undertaker, who, after the usual style, stood his coffins in ghastly array all around the room. One had to pass through this room in going up stairs. Could it be that men accustomed to preach of death, and in a measure prepare others for it, would hesitate to face a row of mute coffins? I hardly think it."

In January, 1866, the ADVOCATE was revived, with Rev. J. C. Keener as editor, who for the next four years conducted its columns with eminent success and easy grace. The vacancy in the editorship caused by his elevation to the bishopric by the General Conference of 1870, was filled by the election of Rev. Linus Parker, who made such a capital editor that he continued in that office from 1870 till May, 1882, a period of over twelve years. He too, was then made an episcopos, and another editor had to be sought.

Rev. Chas. B. Galloway, whose brilliant editorial career is known to all of our readers, next succeeded to the tripod, and conducted the ADVOCATE with such skill and efficiency as to win unstinted praise on all sides. After he had served just four years, his brethren concluded that he would make a most excellent Bishop, and so in 1886 the editorship became again vacant by reason of the elevation of its incumbent to the episcopacy.

Dr. C. W. Carter, who was chosen to succeed the now Bishop Galloway, proved himself to be a strong, safe, and satisfactory editor, and continued in charge for a period of nearly seven years, voluntarily retiring in June, 1893.

Dr. J. M. Beard then became editor and publisher, being succeeded in October of the same year by the present editor, who is now completing the seventh year of his administration, and who, on account of being publisher also, has had to do the work of two men. Had it not been for this consolidation of the offices of editor and publisher the paper would have had to suspend long ago.

Said Bishop (then Editor) Galloway in an editorial anent the ADVOCATE in the issue of Feb. 8, 1883: "All of its history has been written amid embarrassements. It has always been one of the Lord's poor—sometimes in a strait, and ever in need."

A strong, self-sustaining religious journal is not built up in a day any more than is a great city. It is an evolution, as it were, and has to pass through many sharp crises ere its credit and character are fully established. Like the influence of a saintly man, the prestige and power of a newspaper are increased by length of years, and wise is the church that realizes this fact and profits by it.

What momentous changes, what marvelous progress, what stirring scenes the ADVOCATE has witnessed during the fifty years of her existence, which has covered by far the most splendid period in the world's history, and now with a thankful, hopeful heart, she stands ready to greet the dawn of a new and better century. The years she has seen have been characterized by the most remarkable progress in invention and by the largest degree of missionary, educational, and philanthropic effort yet known.

Nor has the ADVOCATE played an insignificant part in the history and spiritual development of this section of our great country. Had it not been for the splendid execution done by the ADVOCATE guns during the memorable crusade against the Louisiana Lottery, we do not believe that heroic fight could have been won. With the exception of the Southwestern Presbyterian, it was the only paper circulating extensively in this region that dared to make war on that monster iniquity.

As has been seen, four of the faithful pilots who have stood at the ADVOCATE'S helm displayed such signal ability that the church made them commanders-in-chief, so to speak, of her forces and fleets.

With the exception of an interregnum of four years from 1862 to 1866, caused by the Civil War, the ADVOCATE, like a great beacon light, placed at a point of vantage amid the surging seas of sin, has been shining steadily and clearly through fifty eventful years, and her lustrous rays have flashed far and wide, revealing most plainly the breakers that have threatened Church and State, dispelling the mists of spiritual darkness and doubt, enkindling hope within the breast of many a tempest-tossed voyager through life, and guiding him to the haven of peace and eternal happiness. Like some splendidly built ship that defies for numerous years the ravages of winds and waves, the ADVOCATE has weathered the shocks and storms of half a century, and still proudly unfurls to the breeze the flag of truth and righteousness. She has witnessed the launching of many a promising journalistic craft that soon had to encounter stormy waters, and that, alas! suffered untimely shipwreck. Though sorely buffeted at times, she has managed to keep afloat, and still gallantly sails the journalistic seas in the service of the noble church to which she belongs, ever ready to give battle to the enemies of righteousness or to lower the life-boat for the rescue of the perishing. M. M. B.

ANNIVERSARY GREETINGS FROM AN EX-EDITOR.

BY BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY,

Editor NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE from 1882 to 1886.

Responding to the editor's kindly request, I send a word of greeting to the old ADVOCATE on its golden anniversary. It is not given to many church or other journalistic enterprises to look back over a half century's history—and such a history! What marvelous changes have been wrought in Church and State since the first issue of this ADVOCATE under the skillful management of young Holland N. McTyeire! Wars have come and gone, social, commercial and industrial conditions have passed through a revolution, the map of the world has shifted its shadings many times, but the old ADVOCATE has continued to stand for genuine Methodism and the great principles of evangelical Christianity. With somewhat of pride and much gratitude, it can review the work of a jubilee of years. The occasion ought to be joyfully celebrated.

The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE has always been true to connectional Methodism. Through every editorial administration this has been a distinguishing characteristic. It received that stamp under its first editor, who, though young, was already a great ecclesiastical statesman, and through a half century has adhered unwaveringly to that basal idea. Though hesitating not, when occasion demanded, to freely discuss great questions of policy and administration, and never slow to consider and advocate needed legislative changes, severe animadversion and hyper-criticism have found small space in these columns, and ecclesiastical charlatanism has received no encouragement. Few more progressive men than Holland N. McTyeire ever sat in the councils or adorned the annals of Methodism, but he never advocated change for the sake of change; and in that safe pathway his editorial successors have consistently walked.

Readers of this ADVOCATE have never been taught disloyalty to the church and disrespect for her ministers. Liberty of opinion and discussion have not been mistaken for license to traduce the Bride of Christ. This ADVOCATE has never been an organ for marplots or an advertising medium for ecclesiastical Lilliputs. It has sought to conserve and improve the distinctive features of Episcopal Methodism, and urge with tireless zeal her every forward movement. Children have been led to love and revere the church and properly esteem the noble men called of God to be their pastors and teachers. Within the patronizing territory of this ADVOCATE ecclesiastical agrarianism has had little or no sympathy.

It is easy to exaggerate unhappy conditions; and such exaggerations are usually the reflex of personal character. Most pessimists are failures, and their doleful criticisms are generally the echoes of their own dismal defeats. On the other hand, successful men are optimistic. They feel the power of mighty movement, because themselves are in motion and their nerves have the thrill of heroic achievement. For a cheerful, aggressive, enterprising, achieving Methodism this ADVOCATE has sought to be a champion and representative. It alike respects the wise counsels of her aged leaders and honors the sanctified imperialism and divine ardor of her younger heroes of the field. But from early sheep, good Lord deliver us!

A thousand blessings upon the dear old ADVOCATE on this glad, golden anniversary day.

Jackson, Miss.

LOTTERY TICKETS BEING SOLD.

We are reliably informed that lottery tickets issued by the Mexican National Lottery and by other gambling concerns are being hawked about in this city in the boldest fashion. Clerks and other employees are being pestered by agents of these outlawed and corrupting enterprises, many of the solicitors, astonishing to tell, being women. What are our police and city officials thinking about to let such a shameful and flagrant violation of the statute against lotteries and the sale of lottery tickets pass entirely unnoticed? It is indeed time for a stop to be put to all such iniquitous defiance of law. Our enterprising neighbors, the Times-Democrat and the Picayune, have been strangely silent about this evil, which is continually growing bolder. It doth amaze us that these Argus-eyed guardians of the public weal should thus be caught napping!

GENERAL MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

The committee met in the Mission Rooms at Nashville, June 20, upon call of the secretaries of the Board of Missions. The following members were present: Drs. Jas. Atkins, J. D. Hammond, H. M. DuBose, W. R. Lambuth, J. H. Pritchett, Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, and Mrs. S. C. Trueheart. Bishops Galloway and Duncan being in the city, were invited to be present, but only the former was able to attend.

The meeting was opened with prayer by Bishop Galloway. Dr. James Atkins was elected permanent chairman, and G. W. Cain, permanent secretary. The resolution of the Board of Missions providing for the Missionary Conference, and defining its character and scope, was then read by the secretary. After a thorough discussion, the following actions were unanimously taken, as best interpreting the wishes of the Board of Missions and the needs of the church:

1. The Conference will begin Wednesday evening, April 24, 1901; the duration of it to be decided later.

2. The office force of the Board of Missions was constituted a working committee, to be known as the Business Committee. To it was referred the question of the number of delegates to the Conference, and their apportionment among the several Boards and Societies. They were also authorized to select all committees necessary to the arranging of the Conference.

3. A Program Committee was ordered, of which Dr. Lambuth was selected as chairman. The full membership will be announced later.

4. As there are several cities anxious to secure the Conference, the question of the place of holding the Conference was deferred until further correspondence could be had.

The Executive Committee adjourned subject to call.

THE FAMINE IN INDIA.

A communication just received from the New York Committee of One Hundred on India Famine Relief says:

"You will be glad to know that we are cabling an average of more than ten thousand dollars each week, and that, since our treasurers, Messrs. Brown Brothers & Co., freely give all their services, we are able to transfer funds from New York to Bombay without expense to the funds.

"The prospect for India, however, is most sad. Of the two annual rains, one was due on the fifteenth of this month. Only slight rains have, thus far, fallen.

"In any event, the need of relief will be very urgent for months to come; since, even if abundant rains fall, no harvests can be gathered until next October. Accordingly, while deeply grateful for all the generous aid already given, the committee ventures, in behalf of the sufferers, to hope that the aid may be continued."

We are authorized to state that this committee, whose address is 73 Bible House, New York, is prepared to furnish, without charge and expressage free, illustrated circulars, contribution envelopes, collection cards, etc., to churches, Sunday-schools, Young People's Societies, King's Daughters, W. C. T. U. Societies, Young Men's Christian Associations, labor unions, employers, committees, lodges, and, in fact, to all engaged in India famine relief.

We shall take pleasure in continuing to acknowledge and forward to their proper destination all contributions sent to this office for the benefit of the famine sufferers. May God help us, one and all, to do our full duty in sending prompt and generous relief to the starving millions across the sea! From two to five cents a day will save a life.

TRIBUTE TO DR. ANDREWS.

Whereas, An inscrutable Providence has removed from our midst our beloved and honored vice-president, Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D.; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in his death our church has lost one of her noblest sons, and most consecrated and useful ministers—a man whose spotless example and diligent, self-denying labors are worthy of universal emulation; the cause of Christian education has been deprived of one of its most ardent advocates, and this institution one of its staunchest friends.

Resolved, That while we bow with Christian resignation to the will of our heavenly Father, our hearts are deeply grieved over what seems to us his untimely decease.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with his grief-stricken family in their sore bereavement.

Resolved, That the secretary be requested to forward to his family a copy of these resolutions.

W. C. BLACK,
J. W. MALONE,
Committee.

Similar resolutions were adopted in memory of Peter James, which, we suppose, will be forwarded us for publication.

Our worthy confrere of the Wesleyan Advocate gives the brethren upon "the firing line" the following excellent and timely advice, which it would be well for pastors in this region also to act upon: "As the revival season is now on in Georgia, let our pastors send to us short, concise reports of the meetings they hold. The groom is one of Mississippi's most prominent and successful educators, and is a young man of fine character, culture, and ability. We understand that in choosing a wife, he has made a most happy selection, his bride being a young lady of extraordinary loveliness and accomplishments. We extend in advance our heartiest congratulations, and wish them a bright and prosperous voyage through life.

Says the Nashville Advocate, of last week: "The resignation of Dr. J. M. A learned scientist, a diligent teacher, and a conscientious and modest Christian, he has left an enduring impression for good upon his generation, and has fairly earned the right to spend his closing days in rest and peace. A thousand blessings on his gray head."

The assistant editor of this ADVOCATE counts it a great privilege that he was permitted to be a student under Dr. Safford for one year. We found him to be one of the most genial, courteous, and lovable men, and also one of the best instructors we have ever known.

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

MR. EDITOR: The Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground have made all preparations for the annual meeting, to open on July 11, and to continue for one week. The usual free entertainment of the itinerant ministers who attend the meeting is arranged for, with the expectation that the brethren will give full and hearty co-operation in the religious services. There is every indication that the crowd will be as large, if not larger, than at our last meeting. The Young People's Hymnal will be need with the hymn book, and a competent leader will have charge of the singing. All are requested to bring their hymnals and hymn books with them, and take part in the song service. There will be a more strict observance of the rules than heretofore, and all who are on the grounds during the meeting are expected to attend the religious services. Some of the ablest ministers of the patronizing Conferences will be on hand to assist in conducting the services. The earnest prayers of all the friends of the church, and those who contemplate attending the meeting, are requested in order that we may have the baptism of the Holy Spirit upon the services, that many souls may be brought to repentance and saved. With the burden of souls on our hearts, let us come to this spot, where, in times past, the Lord has so gloriously revealed his saving power. Come with a yearning to be humble instruments in his hands for the salvation of some dear one, or some neighbor, or even some stranger, who may come in touch with us at this place. In order to be endued with power for this work, let us linger in our secret prayers before his throne of grace.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE AND MISSIONS.

We have been waiting to see if the report of the treasurer of the Board of Missions, as given in the ADVOCATE of June 21, would not provoke some one to enquire into the cause for such a state of things. The fact that on an assessment of $4,600 we have paid in seven months only about $1,500 shows a shameful neglect, and want of interest in the most important principle of the gospel. This principle is the foundation of progress, and aggression in the individual as well as church life. When we lose interest, and fail in this, it is a sign of decay and death. The promise of our Lord, "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world," is conditioned upon our effort to "Go, teach all nations." Can we expect the fulfillment of the promise if we fail to keep the command? Every interest and enterprise of the church is directly, or indirectly, a missionary movement, for which we can claim his presence, and expect success in the minor details of our work. But if we neglect the foundation or fundamental principle, we forfeit our claim to the Divine presence.

For this state of things there can be no other cause than that of a want of interest and neglect. This has been the most favorable season for taking collections we have had for years. There has been more money in circulation, and a more hopeful outlook for the future up to a month ago, than we have had for a long time. But we have sat still, and let the good times go by. And now the people and stewards will plead the wet weather as an excuse for not paying the preacher, and the preacher will plead the wet weather as an excuse for not getting the collections. Here we are within five months of the session of the Conference, and the Twentieth Century Fund, and the collections ordered by the Conference all to get up, and it is still raining.

Where a faithful effort has been made by the preacher a large per cent. of the money is in cash and subscription. The reports from some of the charges show what could have been done. Only a few of the best appointments have reported anything. If twenty-nine charges, and a majority of them poor, can raise $1,575, one hundred and fifty, and among these the wealthiest, with a like effort, would have raised more than eight thousand dollars. I have confidence in our people—the poorest of them—to believe they will respond to any reasonable demand of a faithful, consecrated pastor. If a lightning-rod agent can succeed, so can we. If a tramp in the name of religion can get the sympathy, and fleece the pockets of an intelligent community, what ought we to do?

My brethren, we have sinned in the neglect of this good opportunity. And now, "Ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground, neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts." W. S. LAGRONE.

ALUM BAKING POWDERS.

CONGRESS ACTING TO SUPPRESS THEIR SALE.

The report of the Senate Committee on Manufactures upon the subject of food adulterations and food frauds has created a sensation in Congress and awakened great interest throughout the country.

If there could be published a list of the names of all articles of food found by the Committee to be adulterated or made from poisonous ingredients, it would be of inestimable value to the public.

The recommendations of the Committee that the sale of alum baking powders be prohibited by law, will make of special interest the following list of names of baking powders containing alum sold in this vicinity:

Baking Powders Containing Alum:

GOOD LUCK.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Southern Mfg. Co., Richmond.
DAVIS' O K.....Contains Alum
Manf. by R. B. Davis & Co., New York.
REX.....Contains Alum
Manf. by J. B. & R. S. Christian Co., Richmond, Va.
SUCCESS.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Morehouse Mfg. Co., Savannah.
BON BON.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Great Chemical Co., Chicago.
RAILROAD.....Contains Alum
Manf. by Morehouse Mfg. Co., Savannah.

It is unfortunate that many manufacturers of alum baking powders, even some in the above list, falsely state that their powders do not contain alum. It is only right that consumers should have correct information as to the character of every article of food offered to them.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

MISSISSIPPI.

The time for the great Southern Epworth League Conference draws near. It is to be hoped that a great many young people from the great State of Mississippi will be there. We gladly give space below for a communication from Miss Vic Thompson on the question of the Atlanta Conference. Be sure that you read it.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS ON TO ATLANTA.

Plans are on foot to secure a special car for the North Mississippi Leaguers to the Atlanta Conference, and an effort will be made to secure a better rate than one fare. It is our purpose to have this car start from Greenville, on the Southern railroad, taking up the crowd at Winona and West Point. These starting-points will be accessible to all North Mississippi Leaguers, with the exception possibly of those in Corinth district, and they can join us at Birmingham. We hope to have a large crowd from North Mississippi. Each League should at least defray the expense of one delegate, and induce as many others to attend as possible. Let the matter be taken up immediately, and notification sent to me as to the number who will attend from each League at least two weeks before the twenty-fifth. This information must reach me before I can ascertain the information from the railroad as to the rates and special car.

The following committee will assist me in advertising the occasion through the newspapers in their respective districts by weekly publication of information as to rates and other matters of interest: J. C. Park, Winona; R. A. Meek, Starkville; J. H. Smith, Hernando; T. H. Dorsey, Arcola; R. O. Brown, Water Valley; Miss Susie Foose, Koscinsko; J. M. Bradley, Booneville; Miss Sallie Kilpatrick, Verona.

Notice.

To the Epworth Leaguers of Louisiana and Mississippi

Interest in the great Southern Epworth League Conference, to be held in Atlanta from July 25 to 29, increases each day. Indications are, at the present time, that we will have a very large attendance. Atlanta will royally entertain all who come. We would be very glad to have ten thousand people here. Good board can be obtained in the boarding-houses and private homes at $1 per day. The leading hotels have given reduced rates, ranging from $1.75 to $2.50. We are very anxious that all who intend coming will send in their names immediately, as, in that way, homes can be provided and assignments made in advance, thus avoiding confusion on arrival. Those who send names in advance will receive cards of assignment promptly. Our arrangements with the hotels, boarding-houses, and private homes, offering to entertain during the Conference, are such that all delegates, in order to get the benefit of the reduced rate, will have to be registered by our committee and assignment made. The excellent program need not be commented upon. Will not Mississippi and Louisiana send 800 delegates? We Georgia Leaguers want fully that many present from the great States of Mississippi and Louisiana. J. P. BELL.
Chairman.

Atlanta, Ga., June 28, 1900.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to Centenary Female College, an advertisement of which appears in this issue. It is one of the leading colleges in our church for young ladies, and, in fact, in the Southern States. It is located at Cleveland, Tenn., which is easily the prettiest town in the State, consisting of a population of five thousand people. It is located twenty-eight miles above Chattanooga, directly on the Southern railway. Trains from New Orleans to Cleveland without change of cars.

The college has a large and accomplished faculty, consisting of twenty-three members. It has a complete laboratory and outfit of physical apparatus. No school in the South is in a more flourishing condition, or doing better work, than this one. It is fortunate in its location, being above all malarial fevers, and yet not far enough North to experience the severe cold, which often interferes with the work of pupils, especially in the department of voice culture, etc.

We most heartily recommend Centenary College to parents having daughters to educate.

29th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING
Seashore Camp Grounds.
Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,100 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 5 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 7 to 21, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It used to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

GIRLS OF TO-DAY.

BY MRS. CHARLOTTE PERKINS STETSON.

Girls of to-day, give ear!
Never, since time began,
Has come to the race of man
A year, a day, an hour,
So full of promise and power
As the time that now is here.

Never in all the lands
Was there a power so great
To move the wheels of state,
To lift up body and mind,
To waken the deaf and blind,
As the power that is in your hands.

Here at the gates of gold
You stand in the pride of youth,
Strong in courage and truth—
Stirred by a force kept back
Through centuries long and black—
Armed with a power threefold.

Maid and mother and wife,
See your own work is done;
Be worthy a noble son.
Help men in the upward way.
Truly a girl to-day
Is the strongest power in life.

WHITE HANDS.

Six young ladies of a graduating class were gathered around a window overlooking pleasant grounds, and talking eagerly about the future. Their plans were various, reaching onward with no thought of grief or sorrow. Wealth, admiration, fame were among the attainable. Music and art would each have its devotee. One would continue her studies at a higher institution; another would become the mistress of a beautiful home.

One had not spoken, and when the question, a second time, was asked impatiently, "Louise, what are your plans?" her answer was eagerly awaited.

"I shall help my mother," said quiet Louise.

"O-o-oh, we all mean to do that, of course," said one; "but what plans have you? You can't mean just to stay at home in a poky way, and not try to do anything."

"Girls," said Louise, "I do mean to do just that, for the present, at least. My business shall be to help my mother in any way it is possible for me to help her."

"Shall I open my heart to you a bit, and let you read a sad passage from it? You remember Stella Morton? You remember that I once visited her during vacation? Her home was very pleasant, and a large family of brothers and sisters made the days pass merrily. Our pleasures kept us so much out of doors that we saw little of Mrs. Morton—a delicate, quiet lady, always ready to bestow sympathy when needed. I noticed that the girls were not so tidy and helpful about the house as I had been taught to be; but, as I did not see who supplied all deficiencies, I thought little about it. One day a picnic had been planned, and I heard the girls impatiently commenting upon the illness of the one servant, as it threw upon them some disagreeable household duties. How Mrs. Morton ever accomplished the delicious lunch we ate that day, only such overworked mothers can explain; the little assistance given by Stella and Alice must have been most unsatisfactory.

"We returned by moonlight, so tired that we went to our rooms without seeing any one, if, indeed, any one was up at that hour. By and by—I don't know how long we had slept—a frightened voice called Stella, who shared my room, and soon we all knew that gentle, tired Mrs. Morton was alarmingly ill. At sunrise she was gone, without hearing the voices so full of love and sorrow. Girls, I can't describe Stella's grief; she placed her own delicate hand beside the thin, toil-stained dead one, and said: 'See, Louise, at what cost mine is so fair; and I have been vain of my white hands.' She kissed the cold fingers again and again.

"One day I found Stella at her mother's work-table, holding up some unfinished piece, evidently left in haste. 'Louise,' she said, 'mother asked me to do this, and I really meant to; oh, why didn't I do it at once!'"—Everybody's Magazine.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

GIVING THE BEST TO GOD.

Not long ago I was spending a few days in the home of a prominent personage. A bright little fellow of five made the hours pass most delightfully, but with the coming of Sunday, the Lord's day, there came also to me a deeper insight into the child's character.

Two small boxes stood upon a shelf, and these boxes belonged to him; one was for his own savings, the other one held "the tenth" that was for the Lord's work.

At the close of each day the little fellow carefully took from his allowance the tenth and placed it in the Lord's box; but often as he counted the money he would realize how much more he had in his own box than was contained in the other, and would say: "Why, that is not enough for the Lord. I must give him some of mine," and the pennies and nickels and dimes would be transferred to the other box, never to be returned.

One day he found that he had sufficient small change in his own box to make a dollar, and accordingly his father gave him in return for it a bright silver dollar. The child's face fairly glowed with joy; the dollar was his—all his own! "Nobody will ever get this dollar," he cried, dancing about the room. "Nobody in the whole wide world."

"You had better let me put it in the bank for you," said papa.

"No, sir; no, sir! I'm not going to let anybody have it. I'm just going to give it, every bit of it, to the Lord; it is too good for anybody else!" And, true to his word, he placed the shining dollar in the Lord's treasury.

The child's words touched me deeply. Not only the tenth, but the best that he had remaining—that which was too precious to put in other hands—must be given to the Lord.

I thought of Christ's words, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," and realized that this child had struck the keynote of true giving—perhaps, we might say, the heavenly note; and I did not wonder that the wise prophet of old said, "And a little child shall lead them."—Edith Smith Davis.

GIVE LITTLE GIFTS.

A woman's paper recently gave a true story which should carry a suggestion to every reader. Mrs. Blank, a woman of means and culture, suddenly discovered one day that she was growing old. Her house was filled with beautiful objects, the accumulation of a life-time.

"I have enjoyed them long enough," she said. "It is time I was done with the care of 'things.' If I give them now to the right people, they will be useful. If they are disposed of indiscriminately when I am dead, they will be of little value." She proceeded, therefore, to give away her treasures where they were needed and would be valued. To a worker among children in the slums went a stereopticon; books to poor libraries in the country; photographs to schools. To a hospital for sick children she sent a collection of scrap-books, filled with pictures which, in the course of years, she had cut from the illustrated papers. Most of her bric-a-brac treasures were given where they would afford pleasure. "Gather up the fragments that nothing be lost," was her motto.

None of us realize how many hungry poor are waiting for all the crumbs that fall from the rich man's table. The old magazine, thrust into the waste-basket, would bring a happy hour to some tired woman on a Western ranch. The odd bits of silk and muslin on the floor of the sewing-room would give delight to the crippled children in a hospital ward.

It is much easier to give a note or a check in charity than to find where trifles are needed, and then to send the trifles.

"I have no time for such work," we plead every day. But Christ found time, not only to bless the children, but to take them in his arms before he blessed them, although he had but three years of public life in which to do his Father's business in the world. Was not that his Father's business?—Midland.

"IF I WERE A BOY."

If I were a boy again, I would look on the bright side of everything, for almost everything has a cheerful side. Life is very much like a mirror; if you smile upon it, it smiles back upon you, but if you frown and look doubtful upon it, you will be sure to get a similar look in return. I once heard it said of a grumbling, unthankful person: "He would have made an uncommonly fine sour apple, if he had happened to be born in that station in life!" Inner sunshine warms not only the heart of the owner, but all who come in contact with it. Indifference begets indifference. "Who shuts love out, in turn shall be shut out of love."

If I were a boy again, I would school myself to say "No" oftener. I might write pages on the importance of learning very early in life to gain that point where a young man can stand erect and decline doing an unworthy thing because it is unworthy.

If I were a boy again, I would demand of myself more courtesy toward my companions and friends. Indeed, I would rigorously exact it of myself toward strangers, as well. The smallest courtesies, interspersed along the rough roads of life, are like the little English sparrows now singing to us all Winter long, and making that season of ice and snow more endurable to everybody.

But I have talked long enough, and this shall be my parting paragraph. Instead of trying so hard, as some do, to be happy, as if that were the sole purpose of life, I would, if I were a boy again, try still harder to deserve happiness.—Journal of Education.

HOW NANNIE HUNG THE KITTENS.

A TRUE STORY.

Nannie was never tired of playing in the attic, for, beside all the chests and trunks and dishes for playhouses, there were two of the dearest real live kittens in an old basket under the eaves.

One was maltese and white, and the other a glossy black, and no one knew they were in the world but Nannie and Tabby, their mama.

They soon learned to scamper about and box each other's ears with soft paws, and run sideways at Nannie's ball of yarn. Then Nannie tried to make dolls of them.

She wet the fur on the tops of their heads, and parted it straight down the middle with a fine comb, every morning, in spite of the wrigglings and cries.

She tried to make them go to sleep under a blanket in a basket on the chest, when they wanted to run about. One day she tied each of them around the neck to the handles of the basket and ran down for her work.

When she came back, there hung the two kitties, over the edge of the basket, nearly dead.

Nannie put them into the basket, cut the cords, and after that let them play in their own way, with uncombed heads.—Teacher's World.

GOD'S LIGHT.

A beautiful story is told in the Lutheran World of a little girl, whose faith in God may teach us all a lesson.

The lamp had just been put out, and the little girl was rather afraid of the dark. But presently she saw the bright moon out of her window, and she asked her mother, "Is the moon God's light?"

"Yes, Ethel," the mother replied; "the moon and stars are all God's lights."

"Will God blow out his light and go to sleep, too?" she asked again.

"No, my child," replied the mother; "God's lights are always burning."

"Well, mama," said Ethel, "while God's awake I'm not afraid."—Exchange.

Excursions.

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

IN MEMORIAM.

MRS. JANE FLETCHER HINES was born in North Carolina on the third of November, 1822, and passed into the heavenly home from Summit, Miss., Thursday, April 19, 1900. She was the daughter of Charles Caster Coppedge and Jane Kendall, whose fathers had both emigrated to North Carolina from Virginia. Dr. Coppedge was educated for a physician, but impaired health compelled him to abandon the practice of medicine, and for many years he served as sheriff of his county. Both parents were Methodists, and when quite young our friend was converted at one of the camp meetings of the olden time. After her husband's death Mrs. Coppedge decided to remove to Mississippi, where so many of her relations had already settled, and selected Grenada as her home. Here her daughter was married to Dr. W. B. Hines, a young medical student, and five years later, heard and heeded a call to the ministry, entered the itinerant ministry and is now one of the most honored members of the Mississippi Conference.

Sixty-nine years of wifehood, fifty-four years the wife of a Methodist preacher—what an honorable record! She wore the dignities and discharged the duties of her high position with grace and zeal. To the charm of personal beauty and gentle breeding was added the attraction of a bright and amiable disposition refined by religious devotion. Wherever the church called him to serve, she was a helper to her husband and his work. No wonder that while she lived, and while her mortal semblance lay wrapped in the "dreamless sleep," her husband praised her! Into their happy home ten children were born, six of whom preceded her to the home above. Seven of these died very young, but Edward, the gifted student, was taken in the first flush of his brilliant young manhood, and Dr. John H. Hines, the skillful physician, in the maturity of strength and usefulness. When death makes such gaps in the home circle, they are never filled up—to the mother's heart. Her spirit was always stronger than its earthly tabernacle, and many hours of suffering were her portion. These, and all the trials and sorrows of life, she bore with a patient serenity and perfect submission. For several years before her death she had lived in feebleness exceeding, often helpless and bed-ridden; but no murmur ever escaped her lips. Her last invalid moments were spent in thanking God for her long and happy life, and the hope of meeting soon the loved ones gone before. The presence and ministrations of her pastor always brought joy. I have seen her beautiful soul transform the aged face with its inner glory as she spoke to him of the deep and precious things of God. In the last sad days, during the wanderings of delirium she would smile at the sight of her pastor's face, and, stretching forth her hand in grateful greeting, say, "Ah! you have come from heaven to see me!"

The last years and hours of her life were spent in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mollie Reed, who ministered to her with such an abandon of unselfish devotion as is rarely witnessed. Everything that love could suggest was done to secure comfort and soothe suffering. In the last illness days and nights of tireless vigil were kept by the bedside till at last the spirit was liberated and soared away to its eternal home. The wasted body was laid to rest in the beautiful cemetery at Gloster amid the presence of many friends with their tributes of flowers; amid the melody of our sweet old hymns and tender words of appreciation from Rev. J. W. McLaurin of her long and saintly life.

May all the loved ones who linger on the other side join her in the realms beyond,

Where the anthems of rapture unceasingly roll,
And the smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul."

CLARA H. DRAKE.

COULSON—Mrs. ELIZA J. COULSON died on Friday, May 25, at Secluseval, the home of her daughter, Mrs. Annie E. Harper, near Fayette, Miss., after an illness of but a few hours. She was born in Murfreesboro, Tenn., on Feb. 4, 1818, and joined the Methodist Church when sixteen years of age under the ministry of Rev. John Newland Maffit, D. D. She was a personal friend of the venerated William Winans and Dr. Benjamin Drake, and through her long life cherished the memory of these godly men as her spiritual fathers in Christ. She was the mother of ten children, eight of whom she reared to manhood and womanhood, and six of whom survive her. She was the widow of John S. Coulson, for many years a leading merchant of Natchez, Miss. Her heart and her home were ever open to her friends and to those who needed ministering unto. Her gentle, loving, self-effacing nature kept head and hand always busy for others. Little children ever loved her, and in her last years the fourth generation was her peculiar joy. She retained a surprising interest in everything about her; was alive to all the great questions of public thought, and was in daily touch with the books and periodicals that interested the busy world of younger generations. There was little of real infirmity of body and none of mind, and the cheerful serenity and sweet peace that settled over her more than fourscore years kept her an increasing pleasure to her family and friends. For near sixty five years she was a loyal member of the Methodist Church, and, though failing strength prevented her frequent attendance on divine service, yet, in the last month of her life, she had the sacred pleasure of the holy communion in the church whose building at Harriston she had watched with keen delight, and of which she was long a loved and venerated member. One of her last social pleasures was an afternoon spent with her pastor, Rev. A. D. Miller. Her delicate personal refinement and the purity of her character enforced the thought, "The pure in heart shall see God," or, as it should be stated of some, "have seen" God. The memory she has left is one of loving service and saintly deeds for all who crossed her life-way; but if she could speak to those who miss her beautiful presence on earth, she would say,

"Nobler than any fact,
My wish that failed of act."

LITTLE—WILLIAM CALLAWAY LITTLE, a son of the late Rev. D. A. Little and of Mrs. Frances P. Little, was born Sept. 19, 1878, and took his departure for "the land of the living" April 15, 1900. He was reared by devout Christian parents, who taught the beautiful lesson and example given by the blessed Master: "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Therefore it is not a matter of surprise that at the early age of twelve years he was converted at a children's meeting, and joined the church of his choice. His life thenceforth was characterized by a continued growth in grace, and gave abundant promise of a worthy scion of his noble father. At the time of his untimely departure he was a steward in Capitol Street Methodist Church, an officer of the Epworth League, and a valued employe of the Enochs' Lumber Company. He was the main support of his widowed mother and brothers and sisters. Stricken with small-pox, he was unconscious almost from the beginning of the attack, and probably had no intimation of his approaching end. But he leaves for the consolation of the sorrowing loved ones the testimony of a life consecrated to the service of the Master. He has gone to join the dear ones who have preceded him to the other shore, and will be there with them to welcome those who remain, as one by one they shall bid farewell to earthly scenes. For there "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

C. F. EMERY.

Jackson, Miss.

MCELWEE—JOHNY RAY was born Dec. 15, 1895 and died Dec. 16, 1899.

Little Ray, as everybody called her, was one of the most attractive little girls I ever knew. She was the most precious jewel in the home, especially with her father. He had centered his affections on her, and had prided himself on her very noticeable talent for music. She was sick for quite a while, but the patience and calmness with which she bore her sufferings were remarkable. During her illness she often spoke to her mother of God and heaven, and mentioned the names of loved ones long since dead, and asked questions concerning heavenly things that could not be answered. A little while before her death she asked her sisters to sing, and she seemed to catch every word of the song they sang. Then she sweetly breathed her last, and ere the morning dawned the heavenly messengers had wafted the little spirit to the great white throne, where thousands of children, with harps in their hands, stand and sing praises to the great God.

Dear mother, father, sisters, grieve not for the precious little Ray, but think of her as still being your little jewel, but now sparkling in Jesus' crown, and strive to meet her where there will be no sorrow, no pain, no more good-byes, and no parting.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch. One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $23. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

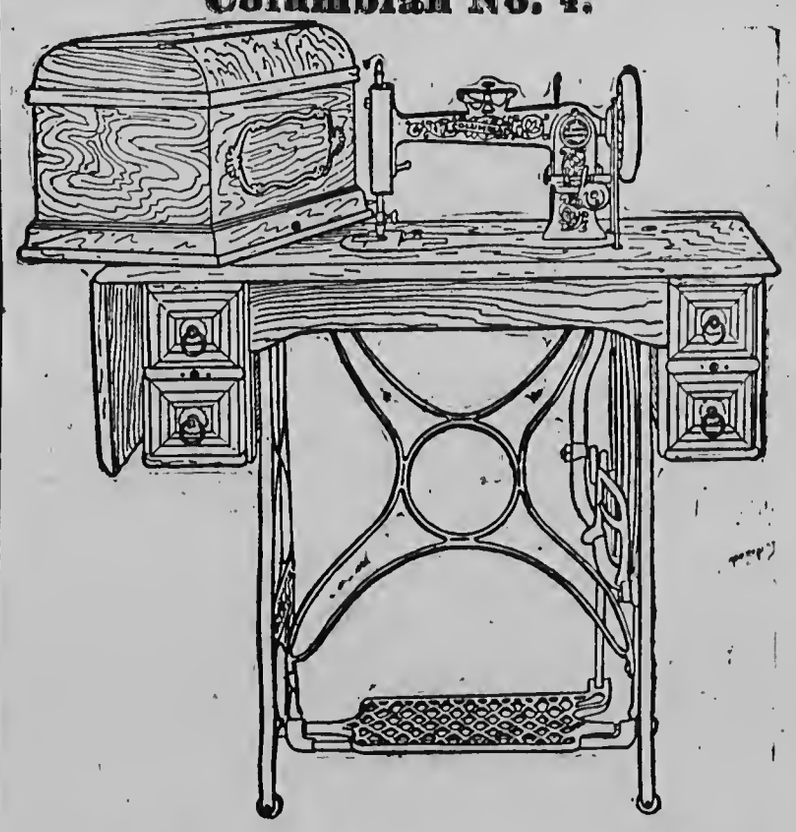
Columbian No. 4.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel-plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hammer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture—i. e., the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

REV. W. C. BLACK,
612 Camp St., New Orleans.

P. S.—The machine will be shipped direct from the factory in the North.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The missionaries in Central China are reported safe.

It is reported that Gen. De Wet's command is surrounded by the English.

Gen. Aquino, a prominent leader of the Filipino insurgent forces, has surrendered.

Rear Admiral John W. Philip, commander of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, died on June 30 of heart disease.

Volunteers joining the German naval battalions for China have been pledged for service until the Autumn of 1901.

The total number of bubonic plague cases at Rio reported since Jan. 4 is 224, of which ninety-nine were fatal.

Political troubles are anticipated in Hayti. The government is taking precautions to frustrate a revolutionary movement.

The legations are still in Peking. They were given twenty-four hours to leave the city, but refused. They were safe on June 25.

The Washington statue was unveiled in Paris on Tuesday. The statue to the memory of Lafayette was unveiled the following day.

In response to a telegram from Mr. Bryan, ex-Senator Hill has left Kansas City for Lincoln, Neb. The purpose of the conference is not known.

Admiral Kempff cables that the battleship "Oregon" is not in a dangerous position. Three naval vessels have been sent to her assistance.

News of the assassination of Baron Von Ketteler, the German minister at Peking, has been confirmed. Germany will demand full satisfaction.

The allied forces now at Taku and Tien Tsin are awaiting reinforcements before moving on Peking, as it is estimated that 50,000 troops are required.

The losses sustained by the fire at the docks of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company at Hoboken are placed at nearly $10,000,000. The loss of life will probably reach 200.

The forces ashore in China now number 16,000, of which 3200 are British, 1300 Germans, 4000 Russians, 3600 Japanese, and the remainder American, French, Italian and Austrian.

The battleship "Oregon" is stuck on Pinnacle Rock in the Gulf of Pe Chi Li. The rock is through the side of the ship above the double bottom. There are also small holes through the bottom of the ship.

Gen. Davis, commanding the United States forces in Puerto Rico, reports that the natives have become imbued with the belief that the United States is to supply food, rebuild their houses and give them all the necessaries of life for an indefinite period, consequently they refuse to work. The distribution of rations will cease July 15.

After an ominous silence lasting several weeks, authentic news is beginning to trickle through from Peking. These advices indicated that a reign of terror has prevailed in the Chinese capital, and that foreigners are being executed by order of the Government. By far the most serious report is that of the killing of the German ambassador, Baron Von Ketteler, on June 18.

If You are Tired
Use Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Dr. M. H. Henry, New York, says: "When completely tired out by prolonged wakefulness and overwork, it is of the greatest value to me."

The Louisiana Chautauqua opened on July 1, at Ruston.

All reports tend to confirm the statement that Baron Von Ketteler, the German minister at Peking, was murdered on June 18. The London Express has a cable from Shanghai stating that the minister, while riding on Legation street, was attacked by Chinese troops and "Boxers," dragged from his horse and killed. His body was hacked to pieces with swords. The German legation and six other buildings were burned, and a number of servants of the legation were killed and their bodies thrown into the flames.

Owing to the intensely interesting character of the news from China, the South African war has to a great extent dropped out of popular notice. Nevertheless the war is still in progress, although it is steadily drawing to the close which everybody expected for it. The Boer forces, although still considerable in the aggregate, have been broken up into many small guerrilla bands, about the only considerable force operating as a single unit being that with Commandant General Botha, to the eastward of Pretoria, on the railroad to Lourenzo Marquez.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.
They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:
Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir
Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever by using two bottles.
J. C. Stanley,
Engineer E. T., Va. & Ga. R. R.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir
Cured me of a case of heart disease and indigestion of four years' standing. I tried a dozen different medicines. None but Lemon Elixir done me any good. Tules Diehl,
Cor. Habersham and St. Thomas Sts., Savannah, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir.
I fully endorse it for nervous prostration, headache, indigestion and constipation, having used it with most satisfactory results, after all other remedies had failed. J. W. Rollo,
West End, Atlanta, Ga.

THE PROSPECT.

BY E. B. BROWNING.

Methinks we do as fretful children do—
Leaning their faces on the window-pane
To sigh the glass dim with their own breath's stain,
And shut the sky and landscape from their view;
And thus, alas! since God, the Maker, drew
A mystic separation 'twixt those twain—
The life beyond us and our souls in pain—
We miss the prospect which we called unto;
By grief we are fools to see! Be still and strong;
O man, my brother, hold thy sobbing breath,
And keep thy soul's large window pure from wrong;
That so, as life's appointment inseweth,
Thy vision may be clear to watch along
The sunset consummation-lights of death.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

This government will not consider itself at war with the Government of China until obliged by official information to do so. Press dispatches report the issuing of an Imperial Edict by the Chinese Government ordering the destruction of all foreigners in the empire; but it is believed by our officials in Washington that if such an edict was issued, it was done by those who have usurped, or are trying to usurp, the powers of the Government of China. Our government has official information from our consuls showing that the viceroys of a number of Chinese provinces are protecting the foreigners in their provinces; so that, even if such an edict has been issued in Pekin, it is being ignored by the rulers of other provinces. The Chinese Minister has been very positive in his assurances to Secretary Hay that his government does not wish war with the civilized powers, and that all the trouble has been brought about by the insurrectionists, aided by dissatisfied imperial soldiers, and Secretary Hay is inclined to accept those assurances now they are disproven by official advices. There is great activity in the diplomatic corps, as each of the powers having soldiers in China is anxious to learn what attitude the other will take if it becomes necessary to set up a new government over China. The rest of them appear to be suspicious of Russia's intentions.

The Ladies' Association of the Metropolitan M. E. Church held an old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration on the large grounds of "Belmont," the Washington residence of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Barber, presided over by Dr. Frank M. Bristol, at which the Declaration of Independence was read, patriotic songs sung, and patriotic addresses delivered by Hon. William M. Springer and Miss Jessie A. Ackerman.

Rev. F. D. Power preached the first of a series of sermons on historic subjects Sunday. His subject was, "John Bunyan and His Times." He said: "One hundred and fifty years passed before the life of John Bunyan was written. This may have been because his 'Christian' was a full-length portrait of himself. August 31, 1888, was the second centenary of Bunyan, and the occasion passed with little recognition, even from the religious press, although Bunyan is the most popular author in the English language, the most widely read in his own and other tongues of all modern writers, and it is doubtful if any book, save the Bible, has a religious influence to be compared with 'Pilgrim's Progress.' John Bunyan is a sort of miracle, whether we look at his struggles and triumphs, the power of his genius and influence of his piety, the fruits of his labors as a preacher and author, the estimation in which he was held in his life-time, or the increasing glory of his fame since death. In 1628, at Elstow village, near Bedford, this glorious dreamer was born. He was the son of a tinker." After telling of his sinful youth and his reformation through marriage with a Christian woman, Mr. Power continued: "For years Bunyan went through most distressing experiences. Satan was as real to him as to Martin Luther. He imagined he had sinned against the Holy Spirit. He was under the horror of a great darkness. And as the satanic influence was as real to him as to Luther, it was Luther that helped him out of temptation." Of his prison life, which lasted twelve years, Mr. Power said: "How much, now, do we owe this prison experience? Was it not to this that the philanthropy of Howard owed its impulse and direction to improve all the prisons of Europe? Is it not to this that we are indebted for the marvelous allegory of 'Pilgrim's Progress'? All he had to comfort him was his Bible, the 'Book of Martyrs,' a solitary little rose bush, and a spider at his window, which served to divert his lonely hours. What constancy! Well might Mr. Froude say in reviewing this history: 'Be true to yourself, whatever comes—even if damnation comes. Better hell with an honest heart, than heaven with cowardice and insincerity.' Bunyan is the Shakespeare of theology. No one thinks of disputing the palm with Shakespeare and Bunyan. It is distinction enough for modern ambition to be critically acquainted with their excellence. No moralist thinks to imitate the writer of 'Pilgrim's Progress.' 'What can the man do that cometh after the King?' Bunyan's pilgrim has never found an imitator or a critic. What Dr. Johnson said to Bishop Percy's little daughter is full of force. Taking the child on his knee, the philosopher asked her how she liked 'Pilgrim's Progress.' She said she had never read it. 'No?' said the Doctor. 'Then I would not give one farthing for you.' And he sat her down and took no further notice of her."

MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES OF TRAVEL.

This month of June has been one of excessive travel and toil for this scribe.

Having an engagement for the first Sunday in Yazoo City, I left home on Friday preceding. I spent a night and a day in Lexington as the guest of Bro. R. E. Wilburn and family and the parsonage. I found Rev. T. C. Wier adjusting himself to the pastorate very heartily, and in excellent favor with his people. Those who know him, however, will not be surprised to hear this report. On Saturday evening I arrived at Yazoo City, and was met by the genial pastor, Rev. W. B. Lewis, and conducted to the parsonage, where a cordial welcome was extended by Sister Lewis and the children. Here several days were spent very pleasantly. I preached twice on the Sabbath, and during a few days following circulated among the good people of the charge, making acquaintances and "circulating the books and papers." The work was considerably hindered by the almost constant rains.

On Thursday evening following I started to Jackson, where I arrived Friday morning after an all-night's travel and laying by. The road was almost impassable for trains on account of the excessive rains. I remained in Jackson four days, taking in, with much interest, the Millsaps College commencement exercises. As this occasion has already been written up by others, it is needless to add anything, only to express my gratification at the good work that is being done here for our boys and young men.

Monday night I ran home and remained nearly two days—the only time with my family during the month.

Wednesday afternoon I ran up to Water Valley, and spent two days with Bro. Shipman and family, and Bro. Harrison and the children in the "Orphans' Home."

Friday evening I went to Oxford, and after spending a night and day in the hospitable home of Bro. Malone and family, I was met by Bro. J. A. Goad and carried out to Burgess, where I remained till Tuesday with him and his people, preaching five times, talking Sunday-school work, and selling books.

Wednesday night and Thursday following I was in Abbeville, the guest of the parsonage, occupied by Bro. Langley and family.

Friday morning I hied away to Corinth, where I was met by the affable young pastor, Bro. H. S. Spraggins, and conducted to the parsonage, where I had a delightful stay of four days, preaching on Sunday, and selling on Monday all the good books and papers that the people would procure. If they had been of the same mind with their humble servant, more would have been accomplished.

Tuesday morning I ran down to Booneville to be ready for the District Conference, which convened on Thursday. I found Presiding Elder Young and his corps of preachers greatly in earnest about the Master's business. It was an occasion of pleasant reunion and greetings with the brethren, preachers, and laymen. They treated their fellow-laborer royally. I wish I could have remained with them through the meeting, but duty called elsewhere; so I came down to West Point, Friday night, en route to Strong's, to meet with the Aberdeen District Conference to-day.

May the Lord bless all the brethren and friends who have been helpful in the work we are endeavoring to do in Christ's name and for the advancement of his kingdom!

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The thirtieth session of the Aberdeen District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, convened at Strong's Station, June 28 to July 1, 1900; Rev. W. W. Woollard, P. E., presiding. A program covering all the work of the District Conference had been judiciously arranged by the presiding elder for both the Sunday school and District Conferences.

Thursday was given to the interest of the Sunday-school work. Several fine papers were read. The one by Bro. T. H. Porter deserves special mention. This, we hope, will be given us through the ADVOCATE. There were some very helpful suggestions given in the speeches of Dr. Sykes, of Aberdeen; Bro. McDonnell, of Okolona, and others—all of which, we hope, will benefit the Sunday-school work in our district. We find that only five Sunday-schools in the district have been organized into missionary societies, as required by the Discipline.

Children's Day services have been deferred in many places because of the continuous rains.

The District Conference proper was organized Friday morning. Rev. R. M. Evans was elected secretary. Fourteen of the sixteen pastors were present, with twelve laymen. We regret that so few laymen were with us. We missed very much our Conference Sunday-school Board president, Bro. Leftwich, who is now in Paris attending the World's Fair. The good people of Strong's entertained us royally, and we were glad to have so many of them in constant attendance during the sessions of the Conference. This, however, is characteristic of this East Mississippi prairie people. The disciplinary questions were called, each pastor in order reporting his work. We find that we have had sixty-two accessions to date, with but three meetings held. There is a revival spirit among us, and we are expecting many to be added to our church in this district this year. Forty per cent. of the pastors' salaries has been paid; more than fifteen hundred dollars has been raised on the Twentieth Century Thank-offering. Prairie circuit has led the district in this special work, paying more than two dollars per member. We are in advance on all lines of what the district has been for years.

We were glad to have with us Bro. Griffin, the agent of our Orphans' Home. He raised in cash seventy-three dollars for the Home. The people of our district stand ready to help Bro. Griffin in this important work of caring for our orphans.

Bro. G. W. Bachman came to us on Saturday in the full strength of his labors, supplied with books fresh from our Publishing House.

Rev. G. S. Sanders was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

A resolution was passed looking to the establishment of a Methodist paper in Mississippi.

The religious feature of the Conference was magnified, and the preaching was of high order, sermons being delivered by the following brethren, namely: R. M. Evans, E. P. Craddock, T. H. Porter, Richard Wilkinson, J. W. Raper, W. W. Woollard, and G. W. Bachman.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: S. T. Harkey, W. G. Sykes, F. J. McDonnell, and Asa Watson.

The next Conference goes to Okolona. J. A. LEECH.

CARROLLTON QUARTERLY CONFERENCE.

The Methodist Quarterly Conference last week proved to be an interesting occasion, though the attendance on the business session should have been better. Besides Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor, there were present W. P. Hughes, A. H. George, and J. R. Bingham, from the Carrollton Church, and Dr. L. H. Hightower, from McAnerny. Rev. B. B. Sullivan, W. L. Duren and W. B. Marshall were also present.

The report on Sunday-schools showed that "both schools were well organized, and enjoy the services of a number of faithful teachers. Good work is being accomplished. However, it is suggested that we might have a variation in one particular without fear of injury, to-wit: Let the teachers frame their own questions, and not depend entirely on the questions laid down in the lesson helps. There are 17 officers and teachers and 153 pupils."

The report on the general state of the church showed that in the past ten weeks "the pastor has made 86 visits and preached 16 times, baptized one infant and received one member into the church on profession of faith. A deep, all-pervading revival is needed. The pastor invokes the aid of the officials and members of the church in this work."

"The sermon on Christian education has been preached at each church. Observed Education Day at Carrollton, and secured $1,330 42 on the Twentieth Century Thank-offering. Carrollton's offering will reach $1,800 by Jan. 1, next. Education Day will be observed at McAnerny the second Sunday in July, and will make a good report there."

Mr. Mitchell preached two good sermons—on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, and at the same hour on Sunday. A hard rain-storm prevented the service on Sunday night. The love-feast, at four o'clock, was greatly enjoyed by a small audience. Two little girls united with the church on profession of faith in Christ.—Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Corinth District Conference had a good session, a fair attendance. The Woman's Missionary Societies, both Foreign and Home, had splendid meetings, with splendid programs. Bro. W. T. Griffin, the agent of the Orphans' Home, was present, and secured some fifty-odd dollars in money and subscriptions to the Home. J. B. Randolph was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. The spiritual state of the church, while low, is steadily improving. Several of the charges have paid their mission assessments. We call special attention to the Corinth circuit. Bro. Rogers has the foreign mission money all in hand in cash, and most all of the domestic money in hand. This circuit is assessed heavy, and this is possibly the first time in the history of the circuit that this has been done by the District Conference, if at all. I am fully convinced that if such can be done on the Corinth circuit, it can be done anywhere in the district. I feel that we shall have great revivals this year. The Holy Spirit seemed to come upon the preachers and people in the sessions of the District Conference. I held Bro. Bradley's third Quarterly Conference on Monday night following, and he had specially good reports, and the financial report was possibly the best in the history of this church for a third Quarterly Conference. He has already sent off his mission moneys. The women here have raised almost a hundred dollars for a thank-offering in their societies on the Twentieth Century Fund. All the preachers in the district were present except W. G. Burke, who was kept away by sickness. Bro. W. D. Burroughs has given up his work for a couple of months, with the hope that with the return of cool weather he may be able to resume work. We ask that the brethren pray for his recovery. We need him so much, besides his suffering and the need of his family.

FOREST DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the Preachers in Charge, and Their Assistants, and the Members of the M. E. Church, South, Forest District, Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: The second round of Quarterly Conferences has ended. Only one charge failed to increase the assessment for ministerial support; all others showed an increasing appreciation of their faithful pastors, and of the privilege of contributing to their maintenance. Four charges have paid less so far to the presiding elder than they did last year: Morton, Walnut Grove, Lake, and Chunkey; three have paid the same: Hillsboro, Newton and Hickory, and Montrose, while Raleigh, Trenton, Vossburg and Heidelberg, Forest, Carthage, Rose Hill, Shiloh, Decatur and Neshoba have done better. Five charges have paid less to the preachers in charge: Walnut Grove, Hillsboro, Lake, Newton and Hickory, and Neshoba; but, with the exception of Walnut Grove (which, for ten weeks, was without a pastor), the deficits are small, while Morton, Raleigh, Trenton, Vossburg and Heidelberg, Forest, Carthage, Rose Hill, Chunkey, Montrose, Shiloh and Decatur show gratifying increase in their payments. In the matter of payments to the Conference assessments, up to the holding of the second Quarterly Conferences, only Hillsboro, Lake, and Newton and Hickory reported less paid than at the same time last year, while all the others showed most encouraging development, especially Raleigh, Rose Hill, Montrose, Forest, and Decatur. Some rainy Sundays prevented the collections for the Bishops' Fund reaching quite to the amount paid up to the same date last year. Only once or twice has the hat had to be sent around the second time.

The several freshets and the many showers and the much grass may tempt our people, in some instances not only to murmur against God, but also to withhold that which is due unto him. Such conduct would deserve greater condemnation and severer afflictions. Encourage the people, each the other, to render unto the Lord that which is due unto him, and not to rob him by withholding tithes and offerings. "There is that which withholdeth more than is meet, and it tendeth to poverty; there is that scattereth, and yet increaseth." "Them that honor me, I will honor, saith the Lord." We need now to "trust in the Lord and do good." Let us all be honest towards God and true to our vows. And let us carry out our resolutions, so enthusiastically adopted by the District Conference, and "pay everything in full."

Let us be true to the church and to our vows. Keep aloof from every movement which tends to "come-outism," whether under the guise of "Interdenominationalism," or "evangelical alliance," or "Christian alliance." Let our preachers preach the doctrines of Methodism—not a diluted gospel, but the old gospel, which is still "the power of God unto the salvation of everyone that believeth." Let the laymen stand by their pastors, and follow them as they follow the Lord Jesus Christ. While I do not object to properly accredited evangelists (as everyone who knows me is fully informed), yet I do object to the intrusion of unauthorized ecclesiastical tramps who come to sow discord and provoke strife. The preacher in charge controls the pulpits in his pastorate, and having the welfare of his people at heart, will call in such human help as he may deem best. Let lay members and pastors work together, and be of one mind and one heart; "and the very God of peace sanctify you wholly."

Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

Special Summer Course at the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

The Moody Bible Institute, of Chicago, once more announces a special course of biblical instruction covering the Summer months, under the conduct of the Rev. James M. Gray, D. D., of Boston. The great benefit which this course has proven to certain special classes of persons hitherto led Mr. Moody to plan for it again this year almost immediately after its close last year.

While it extends from June 1 to Oct. 1, yet the curriculum is of such an accommodating character that pastors, public school teachers, and others, can arrange to take in part of it during their vacation, and, as matter of fact, many of them thus avail themselves.

There are day classes which number three hundred, or more, and evening classes easily twice as large, or larger. A dispensational study of the Old Testament prophets is announced for Tuesday evenings, to extend through the whole course, while on Thursday evenings Sunday-school workers are instructed in the use of the International Lessons. The day teaching is at present in the poetical books of the Old Testament, to be followed by a comparative study of the Gospels, and the analysis of two or three of the New Testament epistles.

As opportunity offers, lectures may also be given on such themes as comparative religion and inspiration.

Dr. Gray's method is particularly helpful in assisting beginners to expound the Bible for themselves, and prepare Bible readings and religious addresses.

Students who enroll for the special Summer course are entitled also to the full privileges of the regular departments of the Institute, which include the musical work under Prof. Towner, Miss Mabel Hall's instruction for primary Sunday-school teachers, and practical experience in tent, open-air meetings, jail work, mission services, etc.

These privileges are absolutely free to all. Enquiries about further details, including terms for board, etc., may be made directly to the Institute, 80 Institute Place, Chicago.

Young people, you must say what the future shall be, and if you are true to your responsibilities, the world will be better for your having passed through it.—Rev. R. N. Avison.

Communications.

DISTRICT DOTS.

I was quite surprised and "set to thinking" the other day when I received a letter from one of our preachers, in which he penned this: "I am learning to preach from some texts I never could have preached from had I not been sent here. My coming here may be hard on the people, but it is the making of the preacher."

There is a bit of philosophy which I heartily commend to the earnest and thoughtful consideration of every itinerant preacher. This brother, having looked over his field, concludes that his old sermons are not applicable in his new surroundings, and that, if he preaches them, he will be as "one who beateth the air," and will do nothing for the glory of Christ or the furtherance of his cause. He shows the sincerity of his heart in the work of the Lord by first getting a proper conception of his relation to the people for whom he is to minister, and then adjusting himself to that relation in such a manner as to be able to use all his present resources, and to develop new resources as occasion may demand. If he can not make the old text exactly fit the new relation, he seeks out a new text and elaborates its theme into perfect adjustment to the needs of his people. He looks carefully over the old "sugar-sticks," upon which he has bestowed some of his best work, and which lie very close to his heart, and if he finds them inappropriate, he does not try to use useless things, but lays them aside, and goes to work and makes sermons that will supply the needs of his people, and he delivers them in all their freshness as a new creation, and with an unction born of his own faith, and they go down into their hearts and spring up in their lives, and Christ is honored by them. In this way he feeds his people with nourishing food, and is himself nourished. In adapting his ministrations to the wants of his flock, he makes them strong and vigorous, and is himself made strong and vigorous. Such a way of ministering avoids "the dead line" so much talked about by the people and so much feared by the preachers.

In looking again at the words the brother used in the letter spoken of, another view opens to me. There is no evidence of the complaining spirit. He has gone to his appointment as the place where he is to work for at least a year, and, instead of quarreling at the Bishop and elders for sending him to such a poor place, he rejoices in the fact of having even that place where he can work for his Lord, and thus show his appreciation of the love which has redeemed him. I commend this view to those preachers who are constantly cherishing the idea that their talents and acquirements are not appreciated by the appointing power. It is my observation that the preacher who entertains that idea is incurable by ordinary means. Nothing can satisfy him. Give him the best appointment possible, and he will complain that the appointing power has ignored his talents and depreciated his worth before the whole church. Such a preacher goes to his work in a spirit which depresses the expectations and hopes of his new people, and effectually hedges up all ways to success. The people are quick to discover this state of mind in their preacher, and the discovery always reacts against the preacher. He rears obstacles to his own success, and must answer for it to his Master.

These preachers have fallen into the delusion Paul cautioned against in Galatians, sixth chapter and third verse. What they consider their "greatness" is by all disinterested people looked upon as a vast and unbounded "emptiness." I have never seen this curious thing more clearly portrayed than by rugged old Thomas Carlyle, and I commend the portrayal to all concerned. In "Heroes and Hero Worship" he says: "Examine the man who lives in misery because he does not shine above other men; who goes about producing himself, unwisely anxious about his gifts and claims; struggling to force everybody, as it were, begging everybody, for God's sake, to acknowledge him a great man, and to set him over the heads of men! Such a creature is among the wretchedest sights seen under this sun. A great man? A poor, morbid, prurient, empty man! He can not walk on quiet paths, and unless you look at him, wonder at him, write paragraphs about him, he can not live. It is the 'emptiness' of the man, not his greatness. Because there is nothing in him, he hungers and thirsts that you should find something in him." It seems as if the rugged old philosopher of Chelsea had been observing some of our preachers! P. E

THE SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

Mr. Editor: Please grant me space once again in the columns of the Advocate to say a few words touching the approaching annual camp meeting at the Sam Jones Camp Ground, near the town of Gloster, on the line of the Y. and M. V. R R.

The semi-annual meeting of the association fixed on Aug. 3, proximo, as the opening day, the meeting to continue ten days, as usual. The primal object of this association, if of no other camp meeting association, is the advancement of the cause of God and the salvation of human souls, and to this end the best efforts of its members and friends have been, and will continue to be, directed.

Some improvements have been made which will add to the comfort of visitors, and make the grounds more attractive as an ideal place for a pleasant outing of a few days. To this add the attraction and enjoyment of communion with God in his original temple, and the society of his people, and the inducements for a large attendance of tenters are ample.

The place itself is delightful for situation; cool and pleasant, as a rule; the waters health-giver, and of superior excellence in other respects; the fare at the hotel good enough for an opinure, and the charges nominal. It is not the desire of the association to make money, but only to secure the actual cost of running the hotel. Seven dollars and fifty cents for ten days' board and lodging is not at all an exorbitant price. In fact, it is about as cheap as one can expect to have a living at home.

Families who do not own tents on the grounds can secure them for the meeting, or longer, at a nominal rental, and there is no place where the same advantages, as to health, cost and surroundings, can be obtained in this part of the country.

Dr. Hayner, of Nashville, Tenn., a preacher of ability and reputation, will conduct the services and the devotional features of the meeting, and its promise of lasting good are brighter than for years past. There will be no disturbing element, either in men or doctrine, to vex Zion and clog the chariot wheels of salvation.

The usual arrangements with the railroad will be in force, and it is hoped that the present, or coming, meeting will be a record-breaker for Sam Jones, both as to attendance and lasting results for good.

Yours truly, Rex.

GREENSBURG COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

Mr. Editor: Although Johnston Collegiate Institute has been in operation under the auspices of the M. E. Church, South, for several years, we do not remember to have seen its claims presented through the columns of the Advocate. Whether this silence has been due to the modesty of the friends of the Institution, or to the fact that they have been crowded out by the more pretentious enterprises of the church, we do not know. However this may be, in view of recent events in connection with the school, and its plans and prospects for the future, we ask a hearing of Louisiana Methodists. The relation which the institution sustains to the church will be seen by reference to the report of the Board of Education of the Louisiana Conference, submitted to the Conference in December, 1896, at Ruston. Under the head of "Johnston Collegiate Institute" this report says, "This institute, while under the care of the Conference, is not its property, but soon will be, as this Board is informed." The reason for its not being the property of the Conference is stated in a report of the same Board, submitted at Crowley in 1898, in these words, "It (meaning J. C. I.) will become the property of the church as soon as a small debt is paid."

We are glad to be able to announce to the church that the payment of the debt referred to above has been provided for, and at the approaching session of the Louisiana Conference the property, unencumbered, will be tendered the church, and will then be brought completely under the control and into the possession of the Conference. While the institution had been offering a regular collegiate course leading to the A. B. and B. S. degrees, at a meeting of the Board of Trustees, held in August, 1899, sincerely desiring to put themselves in line with the educational policy of the church, and with the report of the Commission of Education before it, the Board unanimously decided to cease conferring degrees, and instructed its principal-elect to conform the curriculum to that recommended by the commission for academies or secondary schools, continuing, in addition to this work, to do such work as is done in the Freshman and Sophomore classes of our colleges, until such time as the colleges of the Conference shall conform to the recommendations of the commission, and ceased to do preparatory work. Thus the Board of Trust has done all in its power to remove the Institution from competition with Centenary and Mansfield Colleges, and the school is ready, whenever the time shall come in our Conference for the correlation of our institutions of learning, to fall into its place as an academy or secondary school.

If we really are to have a correlated system of education in the M. E. Church, South, there will be no more important feature of that system than the academy or secondary school. This feature will alone save the system from top-heaviness. The practical usefulness of the most magnificent superstructure will depend upon the solidity of its foundation.

The trend in educational circles has been for several years, and is now, toward raising the curricula of our colleges, and proportionately raising the standard of requirements for admission into the college classes. The fact is potent that the higher the curriculum of the college is raised, the farther it is removed from the great mass of the people, since the number who have time and means to take a course in a high-grade college is very small in comparison with our membership. Thus a system of education which neglects preparatory or secondary schools will fail to reach the great majority of the young people of the church.

Methodism has always boasted in her mission to the great masses of the people, and she can not afford to ignore them in her educational plans. We sincerely believe if a man has $100,000 to give to Christian education, that if he really wants to bless humanity with it, it would be far better for him to divide it among ten or twenty secondary schools than to give it to some high-grade college whose circle of influence is necessarily limited to a very narrow circle. Not only is this class of school essential to the good of the church, but it is also necessary to the existence of our high-grade colleges themselves. In order to have a high-grade college, a certain amount of preparatory work must be done. Every college catalogue emphasizes the need of thorough preparatory training, and deplores the lack of this upon the part of the majority of applicants for admission to the college. To meet this deficiency most of our colleges in the past have had their sub-Freshman, or preparatory department. That this plan is open to serious objection is proved by the manifest disposition on the part of the leading colleges to do away with this department. Frequently the support of the college proper depends in part upon the surplus income of the preparatory department. This is a manifest injustice to the student in that department.

The suspicion that there is on the part of some a feeling that there is no room for Johnston Collegiate Institute in our Conference is our excuse for pleading thus at length for this grade of school.

The property which shall be tendered the church consists of a splendid main building of two stories, well adapted to the purpose for which it was built. It represents an outlay of about $4,500, the bulk of which has come from the people of the immediate vicinity of Greensburg. An expenditure of $2,000 by the church would give us a plant which could not be duplicated anywhere in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference for less than $10,000. Our immediate and urgent need is a supply of desks, maps, globes, etc, and a good working library. This, by all means, we should have by the opening of the school in September. Our aim from the beginning has been to furnish board and tuition at the lowest rates consistent with thorough work. In this respect we invite comparison with any other institution of like grade in the South.

In conclusion, we beg leave to say a personal word. We undertook this work in response to what we took to be the urgent call of the church. In order to do it we severed pastoral ties which, to us, were very delightful. We are here neither for money nor glory, but for the good of the church upon whose altar we have laid our all. We are conscious of no abatement of that itinerant spirit which possessed us in the pastorate. We have never had a more difficult charge to fill, and never felt more fully the need of the sympathy and prayers of our friends and brethren. We hope that our people will remember Johnston Collegiate Institute in making their Twentieth Century Offerings and at a "throne of grace."

P. M. Brown.

LETTER FROM JAPAN.

Mr. Editor: Just ten days ago (May 21) another little baby boy was welcomed to our home and hearts. The Japanese law says that, within ten days after the birth of a child, his name, etc., must be reported to the District Office. Unfortunately, being ignorant until yesterday of the law, the little stranger has not yet been named. To tell the truth, all our other girls having been boys, we had fixed on a name; but it is more suitable for a girl than for a boy. But this is the tenth day, and the law says that the report "must be sent" in to-day, and that in the report the baby "must be named." I could get no extension of time on either point.

Well, we were rather troubled, for nobody likes to be hurried in such a matter as naming a baby; so I told my teacher to tell them plainly that we had not decided on his name, but that, if they "had to have a name" for the report, to write it "George." Then I had to add in the report my name, age, native place, present residence, my wife's name, the place and day of birth, and the number of the boy—that is, whether he was number 1, 2, 3, or 4. The last is his number. They asked nothing about the girls. So I sent the report in by my teacher. After a little while he came back to ask the hour when he was born, and to get me to sign my name in English. An hour or so later he came back again to ask the day, month and year of my birth, and, as the whole paper had to be recopied, to get me to sign my name again in English. I have not heard of it since, but it is quite possible that they have not yet gotten all the necessary information they desire, and I may hear from them again to-morrow.

If red-tape is an indication of civilization, we certainly have it out here. Yours truly,

B. W. Waters.

On Wednesday, June 13, closed a most enjoyable and profitable session of the North Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S. Each train, Saturday, had left its quota of delegates and visitors, so that ere the night came on the committee had bestowed a goodly number in the hospitable homes of our entertainers. That committee, headed by our Conference host, the indefatigable Rev. N. G. Angustus, fulfilled every duty in a most satisfactory manner.

The evening hour and the church bell's joyful peal called together many worshipers to participate in the opening consecration service conducted by Mrs. Hartwell. It was indeed good to be there, and as one and another bore testimony to the blessing which follows enlistment in this work for woman by women, glad tears gave evidence of the feelings of all hearts. One dear, faithful worker arose, with countenance all aglow, and said, "Since engaging in this work, year after year, I find the world's hold on me growing less."

True it is that as one becomes more in love with the Lord's work, the allurements of the world grow less attractive. After spending a while in such delightful manner the president announced a brief service commemorative of Misses Richardson and Haygood. Appropriate remarks were made touching the life and labors of Miss Richardson, who, though having wrought but one year, accomplished much. Mrs. McIntosh gave a short account of her association with Miss Haygood, whose useful life, at sunset of April 29, closed its earthly tasks to enter into a life of eternal fruition. That was a sweet talk about one whose "life was hid with Christ in God," and who lived as "seeing Him who is invisible." Miss Gary, of our China Mission, made some touching allusions to Miss Haygood's life among her fellow-workers in the foreign field. How much she was beloved by them can be reckoned by one expression from Miss Gary. "Miss Haygood," said Miss Gary, "is the only woman that, having forgotten myself for the moment, I ever called mother."

With such companionship, is it any wonder that those stricken ones look into each other's pallid faces with the mute inquiry, "Who will be our leader now?"

The evening service closed with prayer by Bro. Thames, who had passed awhile with us while en route to Millsaps commencement.

Sunday dawned bright, beautiful, in pleasant contrast to the many days of rain preceding. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. T. Y. Ramsey. His theme, "Preaching repentance and remission of sins in Jesus' name among all nations," was kept well in hand, and his discourse made a lasting impression upon the hearers. At the conclusion of the sermon a large number of communicants pledged anew their fealty to the blessed Savior in partaking of the Lord's Supper.

Sunday afternoon Miss Cecile Ramsay conducted a children's service, during which a most interesting talk was given by Miss Gary. She told the children of little Chinese boys and girls—some good and happy, some poor and wretched; also of the baby towers, where, in consequence of the worship of ancestors, little girl babies are thrown to perish. Many other things she mentioned that can not fail of accomplishing good.

The evening was given over to addresses of welcome and response, musical and poetical selections, and to an address by Miss Gary. Our Conference secretary, Mrs. McIntosh, was indeed fortunate in securing for our meeting one so competent as well as so willing. Her earnest manner, with her graphic delineation of places and people, gave a deeper insight into the necessity and vastness of the work she so loves, and many who heard experienced a deepening of interest.

Monday morning the business routine was taken up, and continued until Wednesday noon, intermitted by the introduction of a larger number of visitors than usual. Several brethren gladdened our hearts by expressions of commendation or encouragement.

On Monday evening Dr. Annie Walters Fearn came before a large audience in the gorgeous dress worn by Chinese women of the higher class. Her talk, like that of Miss Gary, though along lines that should be well known by all missionary workers, was made in such clear, forceful language that many items were like a revelation to some who heard. Worship of ancestors and foot-binding were dwelt upon at some length, and, in closing, each of these consecrated women said, "But wherever Christianity enters a home, foot-binding ceases." Then also from those homes dear little girls are no longer cast into the "baby towers" to die.

Our faithful corresponding secretary gave evidence of a good year's work, and showed full well her fitness as representative in her report of the proceedings of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions, recently convened in Paris, Texas. Press of work crowded out some items of that as well as parts of Mrs. McIntosh's report of the Ecumenical Missionary Conference. However, enough was said to warrant the opinion expressed in the words of another, that "the Ecumenical Conference is the greatest meeting of the church of Christ up to this date."

Seeing so much to accomplish within a limited time, our president, Mrs. Hoskins, modestly withheld the customary address, giving in its stead, from time to time, comforting thoughts and brave, stirring words to cheer us through the battles of another year.

The lengthening proportions of this paper forbid the telling of much that I would like to say.

Several episodes linger pleasantly in the minds of those who spent such delightful days enjoying the splendid hospitality of Durant, the beautiful little city of oaks. One worthy of mention is the elegant reception tendered our body by the local auxiliary in the home of one of the members, Mrs. Johnson. Another was the drive to Castalian Spring, given adult and juvenile delegates.

Reports from all parts of the Conference show cause for gratitude. Most old organizations "hold their own," while some new ones have been formed. Treasurer's report quite gratifying. Election of officers, the last item of business, shows some changes. Those who have served gave faithful, efficient labor, and, as a society, we thank them.

Those elected for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. M. I. Hoskins; vice-president, Mrs. S. M. Thames; recording secretary, Miss Grider; corresponding secretary, Mrs. H. P. Gibbs; treasurer, Mrs. Bancroft; auditor, Mrs. J. F. Evans; editor, Mrs. G. H. Lipscomb. Secretaries of districts: Columbus district, Mrs. Woodward; Aberdeen, Miss Arrington; Corinth, Mrs. H. T. Gaines; Sardis, Miss Raiford; Grenada, Mrs. Hartwell; Winona, Mrs. B. L. Jones; Greenville, Mrs. G. C. Jones; Holly Springs, Miss Hinton; Durant, Miss Cecile Ramsey.

Inka was chosen as place of next annual meeting.

All business having been finished, a sweet devotional service was conducted by Mrs. J. D. Shell.

Mrs. J. B. Stone, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. M. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The honor of holding the first District Home Mission Meeting in the Mississippi Conference belongs to Jackson district. We give below report of this meeting by the secretary, Mrs. Horton. We congratulate Jackson district on having such a stirring district secretary as Mrs. Parks, and hope soon to hear from all the other districts. (Editor.)

The district meeting of the Home Mission Societies of Jackson district, Mississippi Conference, was held at Yazoo City, May 24, 1900, in the Methodist Church. The meeting was called to order by the district secretary, Mrs. Parks. Devotional exercises were conducted by Miss Addie Purnell, president of the Conference Society. Mrs. S. A. Horton was elected secretary. Those present were profitably entertained by Mrs. Sudie Parker, who discussed the importance of making sacrifices that others might have the gospel. Her words were indeed an inspiration to all. Reports from societies were then called for by the secretary.

First Church, Jackson, was represented by Mrs. Parker. She reported thirty members. Dues paid, $33.20; specials, $55 80; local work, $83.90—making a total of $172.60. Capitol Street, Jackson, was represented by Miss Hope Jelks, who reported that society in good working order. Brandon sent a written report, read by Miss Mande Mulhollan, stating that the society was in good condition. Canton sent written report; $55.90 raised from March, 1899, to March, 1900. The report of the Juvenile Society in Yazoo was read by Miss Berry. It has Mrs. Alice Parks for its leader, and numbers thirty-three. This society is only a few months old, and promises to do good work. Mrs. R. L. Bennett reported the recent organization of a society in Yazoo City. It has twenty members, also seven subscribers to "Our Homes." Much interest is manifested in the work.

Mrs. Bennett read an article telling of the Board meeting recently held in New Orleans.

Thanks were tendered the people of Yazoo City for their hospitality. Bro. Crymes, being present, was asked to lead in prayer, after which the pleasant meeting adjourned with the benediction by Rev. J. A. B. Jones.

Notwithstanding we were few in number, we had a most excellent meeting. I am sure it will result in great good to the cause, and especially to us here in Yazoo City. We will gladly greet the society again.

Mrs. S. A. Horton,
Secretary.

A GOOD THING.

I call the attention of the preachers to one of the best things I have seen lately. The Fifty-fourth Annual Report of the Board of Missions of our church is the fullest and clearest statement of our missionary work that I have ever seen. Everything necessary to an intelligent understanding of the mission fields, at home and abroad, and of the money expended, and of the work done, is succinctly given in that report. The Treasurer of the Board of Missions publishes his report in full, so that the church can know whence every dollar came and to what it has been applied. The roll of Conferences is given, and the percentage each paid on assessment, and the fact comes out that no Conference last year paid its assessment in full.

In the ADVOCATE'S jurisdiction the case stands thus: North Mississippi paid 68 per cent.; Louisiana paid 66 per cent., and Mississippi paid 64 per cent. The report also gives the minutes of the last meeting of the Board, which ought to be of interest to every preacher. Then we have given the Charter, Constitution and By-Laws of the Missionary Society and the Missionary Manual and the Missionary Directory of the names and stations of every person working in the mission field under the authority of our church. This report is a most valuable instrument with which to work in order to raise our collections.

Let our preachers get the facts and figures from this report, and a new baptism of the missionary spirit, and then go out among the people and teach them these things, and we shall see a very perceptible rise in the rate of percentage reported next Conference. I believe a judicious use of this report by the pastors will send our collections far above the notch they stand at now.

Why should not every preacher resolve to raise his full assessment? That is little enough, surely. The assessments are not heavy and burdensome. This is shown by the fact that some of our pastors have already collected the full amount and sent it forward. Let every preacher send six cents for postage, and get this report and make known its facts and figures to his people. It is the best thing for use in a missionary mass meeting that can possibly be used.

C. W. CARTER.

FROM COVINGTON.

MR. EDITOR: While this part of the State is as old almost as the history of creation, yet it is new to me—new in locality, in people, and new in improvements. There are many things which would interest a traveler.

The town of Covington has a progressive League only recently organized, which indicates that all has not been done for improvement that the people could have achieved. One of the aims is to open a park, not only to beautify the town, but to afford a pleasure resort for the weary, for the lounger, and for children of tender age. The loving swain can here pour out his tale of love into ears eager to listen and to apply with unbounded joy. There are twenty houses of business, including dry goods, drug stores, groceries, and fruit vendors. The town is connected with New Orleans by rail and water. The physicians located in its limits are trustworthy and skillful.

We often speak of the poor pine woods, as if no riches have been granted to them by our Creator. In this we deceive ourselves. The dense forests of this growth all around Covington are rich in deep solitude, in tall trees, and in undulating stretches of soil, which, though not adapted to the growth of sugar cane, yet will yield many cereals useful to man. Fruit trees may be cultivated with the prospect of a fair yield. In some places I noticed that pecan orchards had been planted out. I noticed one dairy farm and a few Jersey cows resting in the shade. In these forests there are many beautiful residences, showing in what estimation they are held.

Mayor Flower has a residence near the Claiborne Hotel. This hotel is surrounded by shade, and has a very airy appearance. It is four or five hundred feet long, with a gallery extending the whole length. An artesian well supplies a copious quantity of water for all necessary purposes. Abita has a spring, owned by a company, which bottles its waters and forwards them to New Orleans, where they are sold. Mulberry Grove, which has some celebrity as a health resort, is situated two miles from this town. Chin Chuba, a Catholic asylum for the deaf and dumb, is located six miles in the country. Near by the water cure is to be found. These are the most noted places I had the pleasure of visiting.

We have been visited by Revs. J. F. Foster and F. N. Parker, of the city. The latter called on me. Dr. Clay, who is in charge of the Waif's Home, was here not long since for the purpose of purchasing him a home. Mrs. Parker, widow of Bishop Parker, is here for her health. Thus it may be seen that we are not out of the world, but that we are a very important part of it. Mrs. Mary Elderman and Mrs. Susan Lesher, the former of Louisiana Avenue, and the latter of Rayne Memorial, spent two weeks at the place where I am boarding, and showed me many favors. They expressed a deep interest in my recovery, and to facilitate it took me out in the forenoon on rides penetrating, by the highways, almost every part of the surrounding country. This, with other kind attentions, makes me feel that there is still in the human family those who can feel for the sufferings of others, and render them less painful. What would the world do without the noble and pious women of the church?

Whilst the public schools here are kept up, there is a high school in course of construction. It is a large brick structure, two or three stories high, located about one mile west from the town, surrounded by a dense pine forest. There is no healthier locality for a school to be found anywhere. Prof. Dickson is the conspicuous figure in its erection, and will be the president. Thirty or forty boarders can find comfortable quarters there. It is indeed a school that deserves to prosper.

J. F. SCURLOCK.

FROM REV. SAM Q. BASS.

MR. EDITOR: If you can give room, I would like to say a few words. I spent a few days at our District Conference at Booneville, Miss., last week. Had a nice, good time. I did not stay to the close, but during my stay the business of the Conference seemed to move harmoniously along, and Bro. W. M. Young seems at home in the presiding elder's chair. I was specially delighted with the woman's work of the district, and also that of the children; but I fear that there is a lack of a little more effort on the part of our pastors in the encouraging our good women in their work. A good woman is a power for God, and those of them who are engaged in his work ought to be helped in every way possible. We need a revival of old-time power all over our district. May the Lord send it!

Some of the pastors asked me why I was not preaching more this year. I will explain. For more than five months my wife has been confined to her room and bed; not able to do anything at all, nor able for me to leave her. When Spring opened up I had several engagements with pastors in different parts of our church; but the above cause has kept me at home. No one but God knows the heart-aches that I have endured in the last five months. We do not know why we are stopped in our work at times, as many of us are; but one thing we do know: "All things work together for good to them that love God." I love God, and, therefore, there is "good" somewhere in all this affliction for me. For the last three or four days my wife has been able to creep about in her room most of the day, and we are hopeful that she will soon be in better health.

So, my brother, I am under the cross, and ready to work when health will admit. I have four promises out for this Summer, and trust that I may be able to meet them. It seems to me that our pastors ought to put to work every local preacher in our connection this Summer, and do all in their power to make this, the last year of the nineteenth century, the best year in the history of our Methodism. We ought to have a half million conversions and additions to our church by Conference. I love all denominations, but I love our own the best, and these three things that I would I have said of Southern Methodism as she steps in the new century: 1. She has the most consecrated, Holy-Ghost set of ministers of any church on earth; 2. She had more sons and daughters born into the kingdom of God in 1900 than any other church; 3. She paid more money to the cause of education (according to number of members) than any church.

Well, I have already said too much, or taken up too much space; must close.

May God bless every pastor and local preacher! SAM Q. BASS.

It Has Happened

More than once that a child has been carried off by an eagle. When such a thing does happen the press rings with the story. There's not a line given by the press to the babies carried off daily by disease. It isn't the fact of the child being taken away that is startling or interesting, it's only when the method of taking off is novel that it excites interest. How many children die who might have been saved if the mother who bore them had been able to give them strength and vitality. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes healthy mothers and healthy mothers have healthy children, strong enough to resist disease if they are attacked.

Mrs. Axel Kjer, of Gordonville, Cape Girardeau Co., Mo., writes: "When I look at my little boy I feel it my duty to write to you. This is my fifth child and the only one who came to maturity; the others having died from lack of nourishment—so the doctor said. This time I just thought I would try your 'Prescription.' I took nine bottles and to my surprise it carried me through and gave us as fine a little boy as ever was. Weighed ten and one-half pounds. He is now five months old, has never been sick a day, and is so strong that everybody who sees him wonders at him."

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical. Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

THURSDAY, JULY 12, 1900.

THE SABBATH MUST BE PRESERVED.

We are now in the midst of the season when temptations to desecrate the Sabbath are unusually strong and numerous. Railroads all over the country seem to put a premium upon Sabbath profanation by offering special inducements to travel on that day. Sunday excursions to the seaside, to sporting grounds, to watering-places and places of amusement, are held out as baits to the pleasure-loving, and church members by the hundred—many of them, alas! being Protestants—are caught by these attractions, and convert the Lord's day into a day of revelry and frivolity. While all unnecessary toil ought to be remitted on the Sabbath, it is by no means to be made a season for sport and amusement, for abandonment to physical enjoyment. And yet multitudes in our land who ought to know better, and have been better instructed, when the Sabbath comes, instead of going to church and seeking spiritual refreshment as well as bodily rest, board the cars, or their bicycles, or perhaps their buggies, and rush off to scenes of fun and folly, where God's commands are dishonored and the voice of conscience is stifled.

It is alarming how many evil forces are at work seeking to undermine the Sabbath, both as a day of rest and as a day of worship. Professing Christians are tolerating and seeking to excuse more than one business that is run on the Sabbath, both in violation of the civil law and of the unquestioned teaching of the Word of God. We are not a pessimist, and we do not believe that civilization, as a whole, is going backward, but we can not shut our eyes to the fact that the welfare of Church and State is being imperiled, and the progress of Christianity among us is being grievously hindered by the flood-tide of Sabbath desecration that is sweeping over the country. Unless Christians of all denominations awake to the momentous importance of preserving the integrity of the Sabbath, the cause of righteousness will be given a backset that it will take years to overcome. Destroy the sanctity of the Sabbath, and the voice of the pulpit will be hushed, the churches will become deserted, truth and righteousness will be forgotten, and a great horror of spiritual darkness will settle over our land.

It is evident that if the rising generation is to be preserved from becoming, in large measure, Sabbath breakers and religion despisers, Christian people everywhere must make a tremendous and determined fight in behalf of Sabbath observance. It is not to be expected that the godless and those who have been deprived, wholly or in part, of religious instruction, will keep the Sabbath strictly. Charity should be shown such persons, and they should be allowed some license that we do not allow ourselves, but Christians must oppose with firm and united front the turning of the Sabbath into a day of traffic and jollification.

For the sake of saving a few paltry dollars, or for mere convenience sake, not a few church members are guilty of the sin and folly of patronizing Sunday excursions, thus bartering away principle and the favor of God for a trivial mess of pottage. The fact that scores and hundreds throw restraint to the winds and do their own pleasure on the Sabbath does not make such conduct right, any more than does the commission of a thousand murders make murder legal and commendable.

The only works that are excusable on the Sabbath day are "works of necessity and mercy." All occupations and duties that do not come under this category, according to the plain teaching of the New Testament, are unlawful on the Sabbath day. In the details of Sabbath observance there are many points about which Christians honestly differ, and we should be careful not to pass harsh judgment upon those who do not see things as we do. Let every man be fully "persuaded in his mind," but let him be sure that he is seeking to be guided by the Scriptures and by the Holy Spirit.

When General Grant was in Paris, the President of France, as a special token of respect, invited him to a place in the grand stand to witness the famous Sunday races. To decline such an invitation is considered a great discourtesy. Such a thing had never been heard of, but General Grant, in a polite note, declined the honor, and said to the head of the French Republic: "It is not in accordance with the custom of my country or with the spirit of my religion to spend Sunday in that way." When the Sabbath came that great military hero sought out the American chapel, and was one of the quiet worshipers there. How striking is the contrast between the reverence and courage thus manifested by General Grant and the shameful and silly conduct of many professing Christians of to-day, who seem to think that when they are in Rome they must do as Rome does.

RUNNING A PAPER NOT A "SOFT JOB."

The following expressive paragraph from Bishop Keener's "History of the ADVOCATE," published in the anniversary number, Feb. 8, 1883, furnishes interesting reading as well as food for reflection to those who may imagine that running a religious journal is a sort of sinecure. Says the good Bishop, who, for four years, experienced the pressure of the editorial harness: "Almost everybody imagines he can teach a school, run a country store, or publish a paper. I thought so once, but after more than thirty years of observation in this line, and some experience, it now distresses me to see one attempting to start a new paper. If to live by the skin of one's teeth, if to have nightly sweats, if to see all things in the light of an editorial paragraph; if to make all correspondents, sooner or later, cool friends or active opponents; if to grow empty year by year and day by day, until you feel—in fact, know—that you are to everybody, except to your own immediate family, 'as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal;' if this is a thing to be sought after, then turn editor or publisher of an Advocate, either or both, as you may have opportunity."

SABBATH KEEPING A SAFEGUARD AGAINST INSANITY.

Aside from the immeasurable spiritual benefit that comes from keeping the Sabbath holy, it has been proved beyond all question that the observance of the Sabbath as a day of rest conduces to health, happiness, and longevity. In an able article in the July Century Magazine on, "How to Safeguard One's Sanity," Dr. J. M. Buckley, of New York City, says: "The observance of one day in seven by a complete change in subjects of thought, and the suspension of the modes of activity required for six days, would be philosophical, even though it had no basis in religion. In the first French Revolution the attempt was made to have a holiday once in five days, and again once in ten. The intervals were too frequent under the first plan, and did not occur often enough under the second. Hence those who hated the system which enforced the Sabbath were forced to return to it.

"The superintendent of one of the largest hospitals for the insane declares that nineteen out of twenty of the business and professional men who come under his care have been in the habit of carrying business on their minds for seven days in each and every week."

MILLSAPS LAW DEPARTMENT.

The Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, at their recent annual meeting, made two additions to the faculty of the Law Department: Mr. W. R. Harper and Hon. A. H. Whitfield. This makes the Law Department of Millsaps equal to any law school in the South. Hon. Edward Mayes, principal of the department, is widely known, not only as an attorney, but as a law professor of distinguished ability, he having been for many years at the head of the Law Department of the State University. Judge Whitfield is the present chief justice of the Supreme Court of Mississippi. He was also for some years at the head of the Law Department of the State University, filling the place with marked ability. W. R. Harper is a practitioner of the Jackson bar, and is recognized as pre-eminently learned in the law. With such a faculty, and with one of the best law libraries in the South domiciled in the State Capitol, and with the Supreme Court and numerous other courts, State and Federal, in frequent session there, Millsaps College now offers to law students facilities not surpassed in that section.

DR. AND MRS. FEARN IN NEW ORLEANS.

Those splendidly equipped and deeply consecrated missionaries, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Fearn, of Soochow, China, who are at home on a furlough, have been spending a few days in this city in the interest of the missionary cause. On Sunday morning last Dr. Fearn delivered a highly instructive and interesting address at Rayne Memorial respecting China, upon which the eyes of the whole civilized world are now centered, touching incidentally upon the causes of the present troubles, and what these troubles presage. At five o'clock P. M., at the same place, a Young People's Missionary Mass Meeting was held, at which Mrs. Fearn, who is also an M. D., made a very impressive and edifying talk.

Sunday evening the Doctor and his wife spoke at Carondelet Street Church to a good-sized audience, narrating some of their experiences, and throwing much light upon Chinese customs, and upon the methods pursued by the missionaries in their work. Their addresses were listened to with the greatest eagerness, and will do no little to promote intelligent interest in foreign missions. Everybody was charmed with these noble missionaries.

Dr. and Mrs. Fearn have been in New York, and also in Philadelphia, for several months taking a post-graduate medical course, which they have just completed. While in the city they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Dicks. They expect to sail from San Francisco for Shanghai, China, Sept. 6.

Dr. Fearn is deeply impressed with the importance of pushing the movement now on foot to establish a Methodist university at Soochow.

DEATH OF MRS. E. J. RAIFORD.

We are deeply pained to learn of the death, which occurred at Gloster, Miss., Sunday morning, July 1, of Mrs. E. J. Raiford, who for years has been a prominent, active, and consistent member of the Methodist Church, and who was one of the most influential and highly esteemed women of the community where she lived. She was the widow of the Hon. Wm. B. Raiford, deceased, and had been a resident at Gloster for ten or twelve years.

Sister Raiford joined the church in early womanhood, and was ever an earnest, useful Christian. Having been her pastor for three years, the assistant editor came to know her intimately, and feels that in her death he has lost one of his truest and best friends. She had reached the ripe age of sixty-seven years. She left five children—two sons and three daughters—all grown. May God graciously comfort them in their deep sorrow!

REV. A. B. NICHOLSON DEAD.

MR. EDITOR: To-day, at 4:30 P. M., we laid to rest in the cemetery at this place our good brother, Rev. A. B. Nicholson. Bro. Nicholson died this morning at 3 o'clock. He has been a great sufferer, and confined to his bed the greater part of this year. In the midst of this suffering he was often heard to say: "Praise the Lord; I am going home to rest." A suitable account of his life will be furnished later for publication. Let prayers by the church be made for Sister Nicholson. Yours, J. T. LEGGETT.

Hazlehurst, Miss., July 2, 1900.

The announcement of the death of this aged veteran of the cross will be read with profound sorrow by his many friends in Mississippi and Louisiana. When in his prime he was one of the most useful and successful preachers in the Mississippi Conference.

DR. LAMBUTH ON THE CAUSES OF THE DISTURBANCES IN CHINA.

Realizing that Dr. W. R. Lambuth, one of our Missionary Secretaries, has spent most of his life in China, and is thoroughly conversant with affairs in that land, about a week ago we addressed a letter to him, asking for such information as he could give respecting the true origin of the troubles prevailing there. His reply, which we take the liberty of publishing in full below, will, we feel sure, be read with eager interest. His statements show how false and misleading, in the main, are the charges being made by secular newspapers that the missionaries are the cause of all the disturbance.

MR. EDITOR: Your favor of the twenty-sixth ultimo awaited my return from Richmond, Va. I have replied as early and as fully as other pressing matters would permit. The causes of the present troubles in China are many and complex. I have thrown them together, however, under four heads.

I.—THE POLICY OF FOREIGN NATIONS.

This has been one of force and aggression from the beginning, with a few notable exceptions. Great Britain forced opium upon China at the cannon's mouth, and afterwards compelled her to legalize the traffic. Russia outwitted her in diplomacy through deception and statements which were grossly false, which led to the annexation by Russia of all the territory between the Amoor river and Northern Korea—a territory which had always belonged to China, and for which, in return, she got the poorest equivalent in concessions in the extreme northwest. Germany, within the last three years, took advantage of the murder of two missionaries to extort a concession for ninety-nine years of the port of Kwai Chow and the territory adjacent to it. About the same time Russia ousted Japan from Port Arthur, and by ingratiating herself with the Chinese Government, pre-empted the whole of Manchuria for her own use. While these movements have been in progress in the north, France invaded the rights of China on her southern border, where she claimed suzerainty over Annam and Tonking.

II.—REFORM MOVEMENTS.

The defeat and humiliation of China by Japan led the more thoughtful men of the empire to study the forces which made it possible for the smaller empire to achieve such marvelous victories. The conclusion was reached that both the principles and institutions of Western civilization must be accepted. The private tutor of the Emperor, an eminent Confucian scholar, was foremost in suggesting to his imperial master the necessity of carrying out a well-digested program of reform. The Emperor, after reading over sixty Christian books, among a large number of other volumes, came so thoroughly under conviction that he inaugurated a movement which looked to bringing China in line with Japan and Siam.

The Empress Dowager, a woman of great ability, but as ambitious as she is unscrupulous, and avowedly conservative, stepped in at this juncture, and, by a coup d'etat, checkmated the Emperor, beheaded six of the leading reformers, and placed their constituents under the ban. This counter movement has led to so much dissatisfaction and discord among high officials that those best acquainted with state affairs have for months been predicting an outbreak in the capital and sympathetic movements in the provinces.

III.—THE BOXERS.

The third element is what has been called the movement of the Boxers. More than a century ago these were local banditti, who, fifty years before Protestant missionaries entered China, organized themselves into a secret society for the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty. Like other secret societies, of which there are many organized for the same purpose, it has had a checkered history. The war between Japan and China, and the aggressions upon the part of France, Germany, and Russia, have given during the last two years a pretext for active operations. Attacks were made upon native converts, missionaries, and foreigners, incident to which much property was destroyed, not so much on account of their anti-foreign feeling, as that it was their purpose to bring the Manchu officials into collision with European powers. They proposed to take advantage of the conflict that might ensue, or the weakness of the Chinese Government, and secure its overthrow. The Empress Dowager, with remarkable astuteness, promulgated edicts against the Boxers publicly, and ensnared their protection privately, by degrading the military officers who resisted their progress. In this way affairs have reached a crisis in which all parties have become inextricably involved.

IV.—CONCESSIONS TO THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Less than a year ago the representatives of the Roman Church, backed by the French Government, secured concessions from the Imperial Government through the Tsungli Yamen, or Foreign Office, which permitted certain orders of ecclesiastical officials to have audience with corresponding grades of Chinese officials. In this manner an archbishop, bishop and priest had the right of an audience beginning with the Viceroy, and going down the line of officials, before whom all local issues involving questions of land, building, excessive taxation, and persecution might be discussed and settled. This gave rise, while I was in China last Autumn, to serious differences in a number of localities, and, it was evident, would produce even more serious trouble later on.

The attention of the secretaries of our Board was called by the Secretary of State to possible advantages accruing from such an arrangement. He pointed out the fact that under the "Favored Nation Clause" we were entitled to like privileges. We respectfully declined on the score of our right to all the privileges within the limits of American citizenship, and expressing our desire to claim nothing more. Affairs which involve the laws and customs of the country are best settled by the State, and do not come within the purview of the Church.

V.—FORCING OUR RELIGION UPON THE CHINESE.

Reference has been made to the antagonism aroused by forcing a foreign religion upon the Chinese. Those best acquainted with the Chinese know that religious apathy and indifference have been the most difficult factors missionaries have had to deal with. Confucianism is a cult, and not a religion. Buddhism has been relegated to the women and children. Taoism has degenerated to a system of worship of evil spirits, which, in the hands of a mercenary priesthood, has been used to strengthen a hold upon the people through witch-craft and fortune-telling. Ancestral worship is the only element of religious life which has any hold upon the nation.

Missionaries have always avoided a forcible propagandism. They have resorted to moral suasion, and a humanitarian policy which finds its best expression in medical missions. They have made friends by the hundreds among the heathen who have not accepted their doctrines. It is both unfair and unjust to attribute a rebellion, due most largely to political conditions, to the efforts of the self-denying and devoted men and women, who have for years been the exponents of a meek and Christ-like spirit.

Hoping these statements will prove satisfactory, I remain,

Yours cordially,
W. R. LAMBUTH.

Nashville, Tenn., July 4, 1900.

FIRST CHURCH, SHREVEPORT, LA.

We are moving along slowly, but surely. Have had about sixty added to the membership since Conference; have raised $1,600 to pay off a debt, raised $1,800 to purchase parsonage lots, and have a fair prospect for building the house before Conference time. We have $850 on the Twentieth Century Educational Fund, and the general collections well under way. The pastor has been granted a month's vacation, which he will enjoy after two weeks' sickness, for especially enjoyable is a trip to the cool places in Kentucky and the East Tennessee mountains. Our prayer is for a deeper spiritual life, and we trust that God may visit us with a gracious outpouring before the coming together at Baton Rouge.

W. T. BOLLING.

NOTES.

Rev. J. P. McFerrin, D. D., of Birmingham, will attend the Sessions Camp Meeting.

Dr. Gross Alexander, of Vanderbilt University, has been engaged to deliver a course of lectures at Chautauqua, N. Y., during the present month.

We are in receipt of a card from Rev. Jas. W. Martin, who is stationed at Hanford, Col., in which he mentions that his health has not improved since he transferred from the Louisiana Conference last year. He expects to spend the Summer in the mountains. His address during the heated term will be Greenville, Cal.

In a brief note to the editor "Gilderoy" says: "I have been sick for three weeks; part of the time very ill. I am up now, but flimsy to the last degree. The preachers all pretty well, and all hard at work. What floods of rain we have had! Crop prospects the poorest I ever saw. This tells sadly on the finances."

Presiding Elder Guice, of the Meridian district, informs us that the vacancy at Enterprise and Stonewall caused by the election of Rev. M. L. Burton to the vice-presidency of Whitworth College, has been filled by the appointment to that charge of Rev. C. W. Crisler, who has been transferred to the Mississippi Conference.

Says Bishop Keener: "The NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE was the official journal of the General Conference of 1866. After the General Conference of 1854, the Mississippi Conference became one of its publishers. During the war it became seriously involved in debt, and was relieved by a contribution of $2,200 from the Louisiana Conference Ministerial Aid Society."

We are in receipt of a brief note from Presiding Elder J. D. Harper, of the Alexandria district, in which he says: "My district is in hopeful condition. Preachers are all at their posts, and hard at work—a band of true and consecrated men laboring earnestly for the salvation of souls. Some have had gracious revivals, and all are making and planning for large success. Crops not very good. Health good."

Bro. John L. Sutton, president of the Centenary College Y. M. C. A., requests us to say to the ADVOCATE readers that if any of them have a relative or friend who is expecting to attend Centenary this Fall, they will confer a great favor upon him by dropping him a letter or card giving the student's name and address, his standing as a Christian, and the name of the church to which he belongs, in case he is a church member. Bro. Sutton's address is Allenton, La.

At De Pauw University, Commencement Day was a fitting climax of the closing exercises. The university oration was delivered by Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, of Jackson, Miss.—a powerful address on "Education and Patriotism;" just such an address as is an inspiration to any young man or young woman trying to reach after the best things; an address of noble ideas, with classic diction, and most appropriate and impressive presentation.—Western Christian Advocate.

The following anent the Shreveport District Conference is from the Benton, La., correspondent of the Shreveport Times: "The District Conference closed its labors on Saturday afternoon. It was a most delightful session of that body, and the people of Benton are delighted that it was held among them. We had a great deal of good preaching during the time, but the great sermon of the occasion was preached on Sunday morning by that veteran of the cross, the Rev. R. J. Harp. The attentive hearers at that service will long remember the words of wisdom that fell from the lips of that venerable man, whose life and ministry were a power in Louisiana in the early days. Blessings on the old soldier who has led the church to victory in so many conflicts."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. THOS H. DOUSEY, Arcola, Miss., EDITOR.

Our League at Canton is a real inspiration and help to the pastor. They have not only furnished the regular church choir with a full chorus of voices, donated $100 cash money for repairing the parsonage, and increased attendance upon public worship among the young, but otherwise in ministrations to the sick, and looking after strangers, they have made themselves felt among us. I was so much impressed with the program rendered at the last devotional meeting that I am constrained to send it to you, hoping it will be helpful to other Leagues.

REV. H. R. SINGLETON, Ruston, La. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

All aboard!

Are you going to Atlanta?

There will never be another First Southern League Conference. You can not afford to miss this one.

There is no comparison between this and any other trip offered Leaguers this year. Low rates, best speakers, more attractions for Leaguers—Southern Leaguers—than any other place on earth this month.

The Executive Committee wants 800 delegates from Louisiana and Mississippi. If they get them, Mississippi will probably have to furnish 700 of them. But let Louisiana Leaguers who can go, do so. We ought to feel a great deal of pride in having our State well represented.

Arcadia district will send at least twenty-five delegates, we think. Our efficient State secretary and several of the district officers will be in the party. It goes without saying the editor will be there.

The Queen and Crescent Route has made the following proposition, which has been accepted, for the North Louisiana Leaguers: A special car will be attached to the regular train which leaves Shreveport at 9:20, July 24. It arrives there at 11:15 A. M., July 25; returning, leaves Atlanta, July 30, at 3:15 P. M. Round-trip fare from Shreveport, $19 40; Arcadia, $17.90; Ruston, $17.40; Monroe, $16.50; Delhi, $15.40, and Vicksburg, $13.75. We hope all who can join this party will send their names to Rev. H. R. Singleton, Ruston, La., by July 15, or the twentieth, at the latest. Sleeping-car accommodations can be had for $2 each way. Most of the party will take lunch for the journey. We cordially invite all Leaguers, whether in the State or not, to join this party. If any of the Leaguers have friends who want to make the journey, their tickets will cost the same; but we can not secure the low rate of $1 per day for their board in Atlanta. Rev. Jno. F. Foster will have charge of arrangements for Leaguers from South Louisiana.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of Louisiana:

You will receive a copy of the Tri-State Epworth League pamphlet. Please announce this meeting to your League, or young people, and urge them to attend—Aug. 1-9, Seashore Camp Ground, Miss.

NOTICE.

The Madison Circuit Sunday-school and Epworth League Institute will be held this year at Pearl River Church, five miles east of Madison, Miss., Aug. 8 and 9. On the second day there will be an educational rally and the unveiling of the Lambuth mounment. Drs. W. R. Lambuth and A. F. Watkins will be present. In connection with the Institute a competitive examination will be held, and a prize given to the pupil under seventeen years old who writes the best answers to twenty questions on the miracles of Jesus.

FROM SHREVEPORT, LA.

The Shreveport District Conference, held in Benton, La., was a most delightful occasion. The presence with us for two days of Bishop Galloway was decidedly helpful. He proved himself at all points of church interest a tower of strength, and easily raised $221 of Twentieth Century Fund after his eloquent address on Friday night. The pastor, the Rev. J. Marshall Brown, will find little difficulty in increasing the amount to $275 or $300. He has only two churches on his work, the other, Alden Bridge, being five miles above Benton, and both of them on the Cotton Belt railroad. His entire membership is about fifty.

Sunday was a grand day, beginning with a live love-feast, led by Rev. Thos. S. Rundle. At 11 A. M., Rev. Robt. J. Harp discoursed to the edification of all, and was followed by Rev. J. S. Sanders in an exhortation of power. At 3 P. M., the Missionary Rally was ably conducted by Rev. J. Bloss Williams, a number of other brethren also taking a hand in the speaking. The results of that rally will be felt throughout the district. At night, the Rev. Robert P. Howell preached on regeneration, and the day was closed with a profitable altar service. Doubtless, Rev. Wm. G. Evans, our secretary, will give the ADVOCATE full account of the Conference proper, and I need only state that not one thing occurred to mar the perfect harmony and sweet fellowship that reigned throughout. The royal hospitality of the people of Benton will not be forgotten. We greatly missed Bro. Sheppard and the other brethren who could not be with us.

The Sunday-School Missionary Society.

The General Conference has wisely directed that all our Sunday-schools shall be organized into missionary societies. This being true, no pastors or superintendents ever had a better opportunity for making a missionary church. Let every Sunday-school that has not done so pass a resolution that it shall be a missionary society, with the officers of the school as officers of the society, and begin at once to devote the collection of one Sunday in each month to missions, and give information on the following topics that have been agreed upon by the Sunday-school Editor and the Secretaries of the Board of Missions:

For July, The Open Door in China.

For August, Miss Laura Haygood

For September, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Lambuth.

For October, The Twentieth Century Thank-offering.

For November, The Twentieth Century Fund in Brazil.

For December, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Yun, of Korea.

The third Sunday in October is "Rally Day," and programs on the subject, "The Twentieth Century Thank-offering," will be sent free on application.

The missionary exercises are not to interfere with the regular lesson study except on "Rally Day" in October.

Children's Day in Mississippi Conference.

DEAR BRETHREN: Let me urge you to forward your Children's Day money at once to Rev. J. W. Crisler, at Woodville, Miss. The printer is now at work on the Sunday-school Year Book, and if you want your charge credited with your Children's Day collection in the annual report to be published in the Year Book, your report must reach Bro. Crisler not later than the last day of July. We would like to make as good a showing as possible in our report, and hope that every brother who has any money for the Board will send it in at once. In making your reports, give the entire amount for your charge, and state what district you are in.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Columbus District:

I have been appointed by Bro. Geo. J. Leftwich, chairman of the Sunday-school Board, supervisor of the Sunday-schools of said district.

It is our aim to put a Sunday school in every congregation, a "qualified" superintendent in every school, and a trained and consecrated teacher for every class. Then, also, I want to encourage every superintendent and teacher to take the Sunday-school Magazine, little people to read Children's Visitor, in schools where there are not such systematic methods. I would like to introduce the teachers' weekly meetings for planning and preparation of the lesson, the weekly collection, best method of keeping our records. Then, lastly, I want to place libraries in as many schools as possible.

Dear brethren, I ask that you help in every way you can in this work.

I shall visit every circuit in this district some time during the Summer. If you need me on any special occasion, I would gladly come.

I hope pastors will organize Sunday-schools, and have them in good running order, so I can make a flourishing report on the Sunday-school work. I want to place the Sunday-schools upon such "up-to-date" systems until they will run the year round.

A Great College for Young Ladies.

We call attention to the advertisement of the Wesleyan Female College at Macon, Ga., in this issue of this paper. The Wesleyan has the honor of being the oldest Female College in the world, and it is said that, in the entire South, there are only two other Colleges for girls whose courses of study are as high as those at the Wesleyan.

Its Music, Art and Elocution Department are also of the very highest order.

During the past year the College was crowded to its utmost capacity with students from all over the United States, and from some of the islands of the sea; and the President, Dr. J. W. Roberts, informs us that, among them all, there was not a single case of protracted sickness. The climate of Macon is delightful, and the location of the College is proverbially healthy.

The many thousands of former Wesleyan students, now scattered round the world, will rejoice at the success of their noble old Alma Mater. There is no better place to send a girl.

A WOMAN TO THE RESCUE.

Often the world has thrilled at the story of that wonderful heroine, Grace Darling, whose strong hands and plucky spirit rescued so many perishing souls from watery graves. But there are hundreds of other heroines that, the world knows nothing about. Women in every-day life carry the natural burdens of wifehood and motherhood, added to all the cares of a busy housekeeper, with a courage and cheerfulness that Grace Darling herself might admire. They comfort their husbands in times of trouble and sickness; nurse and watch over their children, and in fact rescue the whole family from a sea of difficulties, which otherwise would overwhelm them. Such a wife and mother, though she has no gold medals to show for it, is in the true sense of the word the noblest kind of a heroine.

Many women have within them the spirit of heroism without the physical capacity to carry it out. They long to be a comfort and help to their husbands and children but are constantly weighed down by some weakness or disease which saps their vital forces, leaving them wretched and powerless to fulfill their highest ambition.

"I was hardly out of school when I married" said a handsome young Brooklyn woman to an acquaintance. "I had been studying hard, I was full of ambition,—I wanted to be accomplished. I wanted to be a musician, a linguist and a society woman all at once. Then I fell in love and became a wife and mother.

"My mistake was I tried to accomplish too much and didn't take care of my health and I broke down. I might have been saved world's of suffering if I had been more careful and used a little common sense. I hated to tell my mother how miserable I felt before I married." I thought she would just pooh pooh at me. I think mothers understand more about such troubles now-a-days than they used to. I would never allow a daughter of mine to marry, being no stronger than I was then.

"My husband was so kind and considerate I didn't want to be complaining all the time. He insisted on the doctor coming to see me—a real good old doctor too. He gave me medicine for my digestion and my headache and something to help my heart action. I somehow could not bear to tell him what the real trouble was. I knew he would insist on an examination and I dreaded it so.

"My married sister told me I ought to write to Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, but felt so guilty to do that without telling my husband. But she wrote for me and received a kind, sensible letter telling me how to give myself simple treatment at home. This helped me; and then she got me three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and I began to take it. Pretty soon my husband said 'something is doing you good sure; You're ever so much stronger and brighter.' Then I had to tell him everything.

"First he frowned a little and shook his head; then he just laughed and said 'well the proof of the pudding is in the eating! If this little woman is made well and strong by anybody's 'Prescription' no matter what his name is, God bless him, whether he lives in Buffalo or right next door.' And I was made perfectly strong and well by this treatment, as I never had been before in my life."

This is a true experience; it is one of thousands which shows that a physician like Dr. Pierce who has devoted a life-time of special practice to treating ailments peculiar to women can prescribe for them by mail just as effectively as if the patient was in his office, and a thousand times more effectively than the average doctor whose attention is merely given to general practice.

The above is not a fairy story. It is not the story of one person. It is the story of thousands of women. It is a composite picture in which one can trace face behind face, lined with suffering, channeled by tears. It is a story as true as the parable of the Prodigal Son, which was not the story of one young man but the story of the type which repeats itself generation after generation and is as common to Europe as to Asia, to Africa as to America.

Is it your story? Your story either in whole or in part? There's hope for you. There's help for you. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has cured so many cases where life was a daily burden under which the weak and weary body staggered on to the grave, that it can be recommended with the utmost assurance in every case of female disorder.

A cure rarely fails to result from the conscientious use of the "Favorite Prescription." Ulceration and inflammation, irregularities, displacements, and uterine disorders in general, all yield quickly to the action of this real and radical remedy. As the disease is healed the symptoms pass away: pain in the side, difficult breathing, floating specks before the eyes, nausea, weariness and melancholy. The appetite returns, the blood is vitalized, and life which was heretofore a mere existence becomes a hearty, happy condition.

THE UNELECTED INFANT.

And wandered through the darkness along the shores of death,
Until the gates of heaven, agleam with pearls, it spied,
And ran to them and clung there, and would not be denied—
Tho' still from earth rose mutterings: "You can not enter in;
Depart into Gehenna, you child of wrath and sin."

At last the gates were opened; a man with features mild
Stooped down and raised the weeping and Unelected Child.
Immortal light thrilled softly down the avenues of bliss,
As on the infant's forehead the spirit placed a kiss.
"Who are you, thus to hallow my unelected brow?"
"Dear child, my name was Calvin, but I see things better now."

—Unidentified Exchange.

"SOMEBODY FORGETS."

A little boy, living in the most poverty-stricken section of a great city, found his way into a mission Sabbath-school, and became a Christian. One day not long after some one tried to shake the child's faith by asking him some puzzling questions. "If God really loves you, why doesn't he take better care of you? Why doesn't he tell somebody to send you a pair of shoes, or else coal enough so that you can keep warm this Winter?"

The boy thought a moment and then said, as the tears rushed to his eyes, "I guess he does tell somebody, and somebody forgets."

The saddest thing about the answer is its truth. God is not unmindful of his little ones. Whether they are in want of fire or food or advice or sympathy, he calls us to supply the things that are needed. He tells us that every act of kindness or helpfulness done to the least or lowest of his creatures, he will count as done to him. But not all of his purposes are carried out; often because we choose our own pleasure rather than his will, often because somebody forgets.

Somebody forgets! That is one of the reasons for the pinched faces we see sometimes, and which haunt us for days after, for half-clad, shivering bodies, and for cheerless homes. That is one of the reasons why there are children in this dear land of ours who have never heard Christ's name except in curses. It is the explanation for more than half the sin and sorrow of this world. Is it not high time for each of us to ask the question, "Am I among those who forget?"—Selected.

GOES UP IN SMOKE.

And this man with a cloud of smoke about him is Mr. Moderate Smoker. He tells us that he only smokes three five-cent cigars a day—that is quite temperate, but not altogether sober, and lack of soberness costs, remember. At the same time Mr. Moderate Smoker informed us that he had cut his church subscription to $10 a year; gave us a harangue on begging churches and big salaried preachers. Let us figure: If Mr. Moderate Smoker will give us the money for his three five-cent cigars a day, we will, in his name, each year give $25 for preacher's salary,

$7.50 for missions,
$5 for Bible school,
$5 for church incidentals, and
$14.50 for sweet charity.

This self-denial on Mr. Moderate Smoker's part will not rob him of anything that makes his taste more acute, his breath sweeter, his habits cleaner, or his health better, and it will relieve his mind of the worry incidental to church collections.—Centralia Journal.

HE WAS IN HEAVEN.

This incident, related by the Family Friend, is another reminder that our conduct has more to do with our happiness or sorrow than our environment.

A minister one day preached on heaven. Next morning he met one of his wealthy members, who stopped the preacher and said:

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. On injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.,
DR. HATHAWAY & CO.,
420 B. Main St., Cleveland Block, MEMPHIS, TENN.

"Pastor, you preached a good sermon about heaven, but you never told where heaven is."

"Ah!" said the pastor, "I am glad of an opportunity this morning. I have just come from the hill-top yonder. In that cottage there is a member of your church. She is ill in bed with a fever; her two little children are ill in the other bed; and she has not got a bit of coal, nor a stick of wood, nor flour, nor sugar, nor any bread.

"If you will go down town and buy five shillings' worth of things and send them up to her, and then go up there and say, 'My sister, I have brought you these provisions in the name of our Lord and Savior;' then ask for a Bible and read the twenty-third Psalm, and then get down on your knees and pray—if you don't see heaven before you get through, I'll pay the bill."

The next morning he said, "Pastor, I saw heaven, and spent fifteen minutes in heaven."

IT TAKES A WOMAN TO MAKE A HOME.

A Chinese proverb says: "A hundred men may make an encampment, but it takes a woman to make a home." It is she who builds and consecrates that most precious spot on this side of heaven, which we express in the sweet word "home." Not walls or furniture or windows or curtains, but that nameless and ineffable charm which glorifies the lowliest hut, which fills with heaven's own radiance the humblest cottage, and without which the palace, floored with marble and glowing with wealth and luxury, is but a decorated prison. At home you are beloved; you are understood; there your errors will ever meet with gentlest forgiveness; there your troubles will be smoothed away; there you may unburden your soul, fearless of harsh, unsympathetic ears; and there you may be entirely and joyfully yourself. What ambition can be more sacred, what thought more sweet, to a true woman than to be the ministering angel of this sacred spot?—Young Woman.

USELESS WASTING OF STRENGTH.

If women only knew it, they waste a great deal of strength by undue expenditure of emotion on small occasions. Part of the training of our young girls should be along lines of self-repression, in the way of the quiet manner, the restrained speech, the tranquil expression of face, and the reposeful carriage of the body. A young husband, accustomed to the calm gentleness of a mother who might easily have been mistaken for a friend, so silent and dignified was her fortitude in the presence of disasters, so equal was she to every emergency, was shocked and alarmed, not long ago, to find his idolized wife almost thrown into convulsions by a household catastrophe of some sort—something not more dreadful than the breaking of a cherished bit of china. The girl wife came of a family whose custom it was to express themselves volubly, and to fly into frantic states of mind when there was apparently little reason for vehemence.

Apart from the lack of good taste here displayed, women often wear themselves out by too lavish a display of feeling. One may feel acutely without tearing passion to tatters, and it would be wise for mothers to inculcate on growing children a wholesome self-restraint.—The Presbyterian.

VICTORY OF TEMPERANCE.

While much might be said as to the propriety or impropriety of men engaging in a six-day bicycle race, it is interesting to note, in connection with such an event recently held in New York City, the habits of the racers and their relative powers of endurance. A more severe test of physical strength can hardly be conceived. It is one which requires every nerve and muscle to be in perfect condition, and the general constitution to be almost flawless. The race was won by Charles W. Miller, of Chicago, who rode 2,007 miles in six days and nights, having in that time but little over nine hours of sleep. Miller is a total abstainer, does not use tobacco, and during the race subsisted chiefly upon fruits, grains, milk, and beef extract—meat and vegetables being tabooed. He came out of the race in excellent condition, while the man whom he had considered his strongest opponent, a Swiss rider who drank wine freely, dropped out at the end of the fourth day. Waller, who took second place, is also an abstainer. A more forcible demonstration of the value of plain living as a sine qua non for physical endurance as well as for "high thinking," and the utter futility of alcoholic stimulants to "brace a man up," will hardly be needed by the athletic fraternity or anybody else.—Union Signal.

REMEMBER GOD'S TELESCOPE.

One day the astronomer Mitchell was engaged in making some observations on the sun. As it descended towards the horizon, just as it was setting, there came into the rays of the great telescope the top of a hill seven miles away. On the top of that hill grew a large number of apple trees, and on one of them were two boys stealing apples.

One was getting the apples, and the other was watching to make sure nobody saw them, feeling certain that they were not discovered. But there sat Professor Mitchell, seven miles away, with the great eye of his telescope directed fully upon them, seeing every movement they made as plainly as if he had been under the tree with them.

So it is with men. Because they do not see the eye which watches them with a sleepless vigilance, they think they are not seen. But the eye of God is upon them, and not one action can be concealed.

If man can penetrate, with the searching eye which science constructs for his use, the wide realm of the material heavens, shall not he who sitteth upon the circuit be able to know all that transpires upon the earth which he has made?—Exchange.

Recently a very suggestive conversation was overheard on a street car in this city. A young man sat down beside an acquaintance and began to bewail the fact that he had just lost his position. The latter, who was evidently familiar with all the circumstances in the case, after listening impatiently for a while to this tale of woe, finally said in a tone that suited the words: "It serves you just right. You knew well enough how Mr. —— felt about saloons, and yet you persisted in going to them. You have nobody but yourself to blame for your discharge." A long and eloquent temperance address could hardly have been more impressive than this incident, which is a forcible illustration of the silent, but very powerful influence that is operating in the business world for the overthrow of the saloon. Employers may not have very much to say on the subject of temperance, but they are not indifferent to their own interests, and they are getting less disposed from year to year to retain in their service those whose personal habits tend to lessen their working capacity or trustworthiness. Any young man who is laboring under the impression that he is at liberty to do pretty much as he pleases after working hours, is, unless, of course, he pleases to do right, liable to have a rude awakening.—Central Advocate.

A FRAGRANT LIFE.

That was a beautiful expression that was used regarding a young Christian lady, who recently went to the heavenly home, "Wherever she went lovely flowers sprang up in her path, and the air was sweeter when she had passed by." Such a tribute is far more precious than any mere eulogy. They describe in brief a pure and amiable Christian life that has been spent for others. Such a ministry of goodness is within the reach of every Christian. It requires no brilliant gifts, no large wealth. It is a ministry which the plainest, lowliest, and poorest may fulfill. Then its influence is simply incalculable.—Selected.

Expensive wife makes pensive husband. When the draper's bill drains his pocket, the poor man thinks more than he dares to say. The arithmetic of a good wife is very different. She adds to his happiness, subtracts from his cares, multiplies his joys, divides his sorrows, and practices reduction in the expenditures of his household.—Spurgeon.

Excursions

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

CLARK—Rev. THOMPSON C. CLARK, L. E., was born in Tuscaloosa county, Ala., July 16, 1816. He moved to Mississippi in the year 1840; professed religion at the age of twenty years, and united with the Presbyterian Church. How long he remained a member of the Presbyterian Church, I am unable to state; but under the preaching of Rev. D. M. Wiggins, of blessed memory, he was converted to the Arminian doctrine of the atonement, and united with the M. E. Church, South, and was licensed to preach at Wesleyana, in Rankin county, in October, 1857. Many years ago he was ordained a local deacon, and afterward a local elder. The time and place of his ordination can not be ascertained, as the papers were destroyed in the burning of his house, about a year previous to his death.

Bro. Clark was one of the humblest and purest-spirited men I ever knew. He lived near the very feet of Jesus. He was devoted to the church, and in the days of his strength was very active and useful as a preacher of righteousness. His services were especially in demand for revival meetings, in which he was very successful. In his declining years, although often too feeble to preach much, yet continued to do such work as he was able to do, and often said that his desire to preach was as great as ever. He loved the songs of Zion, especially those old songs which have been made more precious by age, such as, "How firm a foundation!" and, "Jesus, lover of my soul."

July 16, 1840, Bro. Clark was married to Mary Y. Crawford, with whom he lived happily until Dec. 2, 1897, when God took her. Only a little more than two years did the faithful husband linger behind. At the home of his son, at Cato, Rankin county, Miss., Feb. 19, 1900, this veteran soldier of Christ "fell on sleep," leaving the assurance behind that all was well. Five children are left behind, but they mourn not as those who are without hope, for we all look forward to a happy meeting some sweet day."

The following was adopted by the second Quarterly Conference of Shiloh charge, Mississippi Conference:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in unerring wisdom, to take unto himself the spirit of our lamented brother, Rev. T. C. Clark, L. E., who was for many years an honored member of this body; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of Union circuit, Mississippi Conference, in session at Shiloh Church, April 30, 1900, that we hereby express our heartfelt sorrow, recognizing that in the death of Bro. Clark we have lost a faithful and earnest minister of the gospel, whose life and labors for near half a century were a constant benediction to the church which he loved and delighted to serve. The country has lost a patriotic citizen, and his family a loving and tender father and grandfather and great-grandfather.

Resolved, That to the bereaved relatives we extend our heartfelt condolence, and pray that God may comfort them and guide them to that place of happy meeting, and that with them we rejoice in the precious legacy he has left in them, and pledge ourselves ever to revere his memory, and to strive to emulate his virtues.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed brother, and a copy sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

P. D. HARDIN.

WILKINSON—JOHN COFFEE WILKINSON was born in Jefferson county, Miss., and died April 1900, where he lived a long and consistent life. He loved the Methodist Church, which he joined in 1854, living by her doctrines and usages for sixty-six years. He was well known to the writer for many years as a faithful, modest, earnest servant of the Lord. He was a constant and interested Sunday-school worker, and for many years the recording steward of the Quarterly Conference, which he faithfully attended. The church will miss him. His home was ever a hospitable resting-place for the tired itinerants. He was twice married. Both of his Christian wives preceded him to the good world. He leaves one son and two daughters and grandchildren to follow him to heaven. He was in the Confederate army; was a faithful soldier for his country, and returned home at his close still a faithful Christian. He possessed a very sympathetic heart, often visiting the sick and comforting them; always ready to pray when called on. The funeral services were attended by this brother and Rev. Dr. C. W. Grafton. His remains were buried in the cemetery at Union Church, Miss., in the presence of a large number of sorrowing friends.

SHORT—MONROE P. SHORT was born Feb. 5, 1860; was married to Miss Clemmie Tucker, Dec. 22, 1880; joined the M. E. Church, South, at McGee's Chapel Church, near Como, Miss., in August, 1895, under the ministry of Rev. G. H. Lipscomb, and died at his home, Melrose, Miss., April 5, 1900.

These dates include many events in a useful life of forty years and two months, and which, to us, seems all too short, as our friend and brother was so strong and active, and at point of greatest usefulness in life, and because disease snatched him away so suddenly. The liberal testimony of numerous citizens, a multitude of friends, and many Christians, given in private conversation, in general discussion, and in public print in home paper, open a wide sphere in which many desirable traits, noble deeds, and wise counsel attended his life. Indeed, his life is seen to exhibit much wealth of character, which we had not stopped to consider so fully until he was removed from us. His schoolmates speak appreciatingly, and business men with whom he had dealings wherein true principles were shown, give their hearty appreciation in no uncertain terms. The continued expressions of felt sorrow given everywhere tell how extensively he was known and loved. As a citizen, he was upright; as a friend, true to the last; as a Christian, a lover of his church, its ministry and services. Although reserved and rarely demonstrative, the writer remembers well the several occasions when the emotions expressed themselves, and especially his testimony to conscious knowledge of pardon of sin and acceptance with God. After burial service at his home in the presence of weeping relatives, friends, and neighbors, we bore his remains to Friendship Cemetery, where we laid him down to rest; and while our tears would break forth and our hearts would bleed, we looked by faith in God to the day of reunion, and led away his heart-broken companion, sustaining her, as best we could, with our sympathy, assurances of God's love, and prayers for sustaining grace to enable her to walk the lonely way of life to the city of eternal joys and place where partings are o'er.

COULTER—D. B. COULTER was born March 18, 1851; was married to Miss Martha E. Hunt, Nov. 11, 1874; joined the M. E. Church, South, some time during the year 1879, and died at his home in Water Valley, Miss., at 10 A. M., May 7, 1900.

Bro. Coulter leaves a wife and three sons and one daughter to mourn the shadow of this great sorrow; a fourth son, little James, had preceded his father to the land of light.

Bro. Coulter was not a nominal Christian; he bore the fruits of one acquainted with God. Soon after connecting himself with the Methodist Church he was elected one of the stewards of his circuit, and in this office he continued to work faithfully until the last. Most of his life was spent in the country on his plantation. Under many difficulties he, as superintendent, endeavored to keep his country Sunday-school going. As an evidence of even temper and fair dealing, some of his old plantation negroes remained with him for twenty years, and with bowed heads and tearful eyes followed him to the grave. As husband and father, he was true, faithful, and kind. "A good man has fallen in our midst," has been the universal expression of all I have heard speak of the death of Bro. Coulter. From Wood Street Church he was buried after services conducted by the pastor, assisted by Bros. W. J. O'Bryant and R. O. Brown. The Woodmen of the World, of which order he was a member, then took charge, and laid him away in Water Valley Cemetery with marks of highest appreciation.

TABOR—At 11:30 A. M., on the thirty-first of March, 1900, Death fanned his wings over the frail form of our precious father, Rev. E. M. Tabor, and bore away his spirit to the paradise of God. He had been an invalid for nearly four years, but bore his sufferings patiently to the end. He learned to love the Savior early in life, and when the summons came he willingly laid aside his earthly tabernacle of flesh to put on robes of immortality. To us the blow was a heavy one, but we realize that "the Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord." We bow and kiss the chastening rod of a tender Father's hand, knowing "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth."

Precious one, thou art not dead, but gone on before, where thou art awaiting the coming of thy dear ones, who must remain here a little while longer to do the Father's will.

Farewell, papa, till we meet beyond the mystic river, where, 'neath the shade of the tree of life, our voices shall mingle in grand anthems of praise in that beautiful city whose builder and maker is God.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

29th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 11, SEPT. AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 7 to 21, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The services during camp meeting are in charge of the presiding elders of the New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

J. B. LEFTWICH, President, Mobile, Ala.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Three thousand more Japanese troops have landed at Taku.

Two more French cruisers have been ordered to Chinese waters.

The "Oregon" was floated on June 5. She goes to Kure to dock for repairs.

The losses of the allied forces in China up to June 29 are placed at 600.

Russia is said to have agreed to give Japan a free hand to apply military force in China.

The mission buildings at Monkren have been burned and many of the Christians killed.

All the missionaries in China of the Southern Presbyterian Church are now safe at Shanghai.

It is reported that 5000 Chinese, Roman Catholic converts, have been massacred at Peking.

Emperor William of Germany has offered a reward for the rescue of any foreigner from Peking.

A Shanghai cable says the arrival of 900 Japanese at Tien Tsin prevented the capture of the town.

All of the Chinese Viceroys of the Yang Tse Kiang region have determined to preserve the peace.

It is reported that Gen. Nieh Li Chang is advancing for an attack on Tien Tsin with 90,000 troops.

United States Consul General Goodnow at Shanghai reports that the insurrectionary movement is spreading.

News from Shanghai, under date of July 4, is to the effect that the British legation at Peking was still safe.

In response to cabled inquiries regarding the situation at Peking, a reply from Shanghai says, "Prepare to hear the worst."

The situation at Chee Foo is reported acute. The American Admiral is preparing for the departure of those under his protection.

The statue of Lafayette, the gift of the American school children to France, was presented to the Republic by Commissioner Peck.

Continuous fighting is reported at Tien Tsin. The foreign settlement there is again surrounded and being bombarded by the Chinese.

The present troubles in China are, it is thought, likely to result in the breaking away of the southern provinces from the empire.

One hundred and forty thousand Chinese troops are stationed between Peking and Tien Tsin opposing the advance of the allied armies.

The Chinese are showing great courage in their battles with the Europeans around Peking, and have men killed by thousands, but return to the attack.

It is officially reported from Shanghai that Emperor Kwang Su committed suicide under compulsion of Prince Tuan, June 19. The Dowager Empress took poison and is now insane from its effects.

The allied troops at Tien Tsin, numbering 12,000 men, have succeeded with difficulty in preventing by strategic measures an assault by the Chinese, whose artillery greatly outnumbers the European guns.

The first election was held on the Fourth of July in Vigan, Island of Luzon, where municipal officials were chosen under Gen. Otis' order for the establishment of municipalities. The day was celebrated in Manila.

McKinley and Roosevelt are the Republican nominees for President and Vice-President of the United States. The Democratic Convention has nominated Bryan and Stevenson as the standard-bearers of Democracy.

Exports of provisions from the United States during the fiscal year about to end exceed those of any previous year. The total will be fully $180 000,000, thus averaging a half million dollars a day, and surpassing the phenomenal record achieved by that record-breaking year, 1899.

The latest advices from Northern China, although still of uncertain dates, nevertheless have produced a more cheerful feeling throughout the civilized world. All these accounts agree in declaring that the Ministers at Peking were alive on July 3, and that two of the legation buildings at least were standing. A still more important bit of information is the report that a powerful faction under Prince Ching, who commands a large force of loyal troops, is opposing Prince Tuan and the "Boxers," and doing everything possible to rescue the Ministers. Prince Ching is a man of great influence, being the head of the Tsung-Li-Yamen, or Chinese Foreign Office, and also a commander of a large section of the troops.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.
They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:
Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Secretery Hay and other officials of the Department of State witness some heart-rending scenes these days, when there is a constant stream of inquirers efter relatives or friends who are in China, who have to be told thet there is no anthentic information. The agony of snspense is hard to bear. The general trend of the news from China has for the last few days been snch as to revive hope of the safety of Americans and other foreigners in Pekin, but there has been nothing definite. The note of instructions sent to all diplomatic representatives of the United States Government last week, to be communiceted to foreign governments, fully defines the attitude of this government towards China. It was made public yesterday, and is substantially what has been sent you in previous letters.

Miss Clara Barton was chosen president of the National Red Cross at the reorganization under the law enacted at the last session of Congress providing for the incorporation of the organizatior, although she expressed a wish to be allowed to retire.

Dr. Edward Wilde, the new minister to the United Statee from the Argentine Repnblic, who was for a long period Argentino Minister to China, has intereeting views on the situation in Chine. In a recent conversation he said: "I believe the nprising, unless speedily checked and with a vigorous hand, will continue to grow nntil the control of Chinese fanaticism will be one of the gravest propositions of Christendom. The most heroic medicine which the powers could administer to China would be to begin to tear down the Chinese wall. That wall is more to the Chinese than simple masonry. It is a symbol. The Chinese believe that within that wall they are secure. They have considered the wall impregnable for centuries, and think it still is. The wall is sacred, and within is hallowed ground, npon which it is dangerons for foreigners to stand. It is difficnlt to explain in English and to Caucasians the significance of the wall to the Chinese, hnt for artillery to shell it, and to blow sections of it into dnst, wonld be a rude awakening to the Chinese masses of the power of the Christian world."

Two grandsons of Li Hnng Chang have been in Washington for several days. These yonng men came to the United States last Winter nnder the charge of Dr. Lambuth, who was born in China of American parents, and who was for years engaged in missionary work, for the pnrpose of preparing to enter Vanderbilt University. They know no more of present conditions in China than other newspaper readers, and that means next to nothing, owing to the contradictory natnre of what is from day to day printed. Of the origin of the tronble, one of these young men said: "The Boxers started as a band of militia, to protect the good and honest people of Shantung, who were subject to attack from numerous robbers, dne to the famines in that province. With that pretext they received the enconragement and aid of the government forces, and were greatly assisted personally by the governor of Shantnng. No doubt later on some shrewd members of the anti-foreign societies recognized the power of this organization, and, joining it, ultimately gained control, and used it for the accomplishment of their own ends, namely: the extermination of the hated foreigner."

The Committee of One Hundred on India famine relief have issned an appeal to the citizens of Washington for contributions, which, it is stated, will be cabled to India as fast as received. Aithongh at this season many of our well-to-do and wealthy citizens are out of town, the contributions are coming in fairly well. The committee is acting in concert with similar committees in New York, Boston, New Haven, Hartford, Baltimore, Indianapolis and Philadelphia's permanent relief committee. Funds contribnted are cahied without expense to the American-Indian relief committee in Bombay.

The resignation of Dr. Charles A. Stakely, who has, for thirteen years, been pastor of the First Baptist Church, to accept a call from the First Baptist Church of Montgomery, Ala., is a distinct loss to Washington's religions and educational interests, in both of which he has been prominent. His work for the church of which he has been pastor has been something wonderful. Besides a gain of more than 200 per cent. in membership, the church has raised $229,606.06, more than was raised in the previous eighty-five years of its history, which, as he said in his address announcing his resignation, "shows the wonderful possibilities of an old church organization that took a notion to renew its youth." Dr. Stakely has also taken an active part in the management of Columbian University. The church to which he has been called is the one in which he was converted and baptized, and which naturally has always been greatly loved by him. The resignation is to take effect Sept. 30, next.

CALIFORNIA LETTER.

Our nation is celebrating another birthday. However, hating the noise made by fire-crackers in the hands of the "kids," all is quiet in our town. Salinas does not celebrate this year, and most of our citizens have gone to neighboring towns to spend the holiday. This leaves me with little pastoral work to do, and I avail myself of the respite to communicate with my friends who read the ADVOCATE.

Our District Conferences were held in March and April. Bishop Duncan presided at all of them. I believe his presidency gave general satisfaction. He has more friends among us than he left last Fall, and a majority are pleased that he has been returned to this episcopal district. He questioned the preachers and delegates as if determined to inform himself fully in regard to every plan of our work. He is evidently favorably impressed with the possibilities of the church in this field. He may hope too much. At any rate, we are justified in counting him a friend to the church in the West.

Upon the whole, the reports were reassuring. There had been a goodly number of conversions and accessions, and finances were better up than we had hoped. Nearly all the preachers were in good spirits. The Bishop dedicated our new church in Fresno. With the aid of the Church Extension Board the pastor, Rev. J. A. Batchelor, had succeeded in liquidating a paralyzing debt. It was he who raised the debt on the Santa Rosa Church last year. He is a young man, and a native son.

Four young men were licensed to preach by the San Francisco District Conference. Three were pupils in the Pacific Methodist College, and one a professor. Two have since received their diplomas, and, I think, intend entering Vanderbilt. They are all promising young men. We must raise up more preachers on the field. The church can not thrive and depend upon transfers. The Los Angeles district also licensed several.

Our State Epworth League Conference was held in Hollister, June 20-24. It was not so largely attended as usual, but was a good Conference. The reports were an improvement upon the past. Several new Leagues had been organized, and there had been considerable increase in membership. Financial reports were also better. The League missionary collection has heretofore been a special. This Conference resolved that it shall hereafter be turned over to the pastor an assessment upon the charge. A minimum assessment of twenty-five cents per capita is levied. It was decided to have no program next year, and to hold a business session in San Francisco the day before the meeting of the International League Conference. Chas. R. Story, a graduate of the Pacific Methodist College and of Stanford University, was elected a delegate to the Southern League Conference in Atlanta, with instructions to urge the Leaguers of the South to be with us in San Francisco next Summer. Bro. Story is a native Californian, and we are not ashamed of him. He would be a credit to any section.

I trust many of our Southern young people will embrace the opportunity to visit California. We have many objects of interest, almost any one of which is worth crossing the continent to see. A few days ago I, for the first time, visited the old historic town of Monterey; also Pacific Grove and Delmonte—all in this county. Pacific Grove is a delightful seaside resort. Many spend the Summer here. Various assemblages make it the place of their annual meetings, including the Chautauqua and California Conference of the M. E. Church. Delmonte Hotel, belonging to the Pacific Improvement Company (really the S. P. R. R. Co.), is a palatial building, in the midst of the most beautiful grounds I ever saw. The grounds contain nearly two hundred acres. It is a natural forest of pine, fir, oak, etc., beautified by the work of the world's best artists. No visitor to the State should miss seeing it. However, the average Leaguer could not afford to tarry long. Such luxurious quarters are necessarily expensive. Those who can efford it will not be in a hurry to leave. It is equally desirable Winter and Summer. Charges are moderate, considering the accommodations. It is the pride of the Southern Pacific.

The majority of our recent transfers are doing well. They are pleased and pleasing others. My neighbor, I. F. Betts, the Alabamian, is a capital fellow, and now seems one of us. Waggener, also from Alabama, has captured Santa Rosa, and made a good impression upon the brethren. Moore, the lawyer preacher from Holston, who is holding the fort at San Francisco, is a superb preacher and a lovable man. Wooten, the young South Carolinian, is doing as well as anyone could do in Oakland. We hope much from him. J. K. P. Dickson, the Missourian, who was stationed at Chico, has become discouraged, and "sent in his resignation." Some will do that, in one way or another. If we had some way of testing men before bringing them out, as Gideon tested his followers, it would be far better for us—and them. If we could just know beforehand who will prove 'fearful and afraid," and also who will play the fool by being too fresh. We, perhaps, suffer equally at the hands of both these classes.

The San Joaquin and Sacramento Valleys, the coast counties, north of San Francisco, have good crops this year. It is difficult to find sufficient help to gather them. In this county, however, and in the southern part of the State, crops of all kinds are almost an entire failure, owing to lack of moisture. The beet crop (though much of the beet land is irrigated) is a failure, and the great Spreckels factory is not likely to open up at all this season, the few beets that may be gathered to be taken to the Watsonville factory.

W. P. ANDREWS.

Salinas, Cal., July 4, 1900.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Conference, held this year at Benton, La., was a most delightful occasion. The machinery ran smoothly, and every feature of the program was carried out to the letter.

The Conference was opened on the afternoon of July 25, with Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer, D. D., presiding elder, in the chair, and Rev. Wm. G. Evans at the secretary's table.

After the routine work was attended to a postal card was read from Rev. Geo. D. Purcell, giving the reason for his absence. It read about as follows: 'Unto us a child is born; unto us a son is given. His name shall be called wonderful." Bro. Purcell came in later, and in reply to the question as to whether the young man was a Methodist or not, he stated that when he left home the young hopeful "was crying for chicken."

With one or two exceptions, the works were shown to be in a very healthy condition. Most of the works hope to pay all their assessments in full.

Leesville is undoubtedly the banner work of the district. The very energetic pastor, Rev. J. M. Alford, started there this year with only 29 members and no house of worship, and now has 110 names enrolled and a beautiful church valued at $16,50; a good Sunday-school and an excellent Epworth League, and finances well up. The Conference conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon the deserving pastor.

Bishop Galloway reached the Conference on Friday, and presided the last two days with his accustomed grace and ease. His talks on the necessity for the reading of our church history—Missions and the Twentieth Century Movement—stirred the hearts of all that were present. His Twentieth Century address on Friday night was fully up to his usual high standard. The collection amounted to $220.

Bros. Roy T. Williams and Jas. A. Jarrett were licensed to preach, and the licenses of Revs. Jno. L. Sutton, N. F. Hoffpauir, E. L. Cargil, R. R. Randle, R. T. Wright, I. S. Few and O. M. Posey were renewed.

Rev. Nelson F. Hoffpauir was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The delegates elected to the Annual Conference are: W. G. Wadley, A. F. Jackson, S. B. McCutchen, and Prof. J. E. Johnson; alternates: Col. A. C. Mitchell and Dr. B. Wise.

Thursday afternoon was devoted to a very profitable Sunday-school Conference, under the direction of Rev. J. E. Denson.

Friday afternoon the Conference engaged in a very profitable discussion of some features of our great Epworth League work, under the leadership of Wm. G. Evans, and on Saturday, Rev. R. P. Howell was the conductor of the Twentieth Century program. Bro. Howell and one other brother made short talks, after which Bishop Galloway laid upon the consciences of those present the necessity of educating the native preachers of our missions on the mission field.

One important feature of the Conference was the preaching services. The Sunday services were specially profitable. On Sunday afternoon Rev. J. B. Williams led the missionary rally, which was a very delightful service.

Leesville was chosen as the place of the next Conference.

The people of Benton "abounded in hospitality." A better place could not have been chosen. Every preacher and layman was sure he had the best home. Bro. Brown and his attractive family are comfortably cared for in one of the best parsonages in the district, and seem to be in favor with the people. He makes a good host.

WM. G. EVANS.

An Appeal to the Pastors and the Church in the Arcadia District.

DEAR BRETHREN: Five more months, and we go to Conference, and as I see it, much remains to be done in this short time. We need and ought to feel that we must have a revival in every charge and at every church. For this end will not every pastor, together with the official members and spiritually minded of the church, labor and pray? A soul-saving revival of religion is the first great need of the church in this district. We may have this if we will deny ourselves some of the comforts we love to indulge in, and work, preach and pray in the unity of the spirit and in the bond of peace.

Second. Our Conference collections ought to (and may God help us to feel!) that they must be paid in full. At this writing (the twelfth of July) we have the promise of full crops of all our produote in this hill country. Price are high, and I am sure that there has not been in the past ten years a time when the church could so easily meet every claim as it can this year. Some of our pastoral charges have already secured all their assessments in cash and good subscription. Will not every other one do that same thing during the protracted meetings?

Third. Will we show our gratitude to God for his signal blessings on Methodism during the past century, and for what the church has done for us, our children, and our country, by subscribing and contributing as liberally as we can to our Twentieth Century Thank-offering? Remember, my brethren, that you and your children will never have another opportunity of placing your names upon the honor roll, to be kept in the archives of the church, and of celebrating the birth of another new century. Before the twenty-first century you and your children will have long been dead, and, I trust, rejoicing with the redeemed of the Lord for evermore. Think of your opportunity of joining in the celebration of the birth of the twentieth century!

Fourth. Our pastors' salaries. They were fixed before everything advanced in price. Only two or three charges in the district raised the pastor's salary above last year. Since these salaries were fixed very near all that pastors and their families live on have advanced about thirty per cent., and unless that much advance in our ministers' salaries for this year over last is paid, there will be humiliation and suffering. Brethren of the stewardship and others, see to it that while you are co-operating with the preacher in raising every other claim, that his own meager salary is paid in full, so his wife and children may not suffer, for many of us will have to move this Winter. As I have no other way to get this letter before the church, I ask pastors to read it to each of their congregations on their next round.

B. T. CREWS, P. E.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

Your regular correspondent furnishes a good supply of news from our Conference, and I add a few items and suggestions just to gratify my desire to write.

Not long ago a minister of a sister church said, "What good has been done in this country outside of Calvinism is not worth mentioning." The fact is, about all the good that has been done in this country is in spite of Calvinism.

The revival season has opened, and many a preacher will suffer. Of all the laborious tasks ever assigned a human being, holding a revival meeting in midsummer is about the hardest. Based on an experience of several years, I offer a few suggestions to the brethren:

1. Have some consecrated man or woman to lead the singing, and sing the songs that have power in them.

2. Don't hold any one service too long. Many a good impression has been frittered away by holding on and wearing out the patience and endurance of the people.

3. Don't try to hold a revival in every congregation this year. The conditions do not warrant us in attempting it. I have seen a brother close a meeting just as everybody became thoroughly interested, and go over to a cold church to repeat the same performance. It is a waste of time and of energy. Some churches will have to do without a protracted service for one year, but they must be taught to do it.

H. T. Cunningham has been sick, but is much better now. J. S. Oakley is getting strong again. "Gilderoy" is very much improved, and the preachers, generally, are in good health.

A question: Is it the observation of the brethren that the church seems cold and dead? What's the matter? What's the remedy? Is this great educational movement bringing spiritual life to the people? Is the church spending as much energy trying to convert souls as she is in doing other things? This is a time of heart-searching.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Corinth District Conference met in Booneville, Miss., June 28, 1900. As there was no Bishop, the presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Young, presided satisfactorily. W. Ira Smith was elected secretary. The pastors were not all present the first day, but were there some time during the session, except Rev. W. G. Burke, who was unavoidably detained at home. The attendance of laymen was not large, owing to the condition of crops.

The first day was devoted mainly to the discussion of the Sunday-school and Epworth League programme, for which the presiding elder had previously prepared.

The reports of the pastors brought out several facts. One was that the financial condition of the district is somewhat better than it was this time last year, but the spiritual condition is not good. Too much neglect of private and family prayer, church literature not well circulated, too much formality and worldliness among church members, etc.; yet there are hopeful signs of a revival.

Bro. Walter Jones, of the Corinth circuit, was licensed to preach. Bro. J. B. Randolph was recommended for deacon's orders and for admission into the traveling connection.

A suitable service was held in memory of Bro. F. A. Whitson, traveling preacher, and Mark Ellington, local.

Time was given the good sisters of the Parsonage and Missionary Societies to hold their meetings, which they did very efficiently.

The following laymen were elected to the Annual Conference: J. B. Saunders, J. B. Randolph, L. P.; H. W. Reese, L. W. Worsham, and L. A. Goudelock and W. R. Ramsey, alternates.

Bro. Bachman was there Thursday and Friday selling books and making speeches, succeeding well in both.

MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS, ATTENTION!

The money pledged by the Mississippi Leagues to the Tri-State Assembly fund is needed now. The time for the Conference, Aug. 1-9, is rapidly approaching, and money is a wonderful factor in making things go. Corinth, Vicksburg, Sardis, Canton and McComb City are the only Leagues having redeemed their pledges up to date. We are much gratified at the prospect for our coming Conference, and trust that every League in Mississippi will be well represented there. Ten of the most delightful and profitable days of my life were spent last Summer in the first session of Tri-State Conference. Do you intend taking a Summer outing? If so, you can find no more ideal spot than the Seashore Camp-Grounds, on the Gulf coast of your own State. By all means, take advantage of this opportunity to enjoy the climate and congenial companionship offered at Seashore Camp Grounds, Aug. 1-9. One thousand descriptive circulars have been sent out in Mississippi, and we trust each person receiving one of these will assist us in advertising this Conference. Remit your pledge money to Miss Margaret E. Bancroft, South Broad St., Mobile, Ala.

BEYOND DARK CLOUDS.

BY MARTHA SHEPARD LIPPINCOTT.

No matter though we can not see
The dawn behind the clouds,
And though at first we're followed not
By fond, approving crowds,
Keep hope, and let us travel on
In paths we know are right;
If we the torch-bearers shall be,
More will behold our light.

So let us still e'er work and pray,
And right will surely win,
Though, ere we reach the haven bright,
Come many days of sin;
But still a brighter day shall dawn,
When we the storms have past,
For sunshine always is beyond,
And clouds can never last

"HOW MAY SPIRITUALITY BE BEST DEVELOPED IN THE LEAGUE?"

(A paper read before the Meridian District Conference at Waynesboro, May 22, 1900, and printed in obedience to a vote of the Conference.)

It is always embarrassing to have to deliver abstract views of things which one has not realized in the concrete; to talk of achievements to which you aspire, but have not accomplished. It is only in obedience to the mandate of our presiding elder that I write of Spiritual Development in the League, for I am free to confess that I have not yet seen my ideal of a spiritual League. Still he is poor indeed whose previous attainments have left him no ideals, who sees no heights beyond. A society or community can be no better, nor worse, than its individual component units. We can not have a godly church, unless the individual members be godly: we can not make a spiritual League of irreligious, unconsecrated units. Therefore, our first thoughts must be directed to the individual, for if we succeed in spiritualizing the unit, the aggregate will be spiritual in consequence.

Perhaps a definition may not be out of place here, since there might possibly be different views and standards of spirituality. It is possible that the "what" may be as important as the "how." The word "spiritual" here is not allied to the French "spirituel," but is exclusively religious in meaning and in use; it belongs solely to the experience of Christian believers, and to a worldly unbeliever it will appear vague and mystical, dreamy and imaginary. There is a vast difference between an essence and its attribute, as there is between a disease and its symptoms; it is possible to describe an attribute, and yet not define the essence of which the attribute is only a manifestation, as it is possible to doctor a symptom and leave the disease unhealed.

Man by his body is linked to earth, and is frequently influenced by earthly things, and yet he is conscious that he is distinct from, and superior to, the earth or the physical—he is spirit. The groundwork of his rational and moral being is similar to God's, who is Spirit; hence man has capacity for God's thoughts and God's ways, and is thus different from everything else in the world. He may be so fettered to the earth, and so influenced by earthly things, as to be separated from God in the character, taste, and tendencies of his soul, and thus be dead to God. He may, perhaps, live a moral life, above reproach, from purely worldly motives and considerations, and yet his morality give no suggestion of spiritual life—i. e., religion. "Moral" is not a Bible term, nor is morality a substitute for spirituality. He may even, by constant drilling and self-discipline, lead a meeting, or deliver an unctuous testimony, or preach an eloquent sermon, and yet never rise above the physical or mental, and never be possessed of spiritual life, the essence of which we speak.

Spirituality is the state of a soul made alive to God by the Holy Ghost; a soul whose faculties are under the control of the Holy Spirit; whose character, taste, and tendencies have become, and are becoming still more, like God's; and all the departments of whose spiritual personality (intellect, affection, will) are influenced by spiritual considerations rather than by earthly things. An earthly, natural mind can not understand spiritual things (John iii, 3); no man can call Jesus Lord, but by the Holy Ghost (I. Cor. xii, 3), and to be unable to discern his divine personality is to be incompetent to deal with the supernatural, or to enjoy fellowship with God. A spiritual man's intellect comes under the power of the divine life, his mentality is quickened, he sees the spiritual, he thinks God's thoughts. Spiritual truth is discerned by the intellect, only as the mind is the instrument of the Holy Spirit.

Spirituality exhibits itself in the affections. Emotion is not religion, but may be one of its manifestations. In the unregenerate, passion and impulse sway the soul, but in the spiritual, the affections are centered on Christ, who, through an all-absorbing passion of love, becomes the ideal, the King of the heart's affections, and, as a new affection always does, this one expels all that is contrary or inferior to it. Christ's truth, intentions, love, become his, and other things diminish in value and cease to attract. And because he loves thus, his love is religion. For love is religion, only as it becomes a motive, urging the will to co-operate with Christ, only as it affects choice, decision, and life. The will is the glory and power of a man, and here as in the citadel, the Holy Spirit must overcome, here as on a throne Jesus must reign.

A spiritual man is one whose intellect approves spiritual truth, whose affections are set upon heavenly things, whose will is fixed for God; and thus all the attributes of his personality tend upwards to God, and concentrate all their energies reverently, lovingly, persistently on Christ and his kingdom.

How, then, can this spiritual character be developed in the League? And notice the question is not of a mere round of motions and exercises to be manufactured by manœuvers and manipulations, but true spirituality—not the attributes, but the essence; not the manifestations, but the life. If our definition be even approximately correct, it is evident that spirituality will manifest itself (must manifest itself) as well on Monday as on Sunday, in Winter as in Summer, in sorrow as in joy, in the social circle as in the assembly of the saints, and in ordinary intellectual pursuits as well as in theological study. Otherwise a partial spirituality is developed, an uncertain, variable quantity, a one-sided affair lacking in symmetry and stability. We do not covet the hybrid character that shouts "Glory" in the meeting and lives ingloriously at other times.

If a spiritual life is one dominated by the Holy Spirit in every direction, a spiritual League must be one in which religious purposes and energies are manifest in every department. Social, charitable, literary capacities may be developed to the abnormal, and yet no life of intrinsic or permanent spiritual value be obtained. The Holy Ghost alone can give to life its crowning glory, and joy, and its ultimate perfection. He alone is the motive power of spiritual life; there is no spiritual life until we are born of the Spirit, no permanence and development except by his indwelling and abiding presence. Therefore the Devotional Department is to be the power-house of the League, the nursery where the seed of the word must be planted, must germinate, and put forth its tender blade, and stalk, and ear, and afterwards, through God's great mercy and grace, the full corn in the ear. Thus we shall have a spiritual League, composed of spiritual members, loving God, and determined to serve him and him alone, denying themselves, and loyally living for others; in their social pleasures seeing him who is invisible, but always a present reality to spiritual men; in their literary pursuits bending their studies to a better equipment for his work, in their charity imitating him who went about doing good.

How is all this to be brought about? There can be only one answer. God alone can bestow spiritual life and spiritual gifts. We must seek to lead the young people, individually and collectively, to the fountain of the water of life. By prayer, teaching, and example, and in every way possible, we must strive for their conversion. Patiently and carefully we must nourish and feed them, never discouraging the weak, nor brow-beating the timid, but gently leading them on, step by step, till they surrender to the Spirit, and the love of God—Christ's love—takes possession of them.

A. T. Bell.

THE SUMMER INSTITUTE AT NASHVILLE.

When the excellent program for the second Summer Institute for young preachers was announced to be held in Wesley Hall, on the Vanderbilt campus, coupled with sacred memories of former school-days and loving friendships formed in Nashville, we at once began to cast about in our mind as to the possibility of enjoying this occasion. By reporting the proceedings for one of our daily papers, transportation was furnished, and we were soon on our way with high expectations for a profitable and a pleasant trip. The ride itself over the L. and N. was delightful, beginning with the beautiful scenery lying along the gulf between Mobile and New Orleans, and passing through some sublime mountain scenery in Alabama and Tennessee. The mountain streams rushing down the rocky gorges, foaming and roaring, would excite the admiration of a very matter-of-fact man. The railroad lay for some miles along the Red Mountain in Alabama, just beyond which I was born, and crossed the mountain at 'Grace's Gap," near my grandfather's old home, where my mother was raised. Of course, we thought of our childhood days, of going to grandmother's and grandfather's, and eating honey and pies; of the little play-house among the large rocks beside the rippling spring branch; of the old water-mill, where we went to watch the water pour over the dam and run down the race. We thought of the little path that was blazed out over a large hill, almost in sight where we walked on our way to our first school, and "my heart was strangely warmed," and we leave memory to play over the fast flying years, while we look up to God in humble gratitude for the gracious providence that has pitied us in our sins, and strengthened and provided for us in many hours of need. We had almost forgotten the rock fences, the wheat fields and four-horse reapers, and the pastures full of well-bred colts, sheep, and cows; but, after traveling a night, and we looked out at daylight to see all these things, the contrast with Louisiana cotton, cane and rice fields was striking indeed. While we furnish them sugar and oranges, they furnish us apples and flour.

The Institute was held last year for the first time. It was planned by the several committees of examination of the Tennessee Conference, that they might bring their classes together for ten days' instruction in the course of study, examinations being held at the close. They were so much encouraged that they determined to carry on the work this year on a larger scale. Accordingly an excellent program was arranged, provision made for board in Wesley Hall at fifty cents per day, and a general invitation was sent out to the preachers of our church to attend. Consequently there were about one hundred in attendance from fifteen different Annual Conferences, the largest attendance, however, being from Tennessee, Alabama, and Arkansas. Dr. Tillett, dean of our theological faculty in Vanderbilt, arranged the program, and was the leading spirit in carrying it out, and it would have been hard indeed to have improved upon it. Bishops Galloway, Duncan, Morrison, and Drs. Mathews, Tigert, Witherspoon, and others, were at their very best on the lecture platform. One delightful evening was spent with Prof. Merrill, the elocution teacher of the Vanderbilt faculty. He spent about one-half of his time talking to the preachers about how to control their voice, to read hymns and Scripture, and of pulpit mannerisms; and the other part of the time was given to delightful readings, embracing both the pathetic and the humorous. Dr. Mathews' address on "The Old Times and the New in Methodism" will be published. Though past seventy years of age, Dr. Tillett called the younger preachers' attention to the fact that he was as hard a student as any of them, and consequently he was growing in acceptability all the time. He admitted that he had been at work on his paper, which he read, for two months. Bishop Fitzgerald was present, and his saintly face and gentle voice was a benediction to all; but, as his lecture on the baptism of the Holy Ghost was the last thing on the program, we missed hearing it. Other good things we missed by having to leave soon, but we feel that the instruction received, and the godly men we met, will make us more Christ-like and, we trust, more useful in his vineyard. This will, doubtless, be a permanent thing at Wesley Hall, and undergraduates will do well to plan a trip there next Summer.

THE OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The thirty-second session of the Opelousas District Conference convened in the M. E. Church, South, at Opelousas, La., at 8 o'clock P. M., on June 26, 1900, with Rev. C. W. Carter, D. D., presiding elder, in the chair. The roll was then called, and out of a membership of eighty there were present during the session only twenty-eight, including both pastors and lay delegates. All of the pastors in the district were present except three. The writer was elected secretary. The routine of business prescribed by our Discipline was called in order by the presiding elder, and the several different interests of the church, as reported by the brethren, are not behind former annual reports, but seem to be in most charges and in some ways a little in advance of former conditions.

The spirituality of our church, as a whole, in this district has by no means reached the ideal New Testament church. There seems to be such a great lack of piety, Christian zeal, and vital godliness among the church members, the wheels of our Zion are so clogged with the busy cares of this old sin-cursed world, that progress in the divine life and spiritual kingdom is made very slowly. Sixty-six members have been received into the church on profession of faith since our last Annual Conference, and the brethren all have their work well in hand, and are looking forward and up, and expecting a gracious outpouring of the Holy Ghost and a bountiful harvest of souls for the Master during the remainder of the year. The Sunday-schools in the district are in a prosperous condition, and are far-reaching in their good influence among all classes and in all conditions.

The preaching was of the usual high order in Methodism—spiritual, heart-searching, and soul-quickening and filling. The missionary address of our brother, R. W. Tucker, deserves special mention for beauty of expression and inspiring encouragement in the proclamation of the glorious old gospel, the glad tidings of good news that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. Dr. LaPrade's address upon the Twentieth Century Movement also deserves special notice, having been listened to with marked and increasing attention and interest until a very late hour of the evening. All felt edified and pleased with the beautifully expressed thoughts and the oratory of the speaker.

Our "beloved" presiding elder must here come in for his share of praise for the kind and able manner in which he dispensed the business of the Conference.

The Conference was spiritual all through its sessions, and was a decided success, and made doubly so by the kind and hospitable entertainment by the good people of Opelousas. The writer desires here to say that he had the best home in Opelousas, and that he is under life-long obligations to Bro. and Sister Skiles for their many acts of kindness, sympathy and Christian love, and entertaining in their lovely home.

On the last afternoon session the Conference passed the following resolution, by a vote of 13 to 12, viz:

Resolved, That the Opelousas District Conference memorialize the Annual Conference to instruct its committee on admissions to report unfavorably on any applicant for admission who uses tobacco, and will not promise to desist from its use.

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and a copy handed to the secretary of the next Annual Conference.

La. Conf.....Mrs. T. P. Fullilove.. ———

My friends of the Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S. have, no doubt, been watching our column in the Advocate for a report from the annual meeting. My excuse for the lateness of my report will, no doubt, be accepted when I say that the Conference met in our midst, and it is one thing to do the secretary's work while you entertain, and quite another thing to do the work while you are entertained.

Mrs. J. S. Parker, district secretary of the Seashore district, conducted the consecration service on Saturday evening. The rain poured, and only a few were brave enough to venture out in it; but those who went proved the blessedness of self-sacrifice.

On Sunday morning Dr. Weems preached a fine sermon, sounding the key-note to success of the work. I would that all the leaders could see the situation as he sees it, and then remedy the failures, and bring the whole female membership of the Southern Church to the help of the Lord in this work. Dr. Weems has labored in a foreign field, where he gave health and strength, as did his accomplished wife, to this cause. He, therefore, understands, and is thoroughly in sympathy with our work.

Sunday afternoon, as is our custom, we held a memorial service. This weak pen can not do that service justice. You who have been in such services know and understand how heaven stoops down to earth. You have felt oblivious to earth and its cares; you have felt as if the dear ones for whom you mourned were just in another room. Surely we felt the presence of our dear Dr. Andrews so truly that one was constrained to look for him in the flesh. Who will say he was not there in spirit? Mrs. J. A. Gulley read a beautiful tribute, and many rose and spoke of the love they bore him, and of the loss sustained, both by Church and State, in his death. Mrs. Reese Price read a tribute to our sister, Sue T. Taylor. Last year Sister Taylor supported a scholarship in Mexico. Her friends will be glad to know that her beloved sons will continue the support of the "Sue Taylor scholarship." "Her good works do follow her." Through some misunderstanding, the memorial to Miss Laura Haygood was not prepared. It was a privilege not lightly esteemed to have with us Dr. Anne W. Fearn, a warm personal friend of Miss Haygood. Dr. Anne Fearn rose and, with sweet voice and choice English, told of that grand woman. ("For her to have lived was Christ.") It will interest all Methodists to know that "How Firm a Foundation" was Miss Haygood's favorite hymn. Dr. Fearn said: "She never welcomed a worker without having that hymn sung; that she never bade one God-speed to the home land without that hymn.] [She could not sing it with voice, but, ah! she sang it in her soul."

Sunday evening we overwhelmed our friends with welcome. Dr. Weems, of Central Church; Mrs. Zelle Watts Kendall, of Central Auxiliary; Miss Bertha Moore, of the Kate Watts Memorial; Mrs. H. M. Ellis, of West End; Mrs. Annie Johnson Watts, of East End; Mrs. Emmie Featherstun Vaughn, of the Home Mission Society, all voiced welcome of the Conference to Meridian. Miss Florence Kern, of Natchez, won all hearts with her graceful response. Miss Marshall made her annual address, which needs no word of mine to say how good it was. Mrs. Scott Phillips sang beautifully, "Calvary." Miss Smylie, the corresponding secretary, read her report, showing the work done during the year. Mrs. Drake read the treasurer's report, giving our financial standing.

Monday morning was given to organizing, enrolling, etc. As the secretary called the roll of auxiliaries, she was alarmed at the "death rate," and suggested that we have another memorial service of a different nature. The death rate has almost equalled the birth rate on some districts. One district has had no secretary the whole year except our Bro. Mellen, and for his invaluable services the Conference gave him a rising vote of thanks, and also gave him the privilege of "talking in the meeting."

Monday afternoon the committees were busy until late. Said committees all appointed by the president and corresponding secretary.

Monday evening we had the rare privilege and pleasure of hearing Dr. Burrus Fearn and his talented wife, Dr. Anne W. Fearn. Even those who had the pleasure of hearing these gifted workers tell last Summer of the needs of the field, and their efforts to supply spiritual as well as physical healing, were surprised at the freshness of the material which they furnished at the Conference. The churches which have not heard them during their home stay have lost much in the way of uplift in the great cause of missions, while those who have had them have enjoyed one more heart-to-heart talk with devoted followers of Christ and workers in his field.

Tuesday morning we had with us our Bros. Mellen, Bell, Ellis, Pinkney Johnson, Alford, Lewis and Weems, of the Mississippi Conference, and Sister Burt, a sister of our L. Elizabeth Hughes. The president called for the reports of district secretaries and of auxiliaries.

The Conference pledged itself to pay an indebtedness of forty dollars to the bank for Miss Smylie's expenses to the Ecumenical Conference. Some of the committees reported on Tuesday afternoon. Tuesday evening Miss Smylie read her report of the Ecumenical. Mrs. Drake read a fine paper on the "Missionary Outlook of the Twentieth Century." Mrs. Scott Phillips again delighted the audience with one of her beautiful songs. Miss Mabel Rivers contributed to the pleasure of the evening with one of her splendid recitations. Wednesday morning reports were again called for. At ten o'clock the election of officers took place, and resulted as follows: President, Miss Marshall; vice-president, Mrs. Foote; corresponding secretary, Miss Smylie; recording secretary, Mrs. Moore (of Jackson); treasurer, Mrs. J. P. Drake. District secretaries: Vicksburg district, Mrs. Scott Phillips; Jackson district, Mrs. Blanche Howell; Natchez district, Mrs. Julia R. Love; Forest district, Mrs. W. L. Linfield; Seashore district, Mrs. J. S. Parker; Meridian district, Mrs. D. E. Phillips; Brookhaven district, Mrs. H. W. Featherstun.

Unfinished business was called for on Wednesday afternoon. Committees finished their reports. Pledges were taken, and a goodly sum was pledged for the Laura Haygood Memorial. I will add, by way of parenthesis, that the Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S. is pledged to raise an amount approaching six hundred dollars this year. The next annual session will be held in Vicksburg. It was our pleasure to have with us on Wednesday afternoon Bro. and Sister Jas. G. Galloway, of Newton. Wednesday evening a reception at the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Seba Eastland brought to a close the twenty-first annual session of the W. F. M. S. of the Mississippi Conference.

The Christian Life.

ROTTEN AT THE HEART.

A majestic tree fell in its prime—fell on a pleasant evening, when there was scarcely a breath of air stirring. It had withstood a century of storms, and now was broken off by a zephyr. The secret was disclosed by its falling. A boy's hatchet had been struck into it when it was a tender sapling. The wound had been grown over and hidden away under exuberant life, but it had never healed. There at the heart of the tree it stayed, a spot of decay, ever eating a little farther and deeper into the trunk, until at last the tree was rotted through, and fell of its own weight, when it seemed to be at its best. So do many lives fall when they seem to be at their strongest, because some sin or fault of youth has left its wounding and its consequent weakness at the heart. For many years it is hidden, and life goes on in strength. At last, however, its sad work is done, and at his prime the man falls.—Selected.

PILGRIMS WITH SHINING FACES.

A young man who had listened without repentance to many sermons intended to convert sinners, once heard a sermon by Dr. Addison Alexander on "A city which hath foundations," read aloud in a parlor full of Christians. In a short time he called upon the pastor to ask what he must do to be saved, and said he had had no peace since hearing that sermon.

"What was there in that sermon to bring you to repentance?" asked the preacher.

"Ah," said the young man, "I looked around and saw a roomful of people on their way to heaven; their faces were shining with joy and hope; but I had no part in it, and I stopped and asked myself for the first time, 'Where, then, are you going?'"—Baptist Standard.

IN MEMORIAM.

Rev. George Bancroft, son of Charles and Rebecca Bancroft, was born June 26, 1826, near Mobile, Alabama. In infancy his pious parents dedicated him to God in holy baptism, Rev. E. Hearn officiating, and brought him up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. He was the subject of early religious impressions, and in 1841, at the age of fifteen, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, uniting with what was then known as the Old Bee Hive Church in Mobile under the pastorate of Rev. Jared Sparks. He grew up to be a young man who was admired for his manly conduct and respected for his Christian character.

On Dec. 24, 1845, he was married to Miss Mary G. Ramsey, who proved herself a faithful wife and affectionate companion. Eight children were born unto them, three of whom remain to mourn their loss. Bro. Bancroft was licensed to preach in Sompter county, Ala, in 1848, and for many years was a faithful and acceptable local preacher.

He joined the Alabama Conference, and his first appointment was Cuba circuit, which he had organized and named while a local preacher. Having served this charge, he located one year, at the expiration of which, in 1878, he joined the Mississippi Conference, of which he was an honored member till his death. As an itinerant, he was loyal, willingly going wherever sent, and never complaining of his appointment. He was a faithful pastor and a good preacher.

On account of the failing health of himself and wife he was superannuated at Meridian in 1894, greatly to his regret. Often have I heard him say that giving up his "beloved employ" was the greatest cross of his life.

It was the writer's privilege to be intimately associated with him for sixteen months prior to his death, his home being here in Forest with his grand-daughter, Mrs. Mary Gardner. I visited him frequently and loved him dearly. His thrilling experience of a present, joyous, and full salvation was an inspiration to me, and his godly admonitions will be remembered till my latest day. He was one of the Lord's saints indeed. He was sweet-spirited and never murmured at any of God's dealings with him. He was patient in affliction, and resigned under all circumstances. No child of God was ever more for the kingdom and more ready to go when the message came to him, "Come up higher." At 10:55 P. M., on the first day of May, 1900, he "sweetly fell on sleep." His funeral was held the next day in the Methodist Church here by Rev. T. L. Mellen and myself, after which his remains were laid to rest in the cemetery just east of town, by the side of his devoted wife, who preceded him to the Glory Land a few months. To their loved ones who remain behind, we would say, You all know where to find them. Appropriate indeed are the words of the poet here—

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ;
The battle fought, the victory won,
Enter thy Master's joy."

His pastor, D. SCARBOROUGH.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference was preceded by a Missionary Institute which began Wednesday, July 4, at St. Francisville, La. The program was logically conceived by the presiding elder, and carried out wisely and worthily by the brethren. As discussed and debated by Bros. Cassity, Brown, Johnson, Hoffpauir, R. Randle, J. D. Wall, Crisler, W. H. Carter, Notestine, F. S. Parker, a flood of facts and figures were poured out upon receptive listeners. It was an eye-opener, a heart-searcher, a purse-loosener, a conscience-interrogator. As an experiment, it was a good beginning; so say they all. Woman's work was represented by Misses Smith, Mayo and Schwing in helpful papers.

In the new, neat and needful church built by 26 members and the faithful saints at the low cost of $2800 marks an epoch in Methodist architecture for small towns, but liberal) the Conference assembled. Roll calls show 14 preachers present, 6 absent; laymen, 20 present, 27 absent.

Preaching by Revs. E. N. Evans, P. M. Brown, J. I. Hoffpauir, R. Randle; dedication sermon by presiding elder; Twentieth Century addresses by Rev. Dr. LaPrade and Rev. Dr. Watkins: an open Missionary Conference conducted by A. J. Notestine; and a love-feast, Sunday, at 5 P. M.

The reports from the works exhibit gains along points of vantage; as the protracted meeting season has not yet been inaugurated, the soul crop is awaiting the reapers.

Two thousand and fifty-three dollars and sixty cents has been raised for Educational Thank-offering Fund, and 50 per cent. of the works have only been partially reached, and this amount excludes what the preachers subscribed at the Annual Conference, save one.

Reports of committees, which concern us, less the preambles, as follows:

COMMITTEE ON MEMORIALS.

1. Whereas, The building and grounds of the Johnston Collegiate Institute will be tendered to the Louisiana Conference at its approaching session; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the District Conference heartily recommend and urge its acceptance and its equipment as a secondary school in correlation with Centenary and Mansfield.

2. As the needless multiplying of country churches has been detrimental to our mission; be it

Resolved, That the Baton Rouge District Conference respectfully petition the Bishop and cabinet, as far as practicable, to adopt a policy of concentration of our weaker country churches unto fewer and stronger ones centrally located.

3 That we respectfully petition the Bishop to form a mission in Ascension and St. James parishes, and that the Board of Missions make an appropriation therefor.

P. M. BROWN,
For Committee.

ON CAMP MEETINGS AND REVIVALS.

Resolved, That we, as preachers and laymen, will aid the presiding elder, as far as is possible, at Bluff Creek and Denham Springs during the Summer to have a rousing revival, and that we will help and co-operate with each other in special effort to bring about a powerful revival throughout the district.

J. B. CASSITY,

ON DISTRICT PROPERTY.

Your committee recommend that the Board of Trustees of the Jackson Church be appointed instead of the present Board of Trustees of the district parsonage.

2. That an assessment of $200 be made upon the district for repairs and payment of debt to the Woodville district ($140) on district parsonage.

3 Said amount be apportioned among the several charges in proportion to other assessments, and collected with them.

4. That the property known as the Denham Springs Camp Meeting Grounds be accepted as district property by us, and to be used for the purposes of a camp meeting, or otherwise as the District Conference may direct.

5. That the following be constituted a Board of Trustees to receive said property under the terms of trust for the church: B. Duke, I. Corcoran, O. A. Bullion, F. E. Hill, J. Z. Underwood, J. B Easterly, J. B. Easterly, Jr.; W. J. Farris, Sam Holden.

I. D. WALL,
For Committee.

The following were elected delegates to Annual Conference: J. Kilbourne, W. S. Holmes, I. D. Wall, R. R. Reed. Alternates—T. D. Lipscomb and J. W. McLean.

Committee on Resolutions reported as follows:

1. That the week, July 9-15, be, or as near thereafter as possible, observed as a week of prayer and self-denial in the interests of Twentieth Century Offering.

2. That the first Sunday in August, with Friday and Saturday preceding, be observed as a season of fasting and prayer for revivals on the district.

3. That concentrated effort be made to raise the foreign mission collection in full—and to that end—let (1) Each Sunday-school raise a fund in excess of the assessment on the church. (2) Each Epworth League. (3) This fund be placed in hands of presiding elder to aid the deficient churches. (4) That we heartily cooperate with the Sunday Rest League for the promotion of Sunday legislation, State and municipal, and the enforcement of present laws.

R. REED,
For Committee.

A resolution of thanks brought an intellectual, spiritual, social feast to a pleasurable close in St. Francisville.

Secretary.

FROM THE WORK.

CHESTER CHARGE.

We have deferred a report for months, hoping some happy turn would afford something worth the notice of the brethren; but to this date have found little more than a string of excuses to chronicle.

During the first three months of the Conference year small-pox so scattered our forces that on "muster day" the preacher preached to a bare "corporal's guard." Then came an abominable circus through the county and spread measles all among us, so that two months—March and April—were given to nursing the sick and dodging measles; and still no congregations. Now June brings the unusual rainfall—extending to this, the fifth day of July, and we can't conjecture how much longer it will last.

These things have woefully disorganized our work here. Children's Day was a failure all over the charge The Sunday-schools opened in April, but were not sufficiently under way to warrant their undertaking Children's Day exercises. The collections were just simply forestalled. The pastor's and presiding elder's salary one-fourth paid, and the third quarter nearly ended. Now we are compelled to postpone three revival meetings till September, which we intended bringing off in July. We have done practically nothing—more than seed sowing—on the Twentieth Century Fund. For all this section of the State it will be absolutely necessary to extend the time for closing this thank-offering for, at least, one, or, may be, two years before we can do as we would by the movement.

Our people depend entirely on farm products for money, and there can not possibly be a half crop of cotton made in the State—and especially here—and we seriously doubt the prospect for cereal crops. Hay is about the only thrifty growth here now, and only those who have herds of cattle to winter will reap any money from that. I mention these things merely to show why we have done so very little this year. These are providences by which we are to profit in learning the great lesson of resignation. For what Methodist preacher is content to let the year drag by without accomplishing something for his Lord? We have been on a tension of anxiety to be about the Master's business, but willing to follow only where he leads.

We have finished one handsome new church and dedicated it, and taken steps to finish and dedicate another. We have bought one new organ. We will send about half a dozen to our church colleges; and are praying for a gracious revival, such as will make us glad of the evil wherein the Lord hath afflicted us. (See Ps. xc,15) If we have nothing else to gather (harvest), we will the more willingly gather ourselves unto the Lord and receive of the abundance of the richness of his grace to our souls.

Oh, for a great high-tide of religious fervor, such as blessed the church fifty and a hundred years ago! "Then will we teach transgressors thy way, and sinners shall be converted unto thee." W. L. ANDERSON, P. C.

In California.
The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical
Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.
That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.
"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.
The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

SPASMODIC EFFORTS IN REFORM.

One of the greatest and gravest hindrances to the progress and perpetuity of reform movements is the failure of the promoters thereof to keep patiently at work the year round. A tremendous effort is made for a short time, the forces of evil are put to rout, and victory crowns the banners of the champions of temperance or political reform. There is great jubilation for a few weeks, which is soon followed by over-confidence and relaxation of effort. Hence it comes to pass that, in a short while, the corruptionists and enemies of reform, emboldened by the apathy and fancied security of the better class, begin their depredations and evil practices again, and then the cry is raised that reform is a failure. Thus, while various reform movements make considerable headway for a time, it is sad to note that in numerous instances the wheel of progress slips back a cog or two on account of the short-sightedness and neglect of the friends of reform. There is not much advantage in gaining a sweeping victory for temperance, or Sabbath observance, or for municipal reform, unless the success won is tenaciously held. What does it avail for a regiment to bravely storm a strong fortress, if it is unable to hold its position? What is greatly needed all over the country is a dogged determination on the part of the advocates of righteousness to hold every advantage gained, and to keep up the fight against rampant corruption and vice.

Eternal vigilance is the price of success in all reform movements, no less than it is the price of liberty. In most of our Southern States we have wise and beneficent laws for the suppression of vice and crime, and for the promotion of the public weal. Our temperance and Sabbath laws are, in the main, of the most excellent character, but unfortunately they are failing to accomplish the splendid results that ought to have followed their enactment, simply because the better class of citizens are doing almost nothing to secure their proper enforcement. Too many of our people seem to take it for granted that laws once enacted will execute themselves, and that further agitation and education with regard to the evils of the saloon and the gambling hell and the lottery and the reign of the boodler are wholly unnecessary. There is serious danger that in more than one locality where prohibition now prevails the saloon element will, ere long, again be in the saddle, on account of the shameful lethargy and folly of the prohibitionists. A generation is rising up that know not the banefulness and monstrousness of the whisky demon. The fact that foreigners are coming among us in increasing numbers renders it all the more imperative that the work of temperance instruction and agitation should ever go on. The righteous and the law-abiding deserve to suffer many things at the hands of the corrupt and lawless when they supinely and foolishly pursue the "let-alone policy."

As a writer in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post forcefully says: "The prevalence of vice in our large cities, and the apparent failure of so many reform movements, does not prove that vice is stronger than virtue, but is due rather to the fact that vice is ever at work, while virtue takes its vacations. The lawless element, including everything, from the saloon that keeps open after hours and allows a crap game in its back room, to the regular policy shop, is professionally bad. That is, it is bad as a part of its business. Its bread and butter depend upon preventing the law's operation. As a result, it is active day and night, and its work prospers. But the reform forces are at work only now and then, when some one calls attention to the fact that the city is lawless.

"Suddenly some one raises a cry. The town has been captured by the 'sporting' element. The town is 'wide open.' The good people are roused and turn from their work to grapple with the enemy. Now we see a fair fight, for one side is as active as the other. We see that the good is stronger, for in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the saloons are compelled to close on time, the pool-rooms are abolished, and the gamblers driven out of town. But though we see here the strength of good, we are soon to behold the weakness of present-day reform. Seeing the town clean, the reformers go about their work again.

"But the bad are not idle for one moment. The minute reformers relax their vigilance, the bad element is busy again, doing everything in its power to control the officials and to destroy the results of the reform wave. In a few days the evil will be as rampant as ever.

"And so the strife will go on; vice constant because it is the business of the bad; reform spasmodic because it is merely a side issue with the reformers. If reform ever comes to be permanently triumphant, it will be in a day when the reformer makes a business of upholding his ideals and works as constantly for reform as he would work for his living. Until then civic vice will continue to hold sway, with only an occasional field-day for civic virtue."

THE LOUISIANA CHAUTAUQUA.

Within the last few months I have received more than a score of invitations to lecture, preach commencement sermons, and deliver commencement addresses—all of which, with a very few exceptions, I found it necessary to decline, albeit acceptance would have been a pleasure. One of the exceptions was an invitation to preach at the Ruston Chautauqua, July 8. Since my last visit, four years ago, this Chautauqua has developed considerably. Several new buildings devoted to educational work have been erected. One of these was built by the State University; another by Tulane University. The Chautauqua Hotel has been enlarged. A great improvement has been made in the matter of accessibility. Whereas formerly a drive of about two miles was necessary, there is now a railroad station on the Assembly grounds. The attendance upon the popular lectures from Ruston and vicinity varies with the reputation of the speakers. The Normal work in the various schools, so far as I had opportunity to investigate, is excellent. The faculty is a remarkably able one. All the departments properly belonging to a Chautauqua are in successful operation. Professional teachers who desire instruction in any department can get what they want at Ruston. Mrs. M. H. Williams, the founder of the Louisiana Chautauqua, still remains at the head of the institution. To her executive ability and her fine poise of character the Louisiana Chautauqua is largely indebted for the success which it has achieved. If I had the ear of the entire teaching fraternity of the State of Louisiana, I would say, "Go to Ruston, and take a course."

I was delighted to meet our pastor at Ruston, Rev. Hampton R. Singleton. He is abundant in labors along many lines, and is in high favor with his flock and with the community in general. My engagement being ended, I hurried home, with feelings of profound regret that I did not so arrange my affairs that I could remain longer.

W. C. B.

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The twenty-ninth annual meeting at the Seashore Camp Grounds began Wednesday evening, July 11, the opening sermon being preached by Rev. W. W. Simmons, presiding elder of the Seashore district. The services during the first three days were considerably interfered with by heavy and continued rains.

Pressing office duties prevented the assistant editor from reaching the grounds until late Saturday afternoon, and he was forced to return to the city early Monday morning, but he thoroughly enjoyed and was greatly refreshed by the services he was permitted to attend during his brief stay. Saturday evening we had the pleasure of hearing a most excellent sermon by Rev. J. M. Dannelly, of Pensacola, Fla., his text being: "Follow me, and let the dead bury their dead." (Matt. viii, 22.)

The eight o'clock service, Sunday morning, which was concluded with a delightful experience meeting, was conducted by Rev. W. B. Hurt, pastor of St. Francis Street Church, Mobile, who delivered a very impressive and helpful talk upon the nature and necessity of complete consecration. The sermon at 11 A. M. was delivered by Rev. J. P. McFerrin, D. D., of Birmingham, Ala., whose theme was "Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumbling-block, and unto the Greeks foolishness." It was a magnificent and faithful presentation of the old, yet ever new, story of the cross, and charmed as well as deeply impressed the great throng, numbering at least a thousand, which had gathered to hear it. One little girl was converted at this service.

Dr. McFerrin's sermon, Sunday night, on the eternity of memory, based upon the words, "Son, remember" (Luke xvi, 25), was one of the most powerful and thrilling discourses we have ever listened to. Dr. McFerrin is undoubtedly one of the finest pulpit orators in the South. At three o'clock, on Sunday afternoon, Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., the new president of Whitworth College, preached an exceedingly forceful and effective sermon, and by his success in getting penitents to the altar showed that he is a splendid exhorter as well as preacher. At the conclusion of the sermon a goodly number of persons came forward for prayer, two of them being brightly converted.

It was a source of great gratification to all that our beloved Bishop Keener, though quite feeble, was able to attend the services Sunday morning. There is scarcely any spot that he loves more dearly than the Seashore Camp Ground, which has been hallowed by a thousand precious memories; and the presence of our senior Bishop was indeed a benediction.

In company with Dr. McFerrin we had the pleasure of dining on Sunday with Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Keener, whose hospitality was most generous and cordial. During our stay we were the guest of Bro. and Sister W. B. Thomson, of this city, to whom we are indebted for royal entertainment and kindness. We took one enjoyable meal with our much esteemed friend, Sister Smylie, of Meridian, Miss.

The number of preachers in attendance this year was gratifyingly large. In addition to the ministerial brethren already mentioned, we had the pleasure of greeting the following brethren who were on the grounds Saturday night and Sunday, namely: Dr. J. M. Weems, Revs. T. W. Adams, R. L. Webb, J. W. McLaurin, V. V. Boone, and W. W. Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference; J. E. Danson, S. J. Davies, J. M. Henry, P. H. Fontaine, K. W. Dodson and Prof. Thos. Carter, all of the Louisiana Conference; and Revs. S. R. Emerson, J. H. Rinehart, J. M. Glenn, and J. M. Cox, presiding elder of Mobile district, all of the Alabama Conference.

The general verdict is that the preaching throughout the meeting was of a high order. The visible results, however, were rather meager.

It looks to us as if Methodist preachers have well-nigh forgotten, or are fast forgetting, how to say "Amen." The responses we heard were few and feeble. The singing, while excellent indeed, was confined mainly to the choir.

We regret exceedingly to learn of the death, which occurred at the college on the twenty-first ultimo, of Rev. R. M. Saunders, chaplain of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Va. He was a little over seventy years of age, and had done a great work as a preacher and educator. He was for two years—namely, from 1888 to 1890—president of East Mississippi Female College, and has many friends in this section.

A NEW BOOK.

THE SABBATH TRANSFERRED. By Rev. Johns D. Parker, Ph D. With an Introduction by Rev. F. N. Peloubet, D D. 10 mo. 151 pages. Cloth. Johns D. Parker & Co., East Orange, N. J.

The author has been studying this subject more than ten years, but he has compressed the whole matter into as small a compass as is consistent with the proper elucidation of the subject. For several years he has been engaged in correspondence with the leading Greek scholars on this subject, and there is a consensus of opinion that the renderings adopted in this volume, which differ very slightly from the Authorized Version of the New Testament, do not violate any principles of the Greek language. The linguistic way is open to believe in the Transfer of the Sabbath, and this theory, which is adopted by many leading Christian scholars, seems to be natural, reasonable and philosophical. It is believed that this theory is the only one that meets the necessities of the Divine Kingdom. The Transferred Sabbath commemorates both the old and the new Creation, preserves the Fourth Commandment in all its primal integrity, gives the Christian world the results of the unfolding economies of grace, and honors the Risen Lord, who came forth from the sepulchre as a mighty conqueror.

NOTES FROM THE DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: Since my last to your columns I have completed the second quarter of appointments. I am certain that of the six quarters on the district none have been more pleasant. Indeed, there have been certain features that have characterized this as unusually satisfactory. So far as known to the elder, there has been no friction among the brethren, and the work of the church has progressed well. The new pastors have fully adjusted themselves to their surroundings, and the work is prospering in their hands.

The record on the elder's book stands thus: Total days in quarter, 94; days out, 53; services held, 36. Of our District Conference you have heard. Decidedly one of the most spiritual and enjoyable I have ever attended. It was good to edifying to be there.

During the quarter nearly five hundred dollars more have been paid the pastors than during the second quarter of '99, which, with the increase during the first quarter, makes over one thousand dollars above same time last year. There has been also a very perceptible increase in the other collections over the first half of last year. During the quarter there has been held at Canton a most delightful meeting conducted by Bro. Knickerbocker, in which the church was moved to greater things for the Master, and several added to her rolls. In other parts meetings have been planned for, and the Summer months will find the protracted meetings on in force. We look with confidence for a decided increase in members at the approaching Conference. Although we had almost an incessant downpour of rain during the month of June, we did not miss an appointment, and everywhere met good congregations. A week in the Delta with Ellis and Crymes was pleasantly and profitably spent. The former, as all who know him, will testify that he is not only a faithful fisher of men, but a most successful tempter of the finny tribe. As one colored brother put it, "Dat preacher sho' do' know how to fish." There is mutual appreciation on that work. Brother Crymes has the most remarkable Sunday-school I have ever known; not a child on the roll; all grown people—attendance good and interest in lesson unusual.

During the quarter we have found time to read books as well as papers. Of these we have found Bishop Galloway's book, "Christianity and the Nation," most interesting. Worthy of a place in any library, and especially that of every preacher. With this book in hand our young preachers will find themselves well equipped for the Twentieth Century Movement. My young brethren, get it. A little book of the League course, by Bishop Warren, "Among the Forces," is delightful reading, and fits well in such a course for the young. If any of the brethren are troubled with "much water," I would recommend a book found in the library of J. D. Ellis, titled "Letters on Baptism, By Fairfield"—a book based upon a word; strong and convincing, and, to the writer's mind, without a joint in the harness.

To-morrow we gird ourself for the third round. What will be the reports at its close we wait to see. With flooding rains and the prospect of a half crop we would fear the results to the pastors, but for the faith which we have in the integrity of the church.

LETTER FROM BRO. POWELL.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow space for a few words personal to myself. Owing to continued physical disability, I have not preached since the first Sunday in June. In extreme feebleness I met my appointments up to that time, sometimes hazarding my safety in the attempt. It is improbable that I shall be able to resume work again this year; so I have concluded reluctantly to yield up my place, and open up the way for the employment of some brother who can serve the church here efficiently. I have tried water, medicine and surcease from active work—all to no avail—and can not, in justice to myself, continue longer to stand in the way and be a barrier to the progress of the work. So long as I felt that there was a probability of getting well enough to proceed, I was willing to continue in my place, with even a partial support.

We have had many expressions of kindness from these excellent people, which will secure for them a large and lasting place in my memory and affections.

To the brethren of the Conference who have been kindly solicitous about me, and have poured out upon me their sympathetic and brotherly benedictions, I present my warmest expression of gratitude, and my devoutest prayer for God's blessing to rest upon them.

My postoffice address will be Hattiesburg, Miss.

Fraternally yours,

C. A. POWELL.

MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS, ON TO ATLANTA!

Yes, we are all going. No one doubts this. We are to arrange to meet in Birmingham on the morning of the twenty-fifth in time to take the Great Southern at 6 A. M. for Atlanta, arriving there about noon of same day. This will necessitate the majority of our Leaguers leaving starting-points on the afternoon or evening of the twenty-fourth. Greenville, Winona, and West Point will be the starting-points for North Mississippi Leaguers, while Vicksburg, Jackson and Meridian will be the starting-points for those in the southern part of the State, and Birmingham will be the grand rallying-point on the morning of the twenty-fifth for Mississippi Leaguedom.

If you have not received a circular informing you of the fare from your home and the time of starting, inquire of the agent at once, and if the starting-points named are not on your way, arrange to take the most direct route to Birmingham and join the crowd there.

Yours, On to Atlanta,

VIC THOMPSON,
State Secretary.

Tupelo, Miss., July 12, 1900.

BISHOP CANDLER IN VIRGINIA.

Bishop Candler, so far as his part in promoting the Twentieth Century Movement is concerned, certainly believes that "the King's business demands dispatch." He has been moving about from place to place with all the expedition that the modern facilities of rapid transit afford, delivering here and there his stirring speeches with telling effect. His itinerary up the Valley of Virginia was marked everywhere with cordial receptions, large and enthusiastic audiences, and substantial results. We have only partial information as to the different points visited, but give what we have. We learn that in the Virginia Conference up to this time more than $60,000 have been pledged to this fund.—Baltimore Advocate.

Our Mt. Vernon Church in Washington City has raised $1,900 for the Twentieth Century Fund, with "more to follow." This is about $4 a member. That church is not rich as the phrase goes, but it is generous and spiritual. This great movement is going forward to a great success. —Wesleyan Advocate.

The banner church of Southern Methodism in the Twentieth Century Movement so far is Tulip Street Church, Nashville, Tenn. Its offering has reached $6,680 with a fair prospect of becoming $7,000.—Texas Advocate.

NOTES.

Dr. R. N. Price expects to apply for re-admission at the next session of the Holston Conference.

Rev. W. D. Bass sends us the following item anent a meeting which he recently conducted for the pastor at Independence, La.: "We had a very good meeting here. The town is small, and, for the most part, Catholic. Our church has but few members there, and they are weak financially. The pastor, Bro. Sweeney, has been struggling to build a house of worship at that point. We raised in good subscription what money was called for to finish the church. Had sixteen additions, a number of conversions, and four children were baptized. Bro. Sweeney is manifesting heroic zeal in serving a difficult work. The Lord will reward him."

Dr. DuBose sends us the following notice: "For the better information of our Leaguers in the different sections of the church, we publish a list of rates from important starting points to Atlanta for the Southern League Conference, July 25 29. The figures are for the round trip. Tickets will be sold a sufficiently long time before the meeting to enable the holder to reach the seat of the Conference. We hope also to secure an extension of ten to fifteen days from the first of August, to allow Leaguers to visit friends, old homes, and places of interest in the East and South. The rates from the cities named are as follows: New Orleans, $14 85; Birmingham, $5; San Antonio, $27.80; Dallas, $24.55; Memphis, $12 50; Chattanooga, $4 10; Houston, $24.55; Meridian, $9 55."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOS. H. DONSEY, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

There seems to be some question as to the propriety of putting so much stress on missions in the League, and since we can see no impropriety in a friendly exchange of ideas on the subject, we give space below for a communication from Sister Mathis, of Columbus, Miss., trusting that every Leaguer may read it carefully, and take it for everything it is worth.

THE LEAGUE—SOME PLAIN FACTS.

Has it been proven beyond doubt that the church does not need the League as a League? Has it been proven that the originators and framers of the original Constitution failed to embody the real purpose, and to properly classify the work? Is it Methodist policy for one branch of the church work to so invade the province of another as to smother and destroy the real purpose? If "No" is the answer to these questions, then why is it that such a determined and persistent effort is permitted to turn the League into a foreign missionary society? It is but placing it mildly to say that the "Holston-Cobb plan" literally usurps every phase of the League, and turns it into missions. We are not guessing at this at all—we know whereof we speak: and hundreds of others know in this State, and other States, too.

We make this public statement by request of a large number of the Leaguers, and some of the officers. When brought down to practical work, this is what that "Holston-Cobb" plan proposes, according to Mr. Cobb's work at our recent State League Conference.

First, making the League, to a large extent, responsible for that big missions debt that the Board of Missions has again overwhelmed the church with. Judging by our past history, if this were paid, we would immediately have another. That is discouraging the League beyond endurance. By the Constitution all study classes are under the Literary Department. This new plan places a larger study-work under the Devotional Department, and provides not for the regular authorized work, but substitutes another on foreign missions—sixteen volumes—and also claims the mission books in the reading course. By the time an ordinary League gets eighteen books on foreign missions studied, the mission studies in the Era, the monthly public mission meeting, a monthly collection for missions—pray tell where are the other things to come in? And yet the Constitution does not provide, or did not originally, for one particle of this whole thing. The word "mission" was barely named along with cottage prayer meetings, temperance meetings, etc., and it was not even placed under the head of studies at all. Missions are all right in their place, and the place a large one, but certainly there are other things.

The Mission Board and its work is another branch of church work, and yet it actually pays Mr. Cobb and his expenses to go to the State League Conferences and monopolize the whole thing for missions, dictate plans for the incoming year, and in our State the mission committee appoints the district secretaries; at least, that is this year's plan. What were the consequences? The disgust was so manifest that no League would offer to entertain the next Conference, and withdrawal from the State work was freely discussed there, and more so since. The League is injured, the cause of missions injured, because confidence in the management is shaken. Certainly all of this is a mistake, no matter how sincere the workers are, nor how much money is needed. Confidence must be maintained, or we will never pay this debt.

MRS. G. H. MATHIS.

NOTICE.

The Natchez District Conference, as previously announced, will meet with the church at Harriston on July 25, 26, and 27 (Wednesday, Thursday and Friday after the fourth Sunday). We will have preaching on Tuesday night, and will expect most of the preachers and delegates up Tuesday afternoon, so as to be at the opening service, Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock. We want to open promptly at 9 o'clock, so as to spend a short time in a prayer and song service.

Brethren, pray earnestly, that we may have a very spiritual meeting.

Mr. Editor, come and be with us.

Every housewife knows she can rely upon it; that it makes the bread and biscuit more delicious and wholesome—always the finest that can be baked.

It is economy and every way better to use the Royal, whose work is always certain, never experimental.

Never experiment with so important an article as the human food

There are many imitation baking powders, made from alum. They may cost less per pound, but their use is at the cost of health.

REVIVAL AT LEXINGTON, MISS.

Lexington, North Mississippi Conference, has been blessed with a gracious revival of religion. Evangelist G. R Cairns, of the Baptist Church, conducted a meeting of some two weeks' continuance, beginning Sunday, June 24 The preaching of Bro Cairns is evangelical, strong, and convincing. Large congregations attended with increasing interest. The spirit of the preacher was fraternal and considerate toward the members of other churches, many of whom participated in the services. The irreligious were deeply impressed, and many of them expressed a desire to be saved. It was estimated that about sixty professed conversion, between thirty and forty of whom gave their names for membership in different churches. Of these, nineteen come to the Methodist Church. Christians of the several churches were drawn towards each other, and worked in the spirit of unity and fellowship. The church, generally, has been quickened. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and believers made to rejoice. We thank God and take courage.

T. C. WIER.

We take pleasure in calling the attention of our readers to Centenary Female College, an advertisement of which appears in this issue. It is one of the leading colleges in our church for young ladies, and, in fact, in the Southern States. It is located at Cleveland, Tenn., which is easily the prettiest town in the State, consisting of a population of five thousand people. It is located twenty-eight miles above Chattanooga, directly on the Southern railway. Trains from New Orleans to Cleveland without change of cars.

The college has a large and accomplished faculty, consisting of twenty-three members. It has a complete laboratory and outfit of physical apparatus. No school in the South is in a more flourishing condition, or doing better work, than this one. It is fortunate in its location, being above all malarial fevers, and yet not far enough North to experience the severe cold, which often interferes with the work of pupils, especially in the department of voice culture, etc.

We most heartily recommend Centenary College to parents having daughters to educate.

INDIAN MISSION.

MR. EDITOR: Please do not get impatient with me for my continual coming to the ADVOCATE in interest of the Indian Mission. If the people would send the money we need to build churches and buy some more land very much needed, then I would cease troubling you and them. But how can I give it up when the needs are so great? If we only had the means, we could soon make the mission a grand success. Brethren, why not? Are these poor lost Indians not worth saving? Or have we not the means to use for their salvation? We ought to be glad to do all we can for them. We have neglected them so long already. Brethren, sisters, have you any interest in them? Do you not want them saved? Several have been converted and joined the church this year, and some have gone to heaven. O, is it not wonderful that Jesus loves me? And the poor Choctaw, too. Yes, he loves "even me." Won't I be glad when I get to heaven that I tried to help save the poor Indians, too? Yes, and some have been saved and have gone on before. And what a meeting that will be! Brethren and sisters, let's buy that land, and build the needed church-houses, too, and send the missionaries, and do all we can. We will never regret it (what we do) when we get to heaven. If we have any regret, it will be that we did not do more for the Master.

Our faithful presiding elder, Bro. Meller, and Bro. Donnell will do the best they can with the means put in their hands, we may be sure, and the property will all be secured to the church, so there will be no danger whatever of losing it. So, please send me something right away, and God will bless you. Send money order or registered letter to Lorman, Miss.

God bless the ADVOCATE and its editor.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinales too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. WHEN HALF OF LIFE IS GONE.

BY MRS. ELIZABETH D. FIELDER.

It comes to you suddenly one day, in the midst of your planning, the thought that half of your lifetime is gone. It startles you. What a little while it seems since that other time when you were planning and dreaming of the future! How long a lifetime seemed then. How many things you meant to do, how much you would accomplish for yourself and others, in the golden years lying between now and the half-way place! Where have the years gone to, and where are the dreams that then you dreamed? Alas! how few of them ever came true.

Then come thoughts of neglected opportunities. If you had only been a little wiser here, a little more far-seeing there, some of the ships might have come home treasure-laden, that long ago went down on the rocks. If you had only realized in those years how rapidly they were going, how much an hour, a moment, counts up in the long run of a lifetime, you would have seen to it that none were wasted, but each one would have yielded to you some useful lesson, some elevating thought, and so brought you nearer day by day to the ideal of manhood which was before you. Then the needy you might have helped, the heavy-hearted you might have cheered; they pass in long procession before you, and you seem to hear the sorrowful words, "Inasmuch as ye did it not unto the least of these, ye did it not unto Me."

With the thought of vanished opportunities comes also the thought of vanished friends. Ah! how many started with you then who have drifted out of sight on the way; the busy, noisy world coming between; and how many more have slipped out of the pushing, struggling, eager throng, closed their eyes to its temptations, and their ears to its allurements, and with folded hands and peaceful brows await for us to join them. If you could only go back and walk the way with them again, you would love them better, you would hold them closer; but alas! for the remorselessness of time. How much he takes, how little he ever gives back! But that is not all; there are brighter places.

There has been some work, bravely and faithfully done, not always as wisely, as perseveringly as might be, but something which has helped another in need; something which has furthered you one step in the way you intended to go. Not all the time has been wasted, and here and there you feel that you have approached a little toward your ideal, even if it is still very far off. Then there are sweet and blessed recollections of times when the heart swung open freely to the ones you loved, when they entered in and read for themselves all the trust and deep devotion of your soul; and though you were sometimes cold and indifferent, sometimes careless and unresponsive, they had been admitted to this holy of holies, and knew what was behind the veil. There are also many memories of help which has come along the dark places, of the everlasting Arms which have borne you up in your weakness, and the great Rock which has sheltered you in the midst of storms.

No; after all, it is not regret and remorse alone which come to you at this sudden halt in the half-way place. There is a subdued and tender gladness "that is akin to pain" in this review of the way you have just passed over.

Then you turn your back upon it and face about to the future.

A little slower, a little more deliberately, you take up those plans again. The years which are left you to work are not so many by half as you had then, but you are not discouraged. You know now what an hour is worth. You will waste no time in fruitless experimenting, but be able "to act to-morrow what you learn to-day." You have worked enough "to watch

The Master work, and catch
Hints of the proper craft,
Tricks of the tools' true play."

With a strong arm, a clear eye, and a steadfast heart, much is possible in the years that yet remain. And the friends who still walk with you—you will go out from this place and take their hands in a tenderer, stronger clasp; you will look into their faces with a warmer interest, a deeper affection written upon your own; you will open the doors of your heart to them oftener, and the holy communion will be sweeter and more soul-satisfying than anything you have ever known.

The weak and halting, the hungry and faint, who pass your way will find a readier hand to help, since you have remembered how short the time in which to win the sweet commendation, "Well done, good and faithful servant." And so you may yet be able to say with the poet—

"Grow old along with me!
The best is yet to be,
The last of life for which the first was made;
Our times are in His hand
Who saith: 'A whole I planned;
Youth shows but half, trust God, see all, nor be afraid.'"

— Christian Advocate.

"NO PLACE AT HOME."

I met him on a street corner—a bright, black-eyed lad of perhaps fourteen summers. I had seen him there evening after evening, and wondered whether there was no one who knew the temptations he encountered.

I made friends with him and won his confidence. Then I questioned him kindly in regard to his spending so much time in the street.

"I know," he said, looking up at me in such a frank, winning way that I could not help thinking what a noble man he might make, "the street is not the best place for a boy, but you see there's no place for me at home."

"How is that?" I asked.

I was surprised and pained at the answer.

"Well, I have two grown-up sisters, and they entertain company in the parlor every evening. They give me to understand that I am 'a third party,' and not wanted. Then papa is always tired, and he dozes in the sitting-room and does not like to be disturbed. It's pretty lonesome, you see; so I come down here. It was not always so," he went on. "Before grandma died I always went up to her room and had a jolly time. Grandma liked boys."

There was a quaver in the voice now that told of a sorrow time had not yet healed.

"But your mother?" I suggested.

"Oh, mama!—she is only a reformer and has no time to spend with me. She is always visiting the prisons and workhouses, trying to reform the men, or writing articles on how to save the boys."

"And her own boy in danger?"

"Yes. I am not half as good as I was before grandma died. I am getting rough, I am afraid. There does not seem to be anyone to take an interest in me, so it does not much matter."

It was hard, bitter truth; and yet I knew that this was not the only boy who needed a wise, gentle hand to guide him through the dangerous period.

O mothers! are you blind, that you can not see the danger of your own, but look for that of others?

Make home the brightest spot on earth for your children. Take an interest in their sports; make yourself young for their sakes, and then you can feel that you have done your whole duty.

I think the saddest, most hopeless thing I ever heard from a boy's lips was that sentence: "There is no place for me at home." God forgive that mother and open her eyes before it is too late, and help other mothers to heed the warning!

How is it, mothers? Are your boys in danger? Think of this, ponder over it, pray over it.—Children's Visitor.

POLITENESS.

Be polite in your ways, your work and your talk. Whatever you do, never interrupt persons when they are speaking, whether they be young or old, large or small.

Never be rude or rough, but quite, easy and respectful to all. Do not think everybody should bow or kneel before you. If you are polite to them, they will also show politeness to you.

If you are told to do anything, do not answer back, but attend to it at once. Now, boys, remember and observe this.

If you meet ladies, alway tip your hat and speak pleasantly, and you will be admired by all. Not only that, but it will help to build the solid foundation of life, and will help a long way toward starting you in business and fitting you for a position that's worth credit and renown.

There was once a man who advertised for a boy to clerk in his store. A number of applicants applied at the hour set. The store-keeper had laid a book on the floor so as to see which of the boys would pick it up. All of the boys stepped over it except one, who stooped down and picked it up and politely handed it to the store-keeper. The boy was then and there chosen for the position.

If ladies enter the room, always stand until they are seated. Do not walk between any persons and the fire unless you are obliged to do so, and then ask to be excused.

Always beg pardon if you tread on any one's feet or accuse a person falsely. Always have respect for old people. The Bible says, "Thou shalt respect the aged."

There were once two boys, one finely dressed, the other poorly clad, riding in a street car with an old lady and her daughter. The daughter got off at a certain street, and the old lady called anxiously after her, and exclaimed, "Oh! my daughter has left her pocket-book!" The roughly-dressed boy got off the car, ran back and gave the young lady her lost property. The old lady remarked that he was a real gentleman. The finely dressed lad could not understand how the boy could be a gentleman and wear those shabby clothes. Boys, it is not the finely dressed boy nor the handsomest boy, but the one who observes the little things and the one who cultivates the good habits and roots out the bad ones that makes a gentleman of himself.—Richmond Advocate.

RICH WITHOUT MONEY.

Many a man is rich without money. Thousands of men with nothing in their pockets, and thousands without even a pocket, are rich. A man born with a good sound constitution, a good heart, and good limbs, and a pretty good head-piece, is rich. Good bones are better than gold; tough muscles than silver; and nerves that flash fire and carry energy to every function are better than houses and land. It is better than a landed estate to have the right kind of father and mother. Education may do much to check evil tendencies or to develop good ones; but it is a great thing to inherit the right proportion of faculties to start with. The man is rich who has a good disposition, who is kind, patient, cheerful, hopeful, and who has a flavor of wit and fun in his composition. The hardest thing to get on with in this life is a man's own self. A cross, selfish fellow, a desponding and complaining fellow, a timid and care-burdened man—these are all born deformed on the inside. They do not limp, but their thoughts sometimes do.—Exchange.

DON'T FORGET.

It is all right to be open and above-board in word and in action. Frank open-heartedness is a characteristic greatly to be desired. But if we possess this excellent quality, let us not use it in a way that will offend others. It may be all right to speak plainly one's mind, if done at the proper time and place, yet it should always be done in a careful and polite manner. For remember that to be considerate of the feeling of others is also a virtue, and while observing one we should not forget the other.—The Search-Light.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. On injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

Excursions.

The New Orleans and Northeastern railroad announces that, commencing with Wednesday, April 25, it will inaugurate the popular Wednesday excursions to St. Tammany parish, including Covington, Abita Springs, Pearl River, Slidell, and all intermediate stations.

The attractions to sportsmen, as well as the healthfulness of St. Tammany parish, are constantly increasing the popularity of these resorts.

Great improvement has been made, both by the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad and the East Louisiana railroad, in the track, which is being rapidly relaid with heavy steel rails, and in the equipment, thereby affording the excursionist the best of accommodations.

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published For all words in excess of that ber send one cent per word.

MS—William Wesley Sime was born in kin county, Miss., Aug. 27, 1833, and died native county, Nov. 2, 1899, being sixty- years two months and six days old. In his y manhood he spent several years in run- a vessel from points along the Mississ- coast to New Orleans. While living in portion of the State he was married to Annie Lee, in November, 1854. She lived little more than a year, and died, leaving fant son, who lived to be but seven years . April 15, 1866, he was married to Miss el A. Crook, of Rankin county, who lived the fifteenth of November, 1870, and in Lavaca county, Texas. To them was one son, but his life was short. To his wife, Miss Jennie Crook, of Rankin y, he was married Feb. 11, 1872. His life spent mostly in the saw-mill business, it was he who built the first portable mill portion of the country. At the time of ath he still owned a small mill near Pel- hle. For four years he followed the for- of the Confederate flag, and he bore in ly the evidences of his loyalty to the ern cause. Several times was he wound- and it was in 1863, while at home a cripple atches, that he professed religion and the M. E. Church, South, at Old Shiloh, bin county. He lived a consistent life and died without fear.

S me possessed many beautiful and traits. He was a faithful and considerate husband; patient, gentle, and kind. He tender regard for and became a true to the orphan. There are now living who, moved by loving gratitude, can spare call him blessed. He was a faithful od to his pastor, and his close and eful attention was a help to the preacher. deal of the good minister was a lofty as it should have been. His heart was n, and throbbed for the woes of others, his hand was not withheld from ministering to the needy. Not boastful of his at- ments in the Christian life, he yet main- ed his integrity, and walked humbly te- his God. A good man has gone to his ard, and while our hearts are grieved, mbit to the Father's will, renew our od press to meet him in heaven. The e of God is an abundant support to the ved wife and relatives. His Pastor.

IELD—Mrs. W. H. Field (nee Miss Mary Graves) was born in Alabama, July 2, and died at her home in Madison, Miss., 9, 1900.

always frail, life had for her much suffer- ing, in bearing this, she was ever patient. her last sickness, when pain racked her e, there was no murmuring. Even here was thoughtful of others, expressing her e that those who watched at her side ht not watch too long, but have rest.

e was married to William H. Field, Jan. 1869. Seven children blessed this happy on, all of whom she endeavored to train fulness in this world and happiness in world to come. As a mother, she was le and devoted; as a wife, she was of the best type. Under her roof even the orphan d a pleasant home. She was a member of Methodist Church for many years. She an earnest, quiet, faithful Christian, and, en able to attend, was always at her place the house of God. Though dead, her influ- e will live on. We miss her cheering it and there is deep grief among those who behind.

Annie Galloway Hawkins.

WALL.—The subject of this sketch, John LL, died Jan. 17, 1900, aged forty-five years. December, 1897, he was united in marriage Miss Odelle Moore. Soon after he joined Methodist Church. In the words of one o knew him best: "He lived as becometh a ld of God as near as he could see. He was ys ready to read and to hear read the rd of God." During his last long illness was always glad to have his pastor read pray with him. Our brother was such a el, unassuming man that only those who w him best knew the purity and integrity his character. He rarely, if ever, spoke l of others. "A wholesome tongue is a tree fe." For five months before his death he ered greatly. He longed to get well, but submit self to God's will. When the end n he said to the heart-broken wife, "I can stay with you, but you can come to me." walls his loved ones where "there shall no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; ther shall there be any more pain." May all meet him there!

WHITE—Bro. B. W. White, of Rose Hill, Miss., was born Aug. 29, 1810, in Spartanburg district, S. C., and died May 13, 1900, aged eighty-nine years eight months and fourteen days. He came to Jasper county, Miss., while young, and has been here ever since. He professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, about sixty years ago.

Bro. White was a devoted husband and father, a true friend, a kind, efficient nurse in sickness; and it was the faithful discharge of these duties that rendered his loss irreparable in the community. He leaves a large circle of affectionate relatives and friends to lament his departure.

Bro. White was almost blind for the last two years of his life—for the last twelve months unable to see his way—yet he was never known to murmur or complain. He did not suffer but very little pain in his last illness. He was perfectly conscious until just a short time before his death. On Sunday night, May 13, he fell on sleep without a struggle, without a gasp or pain. His funeral was preached by this writer, and we laid him away in the Hickory Grove Cemetery on the evening of May 14. Quite a large crowd of his friends and relatives were in attendance.

J. H. Fonsman.

ROGERS—William Levi Rogers, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Rogers, was born in Tippah county, Miss., July 14, 1873. He professed religion and joined the Methodist Church at sixteen years of age. He was happily married to Miss Annie May Nisbet, Nov. 10, 1896. He departed this life March 30, 1900, at his home in New Albany, Miss. He leaves a loving wife, a bright, promising son; a number of relatives and a host of friends to mourn their loss, though they "sorrow not, even as others which have no hope."

Bro. Rogers was a true Christian, and loved and was always loyal to his church. He was steward for several years, and was recording steward when he died. He was held in high esteem by the people here, and they feel that a good and useful man has gone out from them. He was a kind father, a faithful, loving husband, and a true friend. He was willing to go, passing away with a pleasant smile, and giving every evidence that he had gone to be with God. We laid his remains to rest in Cornelius Cemetery to await the resurrection morn, when the dead in Christ shall rise and shall ever be with the Lord.

His pastor, J. B. Randolph.

BROWN—Elbert Brown was born Dec. 27, 1822; united with the M. E. Church, South, at Pine Grove, Pike county, Miss., September, 1855, at which time he was soundly converted.

Bro. Brown moved to Pine Grove, St. Helena parish, La., in 1860, and connected himself with the Pine Grove Church, where, for the last forty years, he has spent a life that has been worthy of imitation by all who knew him. There is no doubt but what Uncle Elbert will have stars in his crown, if there is such a token in the glory land of those whom he has been instrumental in leading to the Savior. His upright Christian life has had its effect in this community. He was obedient to that command of our Lord, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." On Sunday evening, April 1, as the sun went down behind the western horizon, very suddenly and very quietly his spirit took its flight to the other shore, there to rest with the redeemed till the resurrection morn. He leaves a wife and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

F. N. Sweeney, P. C.

NELSON—N. A. Sullivan was born Jan. 2, 1841; joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1896; was married to J. R. Nelson in January, 1859, and died Feb. 13, 1900.

Sister Nelson lived a consistent Christian life, and when she came to the terminus was able to demonstrate how a Christian can die. She exhorted her friends and relatives to be faithful to God, and meet her in heaven. Hers was a most triumphant death. She left a large circle of relatives and many friends, and one babe, which only lingered one month, and went to join its mother in the better world.

J. M. Franklin.

GANES—Died on May 6, at his home in Kemper county, Miss., Fountain Ganes, of la grippe, at the ripe old age of eighty-two years. He was once a member of the Christian Church, but for several years has been a consistent member of the Methodist Church. A short time before he passed away he expressed himself as being resigned to the will of God.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

Who's at the Helm.

When sickness once begins in a family the troubles multiply so fast that they seem to come in overwhelming waves. No wonder if sometimes one or both of the parents gives out under the strain and perhaps some kind neighbor or one of the younger members of the household has to seize the helm and keep the little family ship off the rocks of actual distress. The poor sick father or mother thinks "O, if I could only get on my feet and be at work how different it would be!"

Day after day the ailing one struggles to rise superior to the misery that weighs him or her down; hoping against hope that the next day will be a better one. The doctor is sent for. He gives all the "regulation" stereotyped remedies but they prove of no avail. Then follow more days and weeks—perhaps weary months—of waiting and hoping for the restoration that does not come; while every heart is filled with the foreboding question: "What will be the end?"

A man doesn't know what is the matter with him; he feels all the strength and energy oozing out of him; he can't work; he can't eat; he can't sleep; he can't even think clearly. He loses heart and courage and flesh; pretty soon he feels badly in his lungs. The doctors call it consumption and prescribe lung specifics. But what the man needs is a medicine to go deep down into the foundations of the trouble; clear the poison out of his blood; wake up his liver, purify, revitalize and build up his system from the foundation stone. He needs Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which has cured innumerable cases of obstinate liver complaint which the doctors diagnosed as hopeless consumption.

The work of this masterful "Discovery" begins at the very corner-stone of life in the stomach and nutritive organism. It gives appetite, nourishment, rich blood, healthy solid flesh. A cough is only a symptom; there are other things that make the cough; they must be got rid of first, the cough may be the last thing to go away.

Does Dr. Pierce claim to cure consumption?

That question isn't worth arguing. Look at the record. Take a case in point. Here is a man (or woman) with a hacking cough, a hectic flush, night-sweats, great emaciation or wasting of flesh, spitting of blood, shortness of breath and all the other symptoms. After every remedy and every local physician has failed, he, as a last resort, takes "Golden Medical Discovery" and the cough vanishes, the cheek gets back its natural color, sleep becomes sound and refreshing, the spitting of blood stops, flesh and muscles become firm, weight increases, and life goes along in quiet and comfort to the full limit of the three score years and ten.

But may be it wasn't consumption after all? May be it wasn't. You know it was something that was attacking the very citadel of life, and it was something that was cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. And Dr. Pierce is curing such "somethings" right along with a record of over a quarter of a million cases, and not more than three per cent. of failures.

One fact, at least, is well established. That the "Golden Medical Discovery" does cure weak lungs, bleeding from lungs, obstinate, lingering coughs, laryngitis, bronchitis, throat disease, and kindred affections of the air-passages, which, if neglected or badly treated, lead up to consumption, can no longer be doubted in view of the many thousands of well established cures of such cases reported by the most trustworthy citizens. Many of these cases have been pronounced consumption—and incurable—by the best local physicians before the sufferers commenced the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

More than half a million copies of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser were sold at $1.50 each, but a free paper-bound edition is now issued of which a copy will be sent absolutely without charge for the bare cost of mailing—21 one-cent stamps. These should be sent to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y. One copy only will be sent to one family. If a heavier cloth-bound copy is preferred ten stamps extra should be sent.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION
of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to July, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address Rev. W. C. Black.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The non-combatants at Tien Tsin have taken refuge on the warships.

The heavy rains in South Texas were of material benefit to the cotton crop

The business portion of Prescott, A. T., has been wiped out by fire, involving a loss of $1,500,000.

The American athletes carried off nearly all the honors at the International Games at Paris.

The elite of the German army is to be sent to China to officer the imperial troops to be sent there.

The fall of the Bastille was celebrated with becoming ceremony on July 14 by the local French colony.

When the latest information was received from China affairs at Pekin were steadily growing worse.

An uncorroborated dispatch from China says M. de Giers, the Russian minister, was boiled alive by the rioters.

The Algiers Dry Dock will be towed South by November. Only the best material has been used in its construction.

The branch road connecting the New Orleans and Northwestern and the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroads at Natchez has been completed.

The town of Llano, Tex., was badly damaged by a tornado July 15. A number of buildings were demolished and several persons seriously injured.

Felipe Buencamino, a Filipino leader, has issued a proclamation urging the Filipinos to recognize American authority and to organize a national party.

Li Hung Chang is suspected by the English authorities of being in collusion with the Boxers. An effort will be made to capture him and detain him as a hostage.

Archbishop Chapelle has taken a strong stand against the Filipino demand for the expulsion of the friars. He says the Filipino leaders should be decapitated.

A naval commission has reported that the cruiser "New Orleans" is defective in several material respects, especially in ventilation. The magazines are overheated to a dangerous point.

The German minister at Pekin was shot on the streets and carried to the Tsung Li Yamen, where he died. The German marines rushed to the Tsung Li Yamen and burned the building down.

A full regiment of Americans reached Tien Tsin in time to take part in a fierce fight on the eleventh. The Chinese attacked and were repulsed, the allies losing 150 men. The native loss was heavy, but the number is not known.

Secretary of War Root says that it has been decided to supplement the American force in China by all the available troops in the United States and Cuba, which he estimates at about 10,000. These troops will be started toward the Orient at the earliest possible moment.

Chinese Minister Wu has received a dispatch from the Imperial Director of Telegraphs at Shanghai saying the legations at Pekin were on the point of falling, July 7, and another dispatch stated the British legation had been captured and the foreigners killed.

Collis P. Huntington, having bought out his associates in the Southern Pacific, is one of the richest railroad men in the world, being sole owner of a system embracing ferries, terminals, river and ocean steamboat lines, and 7600 miles of railroad, representing $350,000,000 of securities and annual gross earnings of $60,000,000.

Lord Roberts' dispatch, reporting still another unfortunate occurrence, throws further light on the state of affairs in South Africa. Instead of the surrender of all of the remaining Boers being imminent, as recent telegrams had hinted, it seems that they have been making a concerted attempt to surround or recapture Pretoria, with much success in the region which was supposed to be pacified and in which no attack was expected. They succeeded in inflicting a serious defeat, and capturing two guns and some 200 men. It is evident that General Botha has a considerable force, seeing that he is able to press Lord Roberts' lines at a half-dozen points around Pretoria.

If you Feel Irritable
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
It makes a refreshing, cooling beverage, and is an invigorating tonic, soothing to the nerves.

Heavy fighting took place at Tien Tsin, July 13, between the allied forces, numbering 7000, and the Chinese, numbering 20,000. The allies were defeated. The Americans were in the thickest of the fight and sustained heavy losses, Col. Wilson H. Liscum of the Ninth Infantry and Capt. Davis of the marines being among the killed. The wounded include a number of officers.

The allied troops resumed the attack upon the Chinese walled City of Tien Tsin on July 14, and succeeded in breaching the walls and capturing all the forts. The Chinese were completely routed. The total losses of the allies in the engagements of Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Tien Tsin were about 800 killed and wounded.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.
They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:
Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE (For Young Ladies), JACKSON, MISS.
One of the most thoroughly equipped High Grade Schools in the South. Buildings new and modern, heated by steam and lighted with electricity. Bath rooms for hot and cold water on all floors. Beautiful campus of twelve acres of native forest trees. No school for girls in the South can show such a health record. During the past Winter, noted for epidemics of pneumonia, la grippe measles and small-pox all over the State, there was not a single case of any of the above diseases, or any serious case of sickness of any kind, in the college. The Faculty is composed of specialists in all departments. In Music, Elocution and Art the College offers exceptionally fine advantages. The authorities of the New England Conservatory of Music and Elocution say: "Of all our pupils from the Southern those from Belhaven College stand not only in the highest rank in their classes, but are regarded, without exception, as possessing those womanly traits of character and that degree of intellectual development which command instant respect and admiration." Next session begins October 1st, 1900. For our beautiful catalogue, address

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

With the retnrn of the President the news from China, by a coincidence, took a less discouraging tone. News of the capture of the Chinese walled city of Tien Tsin was received within a few hours of the President's arrival. That relieved a fear that the comparatively small allied force at Tien Tsin might be overpowered by Chinese. The Chinese Minister carried to Secretary Hay a positive denial of the generally accepted statement that all the foreigners in Pekin had been murdered, and the assnrance that the foreign ministers in Pekin were alive and well on the ninth instant. The Chinese Minister received the information in a cablegram dated Shanghai, July 16, and retransmitted at London on the seventeenth by the Chinese Minister.

Rev. Courtney H. Fenn and his wife, formerly Miss Alice May, of Washington, were, when last heard from, stationed in Pekin as missionaries, working nnder the auspices of the Presbyterian Board of Missions. A letter, dated May 29, was recently received by a Washington friend from Mrs. Fenn. It said they were living in daily terror of an ontbreak, the reports of the outrages of the Boxers being numerous and terrifying; that their native servants had deserted them, and the raport was current that the Boxers had determined on the extermination of the foreigners. Mr. and Mrs. Fenn were married about eight years ago, and went directly to Canton, where they have remained In tha absence of any word from them, it is assumed that they and thair two children were included in the horrible massacre of all the foreigners in Pekin.

A gentleman who carries a military title aronsed considerable interest in a group he addressed by taking the ground that, regardless of its cause, a war between China and the civilized nations would be beneficial to Christianity. He said: "War with China would be a powerful bond in preserving peace among the Christian nations. If the soldiers of the allied powers fought side by side in a great conflict, it would bind ties that the exigencies of world politics would have difficulty in breaking. The spirit of comradeship that comes from fighting and suffering in a common cause knits the strongest sympathy that man can know. Not only would the sympathy prevail among the soldiers in the field, but it would extend to their friends at home, waiting in anxiety for news of the battle. The mother in America would understand the heartache of the mother in England, in Germany, in Russia, and even in distant Japan, and do you suppose she would ever look with favor upon a war that would take her son into conflict with the man who had stood at his side in China; had given him a drink of water, perhaps, when he lay suffering from wounds? I think not, and I believe all Americans, all Englishmen, all Germans, and the peoples of the other powers engaged, would feel in unison with the mother. As the nations come to know each other better, war between them grows more improbable, and nothing could bring knowledge quicker than war against a common foe."

Mr. A. B. Herold, of Chicago, who has been all through Northern China, said to a Washington acquaintance: "Unthinking people are inclined to look upon China as a tropical country, where it is Summer all the year. Nothing could be more erroneous. China is a big country, and while the southern part is tropical in a certain sense, the north of China is a land where they have Winters with snow and ice and a temperature much lower than the average for the northern portion of the United States. In Cuba and the Philippines the complaint has been that our soldiers suffered from the heat. If we have soldiers in China this Winter, we'll hear of suffering from the cold. Sending soldiers from the tropical Philippines for a Winter campaign in Northern China would, I fear, be as disastrous as Napoleon's march to Moscow. For the sake of our troops, I sincerely hope the trouble in China will be ended before cold weather sets in, but I very much doubt its speedy ending."

OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This Conference convened in Opelousas, Tuesday, June 26, and closed Friday, June 29. The attendance of preachers was as good as usual, but the lay brethren did not appear in force. One of the problems of this time is, How to secure the attendance of laymen at our Conference sessions? It seems to me that a larger attendance of delegates would bring larger returns for the good of the church, but I know men of large experience who say that the church is to be congratulated that no more attend than do! Our Conference was a pleasant and profitable session to all present, and the spiritual influences were deep and pervasive.

From all that was brought out in the routine work, I judge the church to be in a better condition, in many respects, than at this time last year. There have been held in several places revival meetings of great power, resulting in quickening the consciences of sinners and deepening the godly living of the saints. There has been quite a revival on the building line. As to parsonages, New Iberia has made additions which greatly increase the comfort of the pastor's family; Morgan City has reconstructed her parsonage; Lake Arthur has built a new one, and Indian Bayou added needed improvements. As to churches: Lake Charles has a splendid new edifice about completed; Gueydan has a nice structure well under way, and Franklin expects to dedicate her new house before the session of the Annual Conference. As to finances, the out look is more hopeful than last year. The salaries of the preachers up to date compares well with past years, and the collections will go above.

The preaching at the Conference was good to the use of edifying. Bro. Tucker gave us a strong missionary address, and Dr. LaPrade gave us a fresh impetus on the Twentieth Century Movement. These two addresses will work good for us on these two important lines, and we are expecting to reap large results between this and Conference.

I think the brethren who were in attendance agreed that it was the most spiritual and, therefore, delightful Conference which has been held in this district. I think one reason for that is, we turned ourselves loose on the old Methodist hymns.

Opelousas entertained us well, and its pastor was in his element as host. Next year we go to Crowley.

THE ECUMENICAL AGAIN.

Southern Methodism was well represented in the Ecumenical Conference. Bishops Granbery and Hendrix were there, and a hundred others from our division of the Christian army. Our own Dr. W. R. Lambuth bore a prominent part in the discussion of one of the most important matters considered by the Conference, "Self-Support by Mission Churches." Bishop Hendrix presided at one of the meetings in Carnegie Hall, and Bishop Granbery was chairman of a called meeting of Southern Methodist delegates, held at Hotel Albert. Here a number of our missionaries from China, Japan, Mexico, Cuba, and elsewhere, made inspiring talks. One missionary stated that he had been compelled to suspend more than a hundred Bible readings and other services for lack of money to carry them on; another replied: "Why did you not let me know you were in lack of means? I would have supplied you myself for that work rather than let it stop" Enthusiasm ran high, and a brother proposed to recommend the holding of a general Missionary Conference for all Southern Methodism in the near future. I thought of comparing Mantua to Rome, and of Peter's ecstatic dream, when he proposed to build three tabernacles and abide on the Mount of Transfiguration. Nevertheless, the resolution passed without opposition, and our Board of Missions, acting upon this suggestion, has since resolved to call a Missionary General Conference, consisting of one thousand members, to meet in the year 1901. Though Southern Methodism has much enlarged her missionary operations during the last quarter of a century, yet it was a humiliating joy to discover in the great Ecumenical (if we did not know it before) that ours is but a small part of the mighty host who are spreading Christ's kingdom in the world.

The entertainment of so large a body was not a small matter, even for New York City; yet there was no lack along this line. All foreign delegates were entertained free, and arrangements were made whereby American delegates, who paid their own expenses, could live well at moderate rates. Meals were served at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, near the Hall, in good style and at prices to which none could object.

With this Conference, Christian missions to the heathen will, doubtless, pass from the apologetic to the authoritative period of their history. Heretofore missions have been on trial before the world, and even before the church, and were obliged perpetually to defend their right to exist. An able writer declares: "Christian missions early in this century labored under a cloud of suspicion and distrust. Ultra-Calvinists could see no good reason for meddling with the divine decrees. The directors of the East India Company declared, nearly one hundred years ago, that the sending of Christian missionaries into England's Eastern possessions was the maddest, most expensive, most unwarranted project that was ever proposed by a lunatic enthusiast. Even so late as 1863 the London Times lamented the lack of satisfactory results."

Up to this time there have been those in the church, as well as out of it, who have opposed foreign missions as inexpedient or useless undertakings. They thought the money spent on missions wasted, and pitied the missionaries as honest fanatics, sacrificing themselves for no good. Now, the world is challenged to recognize the demonstrated fact that among all the forces of civilization employed to elevate the heathen, none is more powerful and efficacious to uplift and to change than the work of Christian missionaries in heathen lands. While mankind turn their attention to the combined results of the labors of more than a hundred missionary societies, the littleness of local achievements, here and there, disappears, and they behold with admiration and wonder the mighty revolutions wrought by the missionaries. He who hereafter opposes missions proclaims himself inonrably ignorant or invincibly prejudiced. The church need no longer apologize for her missionary collections, but in the name and by the authority of the Master command all Christians to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty.

All doors are open to Christian civilization, and there will henceforth be rivalry between the churches as to who shall enter them first. The Lord of the whole earth commands the Christians to preach, and the heathen to hear the gospel of salvation. Guilty will the Christians be if they preach not; guilty and lost will the heathen be if they heed not. Divine compulsions drive recalcitrants to heed the law of life. Missionaries will return to their fields of labor with redoubled hope, energy, and courage. To have merely seen the Ecumenical Conference is enough to fill the heart of many a missionary, who had, perhaps, labored in loneliness and discouragement, with new and joyous inspiration and confidence in the final outcome of his toils. If we have not solved the problem of Christianizing the world, we have, at least, placed a statement of it clearly before us.

A native young woman from India, educated there in mission schools, delivered an address in English with wonderful ease and elegance of language and utterance. I wondered if any speaker who might follow her could equal her in the use of English. Fortunately for the reputation of Americans as speakers of English, a Mrs. Montgomery, from Rochester, N. Y., was called to follow her, and proved to be so skillful and elegant in the use of her native tongue as to make all Americans feel glad that there was present at least one American woman who could speak English as well as the girl from India. Among other good things the young woman from India told us was, that the English language is the only thing that gives promise of uniting India Persons from different parts of India can not converse because they speak different languages. But the English language will unify the whole 250,000,000 when they all learn it, as eventually they must.

Nothing impressed me more, except the work of the missionaries, than the evident prospect that the English language and the English Bible are destined to Christianize, and thereby to unify the world.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

My, my, how hot the weather is! It is wilting to every green thing short of moisture. It wilts me. I am short of sap and juice. Long rides melt me, preaching melts me, and reading melts me. Fact is, I have been sick, and I am flimsy and somewhat no account. Heavy, hard work, like Grenada district, calls for strong young men, or very vigorous old men. It requires physical force. I am not as young nor as strong as I was twenty-five years ago.

The preachers are all in place and all hard at work. They are fine men, everyone of them. The grass is short, and the grazing close and hard on some of the charges. Preachers and goats can live and thrive and do well where other men and animals would starve.

The rains, from May 28 to July 8, cut off our crops fully one-half. This country will not make corn enough to last till January, 1901. The cotton crop is to make yet. Tens and hundreds of thousands of acres have been abandoned to the grass and weeds. Our creek and branch bottom lands were drowned out. As you know, economy and charity both begin at the house of God, and often both end where they begin.

District Conference comes off at Oakland, Miss., between Grenada and Memphis, July 26-29. You, Mr. Editor, are booked for that meeting. Come on time, and come brimful of good things. We will need you and will use you. No applicant yet for license to preach. Some two or three young men will ask for recommendation for admission on trial into traveling connection. Fine young men they are. Some may ask for orders. This presiding elder provided no programme. The order of business is laid down in the Discipline; we will follow that. In Conference we meet to confer. Some of our meetings are programmed too much. Freedom of action is lost by the increase of harness. We will have a live and lively meeting. It is quite a tax for some members to get to District Conference on this district. Eighty miles across the country for some, and one hundred and fifty by rail for others. We hope to have a full meeting. The roll shows one hundred and thirty-six members. If all were present, we would have a big meeting. The laymen are largely in the majority in our Church, Quarterly and District Conferences. If the beginnings are not right, the laymen are to blame for it. They can and do have their own way at the beginning.

There is a great work in all this country for local preachers to do, if we only had them. They are not here. Local preachers are now few and far between. I am sorry of this. We need them. Forty good men could find plenty of work to do in the bounds of this district In many places the foundations were laid and the churches built by godly local preachers. An exhorter would be a curiosity now. The race is nearly extinct. Men are not called of God to exhort or to serve as local preachers, or, being called, they do not answer. The matter of efficient help in protracted meetings is a serious trouble to our pastors. If pastors help pastors, they have to pay back in tax in kind. A pastor with ten or twelve appointments has about all he can well do. He is short of time for work at home, to say nothing of helping others. Some of the greatest evangelists I have ever known have been local preachers. Men of gifts, of grace, and anointed of God. I wish we had more of them. We need them greatly. GILDEROY.

TRI-STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The second annual Tri-State League Conference opens its sessions on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 11 A. M., and closes on Thursday eve, Aug. 9, on Seashore Camp Grounds, near Biloxi, Miss.

This Conference is attracting only less attention than the great Southern League Conference in Atlanta. The well-understood purpose of the Tri-State Conference is to promote systematic study of God's Word, awaken a more intelligent interest in missions, to train leaders for ALL the departments of League work, Junior, Literary, Charity and Help, etc. This is not a Missionary Conference, as some suppose, but is for the development of each and every department.

The Bible classes are to be taught by Prof. Thos. Carter, of Tulane University, and A. C. Harte, of Mobile, Ala.

The School of Methods will be presided over by Rev. P. L. Cobb, of Nashville, Tenn. In this school the principles and methods of League work will be discussed thoroughly. Mr. Cobb will be assisted by a corps of the most prominent and successful League workers from several States. The book on missions in next year's reading course, "Japan and its Regeneration," will be studied and reviewed.

The list of speakers includes the following prominent names: Dr. W. R. Lambuth, D. D.; Rev. H. W. Featherstun, D. D.; Rev. F. N. Parker, Rev. Alonzo Monk, D. D.; W. P. Stott, Rev. S. S. Keener, D. D.; Rev. W. P. Hurt, Rev. G. B. French, Rev. J. C. Park. Dr. H. M. DuBose will be in attendance during the entire Conference.

Board and lodging can be had as cheap as five dollars per week. No tuition will be charged, but a gate fee of fifty cents will be taken on entering grounds. Have baggage checked and mail directed to Seashore Camp Grounds. The railroads will give reduced rates; take a certificate when you purchase tickets.

No better investment can be made by any League than to send one of their number to bring back the practical knowledge and spiritual quickening to be received at this Institute. Everyone welcome.

The 20th Century Movement.

Surely Methodists can afford to make a liberal thank-offering once in a hundred years.

Bishop Galloway states that contributions to the Southern Methodist Twentieth Century Fund have already reached nearly one million dollars. There is scarcely any doubt that the additional half million will be forthcoming during the next six months.

Chancellor Kirkland announced at the close of the Vanderbilt commencement exercises that Mr. Samuel Cupples, of St Louis, had authorized the announcement that he would give to the Biblical Department of the University $50,000, on condition that $100,000 more be raised within a year. We believe that this generous offer of Mr. Cupples will be met by the Twentieth Century Movement. The pro rata of the undirected gifts should make at least $300,000. But we trust that, in addition to this, there will be individual Methodists of large means who will come forward promptly to meet Mr. Cupples' offer.—New Century Education.

A brother asked Dr. Godbey, of the Arkansas Methodist, to "call a halt on the Twentieth Century collections," and got the following for his pains: "If he has gotten too much money for our church schools, or if his people have injured themselves by giving, he may call a halt. But the man who has not gotten enough subscriptions to insure his apportionment in solid cash had better not think of halting. We are ashamed that our church did not undertake larger things in this matter, and if, with our means and our great needs, our people are found so lacking in faith and consecration that they fail now to give what we are asking for, we shall favor the call of a season of humiliation, prayer, and fasting, and then pass the hat again."

Rev. A. L Andrews, Alabama Conference Secretary of Education, sends the following inspiring report for June:

"So far in June we have raised $3,051.59. I feel sure that there is more real enthusiasm on the subject than there has ever been within the bounds of our Conference. I presented the subject at the Prattville District Conference last Sunday, and a fine collection was taken amid intense enthusiasm. Our people will respond generously whenever they understand the causes and aims of the great movement. I am working hard, and so are most of the district secretaries. Two presiding elders have reported to me the amounts raised on their districts: Montgomery, $4 059 45; Prattville, $2 607.09." —New Century Education.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

The Twentieth Century Thank-offering Movement in the Methodist Church, South, had been presented, at least, earnestly. After the service a girl came forward; her care-worn, sorrow-stricken face attracted the preacher's attention at once. She drew from her pocket a little lean-looking purse, and from it took a silver quarter. Giving it to the preacher, she said, "I wish I had more, but I have not now; I may have more some time." That girl had just buried her poor old afflicted father whom she nursed for years. She has a small piece of very poor land, and every day works hard to make a living for herself and mother. She does all the work herself, holding the plow with her own hands while it is drawn by an ox; yet from her penury she found an amount for this great movement that is now pulsating Methodism on both sides of the Atlantic. Will she not appear at the judgment to condemn those who are withholding their plenteous thousands from this righteous and needy cause?—Lucius J. Bailard, in Wesleyan Advocate.

KIND ACTS.

Never are kind acts done
To wipe the weeping eyes,
But like the flashes of the sun
They signal to the skies;
And up above the angels read
How we have helped the sorer need.

Never a day is given
But it tones the after years,
And it carries up to heaven
Its sunshine or its tears;
While the to-morrows stand and wait,
The silent mutes by the outer gate.

STUDENT MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

(Address delivered by Prof. O. E. Staples at Louisiana State Conference of Epworth Leagues in session, assembled at Arcadia, La., and ordered published.)

Situated in a system of worlds ruled by laws of omniscience, the thinking mind readily realizes the necessity of learning all possible about its origin, environment, possibilities, and destiny. Consigned to a sin-smitten planet, mar, amid the throes of dejection and oppression, has ever and anon taken a stride forward toward his divinely-purposed goal: but the measure of his steps is determined by ascertaining to what extent he has thought God's thoughts after him. The Anglo-Saxon civilization of the nineteenth century, the most ideal civilization of the world's history, is an amalgamation of the providential, humanizing elements of the nations of the past, so that what we are to-day, we are by virtue of the God-directed thought of the past sixty centuries.

The germs of all permanent civilizing forces were first conceived in the struggling soul of some devout intellectual genius. Tear from the world's records the mental products of the miraculous minds of Socrates, St. Paul, Martin Luther, and John Wesley, and numberless volumes now pregnant with hope, life, and promise would teem with servitude, death, and despair. In other words, all human efforts to be enduring in their results must be based upon pious intelligence. An intelligent and conscientious analysis of Christianity shows that "Christian missions is the fundamental and essential and bottom principle of the life of the church of Jesus Christ and of the life of the individual man in Jesus Christ."

The Epworth League, though the youngest, is, to be sure, not the least significant offspring of the great Methodist Church; and when reminded that the Methodist Church stands originally for a peculiarly missionary type of Christianity, we are made to feel that the League can ill afford to be indifferent towards that which has ever been the life-giving source of its divinely-panoplied foster-mother. Since the memorable Haystack Conference Movement of 1806, the church has been meagerly manifesting a consciousness of its obligation "to go into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature"; but not until within the last decade has the great body of thought-producers and thought-consumers of so-called Christian nations been made to feel effectually that "Christian missions," in the words of Max Muller, "is the most momentous movement in this most momentous century."

The Student Volunteer Movement is the providential outcome of a suggestion made by Mr. L. D. Wishard to the sainted Moody, in the Spring of 1886, that he call together at Mt. Hermon, Mass., that Summer all the college students of North America who were interested in Christian missions. Keenly susceptible to every intimation adapted to the advancement of his Master's kingdom, this far-seeing and great-souled evangelist eagerly embraced the idea; and there at Mt. Hermon, in one of Dame Nature's choicest and most inspiring spots, two hundred and fifty-one delegates from the leading colleges of this country met and spent four weeks in Bible study, private prayer, and soul searching; and when the season of agonizing and spiritual purging was over just one hundred students volunteered to carry the unsearchable riches to men the lamp of life denied.

Two years later the movement thus begun assumed organized form and declared its fourfold purpose to be: (1) to awaken and maintain among all Christian students of the United States and Canada an intelligent and active interest in foreign missions; (2) to enroll a sufficient number of properly qualified student volunteers to meet the successive demands of the various missionary boards of North America; (3) to help all such intending missionaries to prepare for their life-work and to enlist their co-operation in developing the missionary life of the home churches; (4) to lay an equal burden of responsibility on all students who are to remain as ministers and lay workers at home, that they may actively promote the missionary enterprise by their intelligent advocacy and prayers. What broader base, what higher ideal, what more symmetrical proportions could have been set forth as their conception of a missionary platform? What an inviting field for the investment of consecrated genius! What an auspicious opportunity for the application of a holy ambition!

Since then, fifteen hundred volunteers have gone out under the direction of forty-six missionary societies to fifty-three different countries. Moreover, at the inception of the movement the colleges, seminaries, and universities of this country were giving only $5000 annually to foreign missions, whereas in 1898 they gave $40,000. Six years ago, when the Student Volunteer Movement first instituted its systematic and progressive study of missions, there were not thirty such classes in all the collegiate institutions of North America, while year before last there were 267 such classes, having 2361 students, and using $20,000 worth of fresh missionary literature. Nor has the movement contented itself with a mere increase in the number of missionary candidates; for the various Boards have voluntarily testified that the general secretaries of the movement have, by their Christian conservatism and scholarly judgment, and by their systematic process of testing, sifting, and training, very materially improved the quality of the missionary applicants. That this condition should have been fulfilled long ago is properly appreciated and fully realized only by those who are most thoroughly and intimately acquainted with the heathen character and its environment.

Throughout the broad domains of paganism some form of pantheism, polytheism, atheism, idealism, materialism, or fetichism in its baldest and subtlest type, is constantly encountered, and must be overcome. Many of us were long under the false impression that all heathen are illiterate, weak-minded, and effeminate, while the fact is, the disciples of Confucius, Buddha, Mahomet, Laotze and Sarasawati would rank high among the profoundest scholars of Christendom. Power to understand the intricacy and complexity of their systems of learning and philosophy, as well as the ability to apprehend and appreciate the workings of their minds which are imbued with the mental products of many generations, is a condition indispensable to real missionary efficiency.

The intellectual status of the Hindu may be approximated by citing a few of the questions put by a Hindu student to Dr. Wilbur White, college secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Calcutta. See how many of his interrogatories you could satisfactorily explain, even to one with whose character, language and environment you are reasonably familiar. Question 1. "Why was Christ's ministry limited to three years?" 2. "Did Christ's knowledge of his divinity come to him gradually or suddenly?" 3. "Where are departed spirits?" 4. "Is war right?" 5. "Who died upon the cross? Jesus the God, or Jesus the man? If God, why did he cry out, 'My God! why hast thou forsaken me?' If man, how can we suppose that a man's death could atone for the sins of the whole world?" But you say some of these questions are unanswerable; yet the missionary must possess the tact and scholarship, as well as the grace and godliness necessary, to discuss intelligently and reason successfully with the propounder of such abstruse inquiries.

Then let us insist that educational preparation is at the basis of all effectual missionary work. And as Dr. O. E. Brown, of Vanderbilt University, formerly a missionary to China, so aptly says: "The occasional reading of a missionary article or leaflet, the occasional hearing of a missionary sermon or address, may beget a kind of curious, vague and indefinite interest in missions, but can scarcely induce any intelligent effort on behalf of the great cause. On the other hand, the careful study of a great missionary life, such as that of Jno. G. Paton; the painstaking mastery of the conditions of a great missionary field, such as that of China; the intelligent insight into the workings of a great missionary institution, such as that of Calcutta—such systematic efforts may well be expected to bear fruit in effective work." And such is the contemplated purpose of the Student Volunteer Movement in its missionary campaign among the young people's societies of Protestantism.

In the Summer of 1898, without money and without price, save their expenses, one hundred and sixty college students in ninety days visited 1,000 young people's societies, addressed more than 100,000 people, organized six hundred missionary committees, sold 10,400 volumes of missionary literature, formed three hundred mission study classes, pledged 15,000 persons to systematic giving to foreign missions, received the hearty indorsement of the pastors and flocks of twenty different States, and, grandest of all, quickened and stirred into action the spiritual life of hundreds and thousands of souls immortal.

What, then, shall be the attitude of the Epworth League towards this movement, which, by its modernized process of evangelization, is so fast making known the world and its contents; this humanizing force, which is so rapidly coloring the maps of earth; tracing the lines of nations and empires, revealing the racial and tribal peculiarities of peoples hitherto unknown, training and equipping devout intellects to scatter the spiritual darkness which, for centuries past, has rested like a pall upon scores of benighted lands? Says Mr. Taylor, of Drew Theological Seminary: "If the Student Missionary Campaign could be generally carried on in all Protestant denominations, it would result: (1) In the organization in every young people's society of a missionary committee that would create and maintain missionary interest; (2) in the placing of a missionary library, which, if wisely used, would speedily revolutionize the thought of our young people in regard to foreign missions; (3) obedience to Christ's last command would react powerfully upon the spiritual life of our young people; (4) personal contact with college students who conduct these campaigns would awaken in many hearts a desire for better preparation for life-work, whereby many would be influenced to go to college, and some be led to become volunteers; (5) the youth of our country would receive training in systematic giving, which would result in the happy solution of the vexatious money problem.

No doubt the simultaneous uprising of these young people's movements is providential rather than accidental; and if we, as an Epworth League, fail to maintain and foster the fraternal relation so auspiciously established, the results will prove damaging, both to us and the movement at large. Though but one link in the vast chain, without us it is too short, in the language of this century's greatest bard, "to bind the whole round world with gold chains about the feet of God."

Then, if we are not familiar with the origin, purposes and plans of the Student Volunteer Movement in its missionary campaign, our first duty is to learn about it, that we may not come under the ban of the immortal Shakespeare, who, looking with prophetic eye down the centennial vistas of the future, exclaimed in a breath apparently almost inspired, "Ignorance is the curse of God; knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heaven."

When each one of us at home feels that our State, our district, our local League are all part and parcel of this world-wide movement, and that, individually, each of us is personally responsible to give and to pray for some special field and some particular missionary, then, and not until then, will we have that vital interest in the work which shall make our lives an express manifestation of our meaning motto, "All for Christ;" and yet this motto sounds but one clear note in the whole gamut rung out by the watchword of the Student Volunteer Movement, "The evangelization of the world in this generation." Then let us up and be doing, for well has it been said that "we of this nation and generation occupy the Gibraltar of the ages;" "we stretch our hands into the future, with power to mold the destiny of unborn millions."

"We are living in a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling;
To be living is sublime."

REMINISCENCES AND RUMINATIONS.

Mr. Editor: "What manner of communications are these that ye have, one with another?"

This question came to mind as I thought of the next issue of our paper. As it has reached the summit of its age in journalism, and can therefore proudly boast of "a local habitation and a name," and also in contemplating the many attempts that have been made along this line wherever journalistic genius has loomed up with bright dreams of success, only to end in disastrous failure, we may be pardoned if in this semi-centennial of our dear old Advocate, we should "glory a little;" that I "may not seem to terrify" the readers by letters that might be "weighty and powerful." "Let not any think" we are "boasting of things without our measure."

As several of our former editors are still spared to speak for themselves, it occurred to this scribe that in this important epoch in our big Advocate family it would be well to let the first editor, our lamented Bishop, H. N. McTyeire, though being dead, yet speaks in this great centennial issue of our beloved paper. In looking over some of my old scrap books I found the following editorial letter, which I copy verbatim. In this day of rapid transit this may be an eye-opener to some of our latter-day preachers.

(Editorial Letter.)

Leaving Nashville by the Chattanooga railroad, Monday, 2 P. M., December 13, I lighted from the cars at New Orleans, Friday, 7 P. M., the sixteenth. Connections are well enough while the iron rail does not give out, but confusion when it does, and every evil work to a traveler. The Mississippi Central railroad was in running order a few miles below Water Valley. At that point a stage was waiting for a small company of us. Had no dinner, and shall get no supper; and there at a neat farm-house, while the stages are loading with baggage and mails, we took a meal about five o'clock, Tuesday afternoon.

A NEW DISH.

Time was, even at courts, when the inventor of a variety for the palate was honored, as well as soldiers and others who had achieved something for mankind and their country. One good thing about a good dish is that it can not be patented. This meal was in country style, better than French; vegetables fresh, poultry tender, butter in clear, thick slices; milk in tumblers more than accidentally half full, coffee smoking hot and all abundant. One dish struck the fancy of a hungry man. It was fresh pork hashed with large biscuit halved to soak up the grease. It was called "Mississippi bottom." Rich; and if any man can stand it, 'twill sustain him through cold weather and a long journey.

Two young men soon left—one at Coffeeville, the other at Grenada—and I was for the balance of the way in a gang by myself. Imagine a nine-passenger coach over a rough road, with one body rolling about like a huckleberry in a wagon. About daylight, next morning, Mr. Driver shouts, "Hello, passenger; can get breakfast here." But who could eat at that hour, especially with the memory of "Mississippi bottom" on his stomach? Passed on slowly, lonesomely, failing behind schedule time every hour. No dinner-house; no supper, but a few cold bits at Goodmar, where the coach arrived at 9 P. M., Wednesday night. Goodman was the name of the highest depot in railroad connection with New Orleans. Awaked at 4 o'clock in the morning; invited to a hastily heated breakfast, served by drowsy servants, and my host in his night-clothes. Had to fall back on "Mississippi bottom" once more. At Canton, so busy changing baggage and self from one train to another and buying ticket, "Twenty minutes for breakfast," escaped my ear. Fellow-passengers coming in with contented air tantalized me with the information, as "All aboard" was sung out, that a fine breakfast "might have been" had there. But "Mississippi bottom" sustained me. A number one dining-station is ahead; some consolation in that. Cars ran off the track below Brookhaven; had to be put on. A wheel broke below Bogue Chitto; a long delay. Appetite passed away with the prandial assignation. I fell back on "Mississippi bottom," merely going through the motions when a saloon was thrown open at Magnolia Station. Now behind, the train runs its best, but it is after supper and the family gone to church when I ring the bell at the door of my friend's house in New Orleans. Will not allow them to go to cooking. There is a cold, but strong cup of coffee, a waffle left, and I go to bed on that with reflections on "Mississippi bottom." Wake to a royal breakfast. So it was. I went from the Northern line of Mississippi to New Orleans, from Tuesday to Friday, on the strength of one dish—"Mississippi bottom." I commend it to the traveling Christian public.

The year this was written is not on the paper, but I think it was in 1853. The dear Bishop and his friend he speaks of, R. Monnt, in the above letter have long ago clasped hands "where the smile of the Lord is the feast of the soul," and nearly all of the company that then gathered at the old Felicity Street Church to hear Rev. H. N. McTyeire, the first editor of the Advocate, hold forth in his inimitable way have gone over to join "the great majority," and to this writer comes the blessed peace that sings—

"One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er:
I'm nearer my home to-day
Than I've ever been before."

A GREAT NEED SOON TO BE SUPPLIED.

The Rev. J. F. G. Finley, of the Los Angeles Conference, M. E. Church, South, has a book now going through the press entitled, "One Gospel," which is designed to supply a great want of long standing. The book is intended to blend all the Gospels in one connected story in chronologic order, and also to explain the seeming inconsistencies in some of their statements.

Everyone interested in Christian work will readily recognize the need of such a book, and it will greatly obviate the work of Sunday-school superintendents and all Bible teachers. If there is any specific work of this character extant, this correspondent is not cognizant of it.

A number of our best Sunday-school superintendents, Christian educators, and preachers, among whom are three of our Bishops, who have examined the work, give it the highest endorsement and recommendation. The introduction is from the trenchant and facile pen of Bishop Hendrix.

Bro. Finley is an alumnus of Hendrix College; is among the most scholarly, thoughtful, patnstaking, and consecrated men living. To all who know him personally, the fact that he is the author is the only necessary credential to insure the great worth of the book, and that it will more than meet every claim he makes for it. Q. A. Oats.

WHISKY IN MANSFIELD.

The Mansfield Female College is owned by the M. E. Church, South, and controlled by the Louisiana Conference; therefore, every Methodist in the State should be (if they are not) interested in its welfare, and as I was at the laying of the corner-stone of the college, and feel a deep interest in its prosperity, I propose to call the attention of the Methodists all over the State to what I think is a drawback to its prosperity. Many years ago the Baptists at Keachi succeeded in getting an act passed by the State Legislature prohibiting the sale of whisky within eight miles of their school at that place. And now Grand Cane has succeeded in getting a bill before the present Legislature to prohibit the sale of whisky within five miles of their high school, and here we are with a fine female college, and two saloons in less than one quarter of a mile of the college door. Why? Because a little four-by-six corporation, with not over seventy voters, say, by a small majority, that they want whisky.

When our girls are walking the streets they are liable to come in contact with men that are drunk and using language that no one would like to have their girls listen to. It is a well-known fact that when men are under the influence of whisky that they lose respect for themselves and everyone else. Now, surely such a noble body of men as constitute the Louisiana Conference can bring such pressure to bear upon the Legislature of the State as to force them to pass a law prohibiting the sale of the accursed stuff within eight miles of the college. Shall we, as God-fearing and God-loving men and women, sit supinely by and let, say, forty men dictate to us about this matter, when such a large body of Christian men and women have such vital interest at stake?

There are a good many good people here, but they fear the saloon influences, and obey their voice. I am in the fight to the death, and call upon every minister and every Christian in the State to come to the rescue with no uncertain sound, for if the devil ever did have a stronger lever power to drag men down to hell than the saloon, I have never come in contact with it.

Now, I am no reformed drunkard. I never did drink at all, but I have noted the damaging and blighting influence of the saloon all my life, and want to do all I can to save my fellow-man from an eternal hell. Paul says to the Galatians, "Drunkenness, revellings, and such like; they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

Brethren, we need your help, and need it bad. We want your prayers; we want your work and your influence. Shall we appeal in vain? I sincerely hope not.

Yours for God and humanity,
J. A. Jarratt.

The Christian Life.

WHICH?

There are two ways of spending the Sabbath—idly and devotionally. You spend the Sabbath in one of these ways. Which?

There are two classes of people in the world—the righteous and the wicked. You belong to one of these two classes. Which?

There are two great rulers in the universe—God and Satan. You are serving under one of these two rulers. Which?

There are two roads which lead through time to eternity—the broad and the narrow road. You are walking in one of these two roads. Which?

There are two deaths which people die—some "die in the Lord," others "die in their sins." You will die one of these deaths. Which?

Ponder these questions, pray over them, and the issue will assuredly be your salvation.—Presbyterian.

THEY FLY AWAY.

"He heapeth up riches and knoweth not who shall gather them," says the inspired writer. All the wealth of the nation, it is said, passes through the Probate Court once in thirty-five years. Man's grasp upon the world, be his hand large or small, is soon loosened. Where no laws of entail interfere, there is practically a readjustment of all properties three times in each century. Corporations may be long-lived, but the stock is shuffled and passed to new hands constantly. So far as we can recall this moment, there is not a millionaire descendant in this country of the millionaire families of the Revolution. In America, at least, "It is only three generations from shirt-sleeves back to shirt-sleeves."—Richmond Advocate.

"The Lord will provide," but he will not provide everything. He gives a man brains, but he does not supply a willingness to use them. He puts the raw materials of manufacture in the way of humanity, but he does not present ready-made the finished products of the loom or lathe. There is no beatitude for the lazy, and even heaven provides small comfort for the stupid. What God blesses is faith, vigor, alertness, and patient perseverance. God works with those who are willingly workers together with him.—N. Y. Observer.

Fix it all up, friend, fix it all up before the doctor wears a troubled look on his face and tells some member of the family at low breath, out in the hall, that the "complications are grave." Be ready for that last siege on a bed of pain. Ready, ready, ready.—Midland Methodist.

Said Dr. Joseph Parker, of London, recently: "I am still standing with the Bible in my hand. The higher criticism has not cost me an hour's sleep."

REV. A. B. NICHOLSON.

MR. EDITOR: I see that my old friend and brother, my spiritual father and colaborer in the Lord's vineyard, is no more. I almost envy him the rest he is now enjoying with God and the holy angels.

I first got acquainted with him in 1855. He was traveling the Franklinton circuit, in the bounds of, what was then, the Covington district. Rev. Geo. D. Wade, late of North Mississippi Conference, was the preacher in charge of China Grove, then called Pearl River circuit. Bro. Wade was a faithful, earnest preacher, a good man, loved by nearly every one that knew him. In the month of May, 1855, Bro. Wade, assisted by Bro. Nicholson, held a meeting at Old Pine Grove Church, six miles south of China Grove. Bro. Nicholson did not get there until Monday, the fifth day of May. I had been under conviction for some time. I had often, in other days, gone forward for prayers when penitents were called for. Up to this time I found no relief, nor was I fully decided as to my future course. While Bro. Nicholson was preaching a soul-stirring sermon from the text, "He is a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief," also, "He is altogether lovely," I was enabled to realize the presence of God, through Christ, in the remission of all my sins. While he was giving us a beautiful and thrilling account of the life, suffering, crucifixion, death, burial and resurrection of Christ, I became almost unconscious of my surroundings, so deeply interested I was in the sermon. Just as he reached the point where Christ said to Mary Magdalene and others, 'Go tell my disciples and Peter," etc., a sense of joy and peace came into my heart, such as I had never experienced before. I believed and entered into the kingdom of heaven. The joy I experienced was "inexpressible and full of glory." It was not, however, until I decided, deep down in my heart, to be a Christian at any cost, that I obtained this rich experience. "The Lord is near in the valley of decision." H. P. LEWIS.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

We feel that the success of last session was largely due to the assistance given us by our brethren, and, therefore, we call upon the pastors of the North Mississippi Conference to give us their sympathy and co-operation during this Summer's canvass, and we are sure that our success will be secured. The brethren could help us very much by sending us the names of those who expect to go off to college somewhere. What we need here most of all is another building; however, we will try in some way to provide for all those who come. Grenada promised to give us about $4,000, and the Conference $6,000, but the Conference has not yet collected her Twentieth Century Fund, and the Board would not agree for us to start the building until all the money is collected. While this will delay us in securing our new annex, there is no doubt that we will get it in the near future; provided that our pastors will preach the Twentieth Century Fund, and thereby seize one of the greatest opportunities ever offered in our church to help the cause of Christian education.

We are truly glad to report that notwithstanding the depression in business matters that has been caused by the continuous rains, that the prospects for a large school next year were never more flattering at this time.

Thanking the brethren for their sympathy and help in the past, and praying the blessings of God upon them in their great work of preaching the gospel, I am,

Yours fraternally,

W. M. MCINTOSH.

THE SECRET OF DISLOYALTY AND "COME-OUTISM."

MR. EDITOR: I see in the ADVOCATE, of June 28, a just rebuke from Bro. Gale to a self-appointed evangelist. While he was to be condemned for his conduct, as stated, there are some things back of his act that ought to be noticed. There was evidently an element in the Cedar Grove Church that held out an inducement to hold the meeting, and without law, as our Discipline does not allow our members to call a preacher or make private arrangements for preaching. The preacher is appointed, and has charge of the services. When the members offer a pony purse and propose to furnish the chicken-pie, there will not be wanting some interloper to come and take the prize. Some members of our churches take and read papers not authorized by the church—papers that are disloyal to constituted authority. Such literature scattered among our people often tends to irregular conduct. RALEIGH.

NOTICE.

To the Members of North Kemper Circuit and Contiguous Charges:

On June 23 the Parsonage Committee of North Kemper circuit effected a contract for a comfortable house, with twelve acres of pasture land enclosed. This house will make an excellent parsonage for North Kemper circuit. It is situated in a nice village-like community, six miles northwest from DeKalb, and in the center of the circuit. For this parsonage we want $300 by Dec. 1, 1900. We cordially commend this cause to the liberality of our brethren in that connectional spirit in which some of the surrounding parsonages have been built.

THE REV. ROBERT PARVIN.

At our District Conference there was a committee appointed to ask for contributions to place some sort of a monument at the grave of this servant of Christ, and I was requested to write this note, to be published in the ADVOCATE, that his friends might have the pleasure of helping. He sleeps in the cemetery at Gibsland, La., without a stone to mark his resting-place. He gave his life to Louisiana Methodism; many were born into the kingdom of Christ under his ministry. Will not all that can, send something to the committee for this worthy cause? The committee consists of: Dr. Roberts, Ruston, La.; Rev. J. M. Mauly, Arcadia, La.; Rev. J. M. Davies, Mindan, La.; F. FROM THE WORK.

PROVIDENCE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

From the seventh to the eleventh instant we held a protracted meeting at Monticello. Bro. Trevilion was with us, and did the preaching. Our people were delighted with him, and we had a good spiritual meeting. There were no accessions.

On the fourteenth and fifteenth instant was our second quarterly meeting at Bahala Chapel. Dr. Featherstun preached three sermons, and also addressed the Epworth League. The sermon on Saturday, at 11 A. M., I thought was worth a hundred dollars. It was so well-timed to suit the conditions here, and was good from any standpoint. I did not hear the sermon at 11 A. M., Sunday, as I was filling the regular appointment at Providence, but Bro. John Smith, one of my stewards, and a level-headed man, said it was twice as good as Saturday's discourse.

Our prospects for a successful camp meeting at Providence are brightening as we come nearer the time. C. MCDONALD.

RURAL HILL (MISS.) CHARGE.

The second Quarterly Conference of Rural Hill circuit convened at Plattsburg, June 18. While the attendance was very small indeed, most of the officials being kept away on account of the heavy rains, still we had a very pleasant Conference. The congregations were good, and the preaching most excellent.

Bro. T. W. Dye, our intelligent and appreciated presiding elder, preached us a very instructive sermon on Christian character, on Sunday morning, to a large and attentive crowd. He delivered a masterly sermon on the Christian warfare again Sunday night. I reported to the Quarterly Conference five Sunday-schools on my work. My financial report was $81.60 for the presiding elder and preacher in charge. Owing to the constant heavy rains the majority of the people of the circuit claim that they have sustained heavy loss, and most of them are despondent. Notwithstanding this and other obstacles, I am planning for a gracious revival of religion all over the work.

It would be expressing it mildly to say that we had enjoyable occasion on the first Sunday in June at Rural Hill. We had the pleasure of having with us the affable and much appreciated Kosciusko preacher, Bro. J. H. Shumaker, who delivered to a large and attentive congregation an instructive and soul-stirring sermon, after which the sum of forty-four dollars was quickly subscribed to the Twentieth Century Fund. This being the former home of Bro. Shumaker, he had the pleasure of meeting many friends and acquaintances.

Shortly after the morning service we were served with a wholesome and bountiful dinner, after which we expected another sermon from Bro. Shumaker on the history of our great Methodist Church. But being prohibited by the rain, we adjourned and retired to the pleasant home of Bro. Will Standard, where we spent a very pleasant night.

Yours in the work,

J. W. HULL.

BURDENED WOMEN.
We look in amazement at the burdens some women carry upon their heads. Yet how light they are compared with the burdens some women carry upon their hearts. There are childless women whose hearts ache ceaselessly because of the childless home. That burden of childlessness has been lifted from the heart of many a woman by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Many of the obstacles to maternity are removable. Such obstacles are entirely removed by "Favorite Prescription." It contains no alcohol nor narcotic.

Married Six Years and Childless.
"I have never written you how grateful I am to you for your help in securing good health and one of the sweetest, dearest, thirteen pound girls that ever came into a home," writes Mrs. M. Vostine, of 647 South Liberty Street, Golesburg, Ill. "I took six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and four vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. Before I had taken four bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I was a new woman, I cannot make pen describe my heartfelt gratitude, so will close by saying if any one disputes the value of Dr. Pierce's medicines I will be pleased to confirm the truth of all I say if they will enclose stamped envelope for reply."
Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a ladies' laxative. No medicine equals them for gentleness and thoroughness.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

A DISTRESSING PICTURE.

In the Pentecostal Herald, of July 11, the Rev. W. W. Hopper, a good man and an earnest holiness evangelist, gives a fearless, but forbidding picture of certain holiness people and holiness camp meetings. Bro. Hopper was for years an honored and beloved member of the Mississippi Conference. Obeying what he regarded the call of duty, he located in order to evangelize. Those who doubted the wisdom of his course have always respected his sincerity and manly honesty. Much of his preaching and evangelizing gives prominence to what is known as the second-blessing theory of sanctification. With those who profess that experience he has extensive and intimate acquaintance. He ardently loves the cause, and has devoted himself laboriously, and with not a little self-sacrifice, to its promotion. What he says, therefore, has the authority of accurate and ample knowledge. It must have cost him great pain to state the distressing facts contained in the article quoted below. Here is what Bro. Hopper has to say:

"But many holiness people—so-called—are fallen, and are impregnated with divers forms of fanaticism, crankism, 'damnable heresies,' come-out-ism, and strange hydra-headed 'doctrines of devils.' They are split up into little sects, factions, and fads, each claiming to be the only true body of Christ; and while they excommunicate all others from the kingdom of God, they themselves manifest the most intolerant sectarian bigotry.

"Many of these people live ungodly lives, some having two, or more, living wives or husbands, yet claiming to be holy, to the disgust of all decent, modest, temperate, godly people. Generally these persons make the greatest profession, shout the loudest, and claim to have trances, visions and revelations from the Lord. Others have sloughed off into Mormonism, Plymouth-brethrenism, spiritism, and Christian science, so-called; while others have backslidden by compromising with worldly churches and apostate preachers. Many of those who are living a truly sanctified life are perplexed by divers false teachings; some are ostracised socially and religiously by friends and family; some are cruelly cut with many ecclesiastic lashes from the pulpit, and oftentimes driven from their churches. Others are publicly and secretly stabbed by murderous pens and tongues, and falsely accused of every diabolical crime; not always by enemies, but by those claiming to be sanctified, to all of which the writer can personally testify. Surely we are in 'perilous times' (II. Tim., 3d chapter). May the Lord sift out the chaff! Beloved saints, keep the devil out. The writer has been called to labor at holiness camps where members of the Board of Managers were backslidden, unsaved men, used tobacco, morphine, belonged to secret lodges, and desecrated the holy Sabbath by secular labor on the camp ground. Also sinners were allowed to desecrate the Sabbath by running open shops where was sold tobacco, cigars, and all kinds of refreshments, and even alcoholic drinks secretly, all of which is as sinful and disreputable as a gang of beer-guzzling sinners out on a Sunday picnic. When these things are permitted the Holy Spirit is grieved, and will not descend on the people in saving power. Brethren! get an iron-clad charter and fence the devil out of your holiness camps, and do not let him stop under five miles. Some sad things have come to my knowledge along these lines. May God give us wisdom with meekness, and enable us to make room for the Holy Spirit! For form of charter, see one I published in Way of Faith some time ago."

We reproduce the above extracts, not to give wider currency to evil tidings, but to emphasize a fact and a lesson for the spiritual good of all our readers. First as to the fact—The acceptance of a certain theological statement or theory is not an all-sufficient evidence of genuine faith and a pious life. An orthodox head may be dominated by a very heterodox heart. Here, then, is a caution against too much talk in religion. "Much speaking" is not good either for effective praying or right living. The second fact is, that the rigid insistence on the frequent repetition of certain pious phrases as expressive of spiritual experience encourages a flippant religiousness and discounts thoughtful piety and modest reverence. Much that Bro. Hopper so sadly laments, we believe, attributable to this cause.

The lesson we wish to emphasize is, the urgent need for more godly living and less pretentious professing. There is no virtue in a mere declaration of one's feelings. Indeed it is positively hurtful if made in an aggressive and disputatious manner. A religious experience may be so related as to wound the body of Christ. Above all, let this lesson be learned: that nothing but right living furnishes a convincing argument in favor of Christian character and sincerity.

THE "POLICY SHOP" NUISANCE.

A couple of weeks ago we called attention to the fact that the stringent laws which are supposed to be in force in this State against the lottery business were being violated in the most outrageous manner. It turns out that the half was not told of the extent and boldness of the swindling operations that are being systematically carried on by lottery sharks and gamblers. The open and unmolested sale of foreign lottery tickets is a mere bagatelle as compared with the operations of local fake lottery companies, otherwise termed "policy shops," scores of which are scattered through the city, and which have been doing an immense business among the poor and the ignorant without let or hindrance from the police, some of whom, almost beyond doubt, have been regularly receiving "hush money."

We were glad to see that the Times-Democrat, a short time ago, contained a full and startling exposure of this monstrous iniquity, one result of which was that Mayor Capdeville immediately held a long consultation with the chief of police, during which he characterized the evil as a burning disgrace to the city, and issued instructions for the prompt suppression of the lottery business. A few "policy shops" were raided the next day, and their owners were arrested. Whether they will be given the punishment they deserve remains to be seen. Meanwhile, if any further steps have been taken by the police to root out this evil, we have not heard of it. The crusade against the abettors and originators of these swindling schemes ought, by all means, to be pushed to the bitter end. It would be shameful—yea, absolutely criminal—to let the matter drop after a few feeble efforts at suppression. We hope the mayor will see to it that this and all other gambling nuisances in the city are completely driven out. We scarcely believe that there is another city in the Union where such an evil would be tolerated so extensively as it has been here.

WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE.

This historic institution, located in the progressive, pleasant, and healthful town of Brookhaven, Miss., has done a great and noble work in the cause of Christian education, and enjoys the distinction of being one of the oldest and best schools in the Southwest. It has steadily grown in usefulness and in favor, and is rightly regarded as a school in every way worthy of the patronage of the public. The name of the new president, Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., who is a man of extensive culture and attainments and of marked ability, is a guarantee that the training imparted will be, as heretofore, of unquestioned excellence and thoroughness. There is every reason to believe that a most happy selection has been made in getting Rev. M. L. Burton, former manager of our Orphans' Home, as vice-president and business manager.

The college buildings are now undergoing thorough renovation and repairs, and are being fitted up with the latest conveniences. There will be hot and cold water in the dormitories, and electric lights in every room. Whitworth has a large and lovely campus, and can show as fine a health record as any school in the South. Write to the president for a catalogue.

THE SUPREME DUTY OF EVERY MAN.

The first and the supreme duty of every human being is to make peace with God and serve him, and until this is done the sinner's hope hangs, as it were, upon a slender thread that may be snapped in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. Our Lord commands us to seek the kingdom of God, not last, as many who drop into perdition intend doing, but 'first." Dear, unsaved friend, why not make sure of salvation? Why not repent now, and cheat the devil out of his expected prey? None ever sought the Lord too soon. "He that believeth not on the Son," says the Scripture, "is condemned already."

"Hasten, sinner, to be wise;
Stay not for the morrow's sun;
Wisdom if thou still despise,
Harder is she to be won."

That illustrious statesman, Daniel Webster, once said that the greatest thought that had ever crossed his mind was the recognition of his personal responsibility to God. Give God thy heart, and then all the devils in hell can not make thee afraid.

DELAY NOT.

If business men were to habitually put off attending to important duties, as many of them do the seeking of religion, financial ruin would soon stare them in the face. But infinitely worse is the eternal, irretrievable ruin which will surely overtake every soul that keeps waiting for a "more convenient season," and never comes to Christ. Better would it be for such an one that he had never been born. In countless thousands of instances a vague determination to seek the Lord, not now, but by and by, has resulted in the doom of the soul.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

It will be gratifying to our friends generally to know that the indications point to a large attendance of students at Millsaps College next session. We get encouraging reports from all sections of the State. Mr. Mitchell, of the class of 1900, who is traveling in the interest of the college in North Mississippi, sends the most cheering news. He is in the habit of succeeding in everything he undertakes, and I shall look for him to march down here the first of October at the head of a long column. He is among the best preachers in the world, and I am sure they will help him.

By the way, I mention it with pride and the utmost satisfaction that our boys all go to work when they get through college. I don't know of a single exception. And they are not hunting easy places, either. They have the right ideas of life. They believe that an education puts on them an obligation to work all the harder and amount to something in the world.

The announcement, in your last issue, that Mr. J. F. Galloway had been elected principal of the Montrose High School gives great gratification to his friends. He is another one of our boys of the class of 1900. I know that school, and feel a deep interest in it. It is projected on the right plan. The presiding elder of the Forest district is behind it, and when he pushes a thing he has the weight and will to make it move.

I trust our preachers and other friends will continue to send us names of young men who ought to receive information in regard to the college. Write to me or to any member of the faculty. We will be glad to send college literature, and wherever practicable make a personal visit. W. B. MURRAH.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

So many conflicting reports have been received lately regarding the situation at Pekin and at other points in China that one hardly knows what to believe. The civilized world is yet in doubt as to the fate of the foreign legationers at the Chinese capital, despite the supposed dispatch from Minister Conger.

Our government is proceeding upon the assumption that the Chinese Government is not implicated in the "Boxer" uprising, and hence refuses to consider itself at war with China. It is this attitude of friendliness that has led the Chinese authorities to ask the United States to act as mediator in the present trouble.

Some of the European powers are almost certain to be displeased at President McKinley's willingness to interfere in behalf of China, but their displeasure, it is claimed, will not deter him from proceeding in the matter.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

At its last annual meeting the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, God has taken from us the Hon. Peter James, who had been a member of this Board almost ever since its existence; And, whereas, Our departed brother was in many respects a remarkable man, and his place in the varied relations of life will be hard to fill; therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. James the church has lost a valued member, and the cause of Christian education a staunch friend and a liberal supporter. While we mourn the loss of so valuable a man and brother, we bow in humble submission to the will of God, and we will ever hold the many virtues of our brother in affectionate remembrance.

A GOOD MAN GONE.

Bro. Jas. Colclough died this morning at 5:30 o'clock. In his death Starkville circuit loses its oldest member, he having been a member since its organization. Bro. Colclough was an earnest, zealous Christian man; a loyal member of our church. He loved the church and her ministers. He was nearly seventy-five years old. May the God of all grace comfort the bereaved family!

(REV.) S. A. BROWN.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

The passion of envy in the soul burns like the very fire of hell.—Nashville Advocate.

There are many things done in the name of the Lord for which he claims no sort of responsibility.—Texas Advocate.

The man who is the most signal failure in the work of life is usually the harshest critic of other men's successes.—Texas Advocate.

As it is never too hot to work in the office, the shop, the store, the field, and elsewhere, it should not be too hot to be in your place at prayer meeting and in your seat on Sunday.—Southern Christian Advocate.

Says the Midland Methodist: "In Dr. Atkins' address at Marion, Va., he told of a saloon keeper who offered a preacher a contribution of five dollars for church work. The preacher quickly accepted it, saying: 'The money has been doing the devil's work long enough; I'll put it to a better use.'"

Says the Youth's Companion: "The Associated Jewish Charities of Chicago have taken a laudable step in abolishing henceforth all balls, fairs and charity bazaars as methods of swelling their fund. They have resolved to give of their means according to their ability, and promise that their already magnificent philanthropies shall not suffer by the change. Gentiles may well ask themselves if their own 'entertainments' are not sometimes repulsive rather than attractive."

We clip the following from the Nashville Advocate, of July 12: "The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE celebrated its fiftieth anniversary on the 10th inst. No paper has had a greater career. Started in 1850 under the editorship of H. N. McTyeire, who was then in his twenty-eighth year, it has had a succession of very able editors, including John C. Keener, Linus Parker, Charles B. Galloway, Charles W. Carter, and the present able incumbent, Dr. W. C. Black. From first to last it has stood firm for Methodism, and for all good causes in the Southwest, and has done that which could not have been easily dispensed with. We wish our contemporary the greatest success."

ASTONISHING APATHY.

There is an apathy on the subject of temperance among church people that is alarming. Were it known that in every town in our great State there was one man-eating tiger that occasionally came out of its den and devoured a human being, a war against these beasts of prey would be immediately organized, and these monsters would be exterminated and their dens destroyed. Yet, in almost every village there is a den, and in many, more than one, where there lurks an enemy that has destroyed more human beings than all the tigers in all the jungles of India ever did, and but little effort is being made to exterminate the same.—Writer in St. Louis Advocate.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I have read with much interest, as I always do, the ADVOCATE of this week, and find in it several timely and thought-provoking articles.

The editorial on "Spasmodic Efforts in Reform" should be well considered by those who would maintain and advance prohibition, Sabbath observance and other moral reform movements. There must be constant striking in order to keep the ball rolling. Agitate, agitate, through the press and in the pulpit, Sunday-school, home and social circle. Let there be no letting up in any quarters on the open saloon, blind tigers, gambling dens or Sabbath desecration, until our land is indeed freed from these damning environments.

Bro. Lewis, in his "Notes by the Way," propounds some serious questions and gives wholesome advice for "the revival season," which it would be well for all concerned to ponder prayerfully. Let us go through the protracted-meeting campaign under an abiding consciousness of the great need of spiritual awakening and quickening, and let all religious exercises be conducted with a view to a general revival of the "old-time religion."

One item in Bro. Anderson's report of Chester charge should be a note of warning to every Methodist pastor and Sunday-school superintendent. He says: "Children's Day was a failure all over the charge. The Sunday-schools opened in April, but were not sufficiently under way to warrant their undertaking Children's Day exercises." See what is lost by not keeping the schools in operation. Not only this, but many evils result from suspension. Winter is the preferred season for running the secular schools in the country, and yet in some sections the idea prevails that Sunday-schools must of necessity suspend. What an absurdity, that the one must run five days, but the other can not be maintained one day in the week. When, oh, when, shall we cease to hear of Sunday-schools in long-organized Methodist Churches having to be organized, or re-opened, every Spring? Let those who have the business in hand answer by saying, "With the beginning of the new century our schools shall begin a perennial existence, the Lord helping us." We have cheering reports of Children's Day observance in many of the charges, both as to the collections and good results. Winona circuit so far is in the lead, having gone beyond last year's report. We sincerely hope that no station, circuit, or mission will appear blank in this column in the Conference Minutes for this last year of the century.

One other item in this week's paper is deserving of special notice. In the advertisement of a celebrated college for boys, it is specifically stated, "Intercollegiate games prohibited." May the day be not far distant when a similar declaration shall be made for every church institution of learning, from the greatest to the least!

Dr. Wier writes, Lexington, Miss., July 17: "Last Sunday was a red-letter day with us here. Twenty members were received at the altar of our church. Good children's service at night; $7.80 collected."

The debt of long standing on the Winona district parsonage has been paid off.

Rev. H. T. Cunningham, pastor of Vaiden charge, is able to resume work, after a few week's illness.

Rev. M. H. Honnoll has not been able to preach for several months; his numerous friends are united in prayers for his restoration to health.

Rev. S. A. Ellis is very feeble, but "happy on the way." May his precious life be spared to the church on earth yet many years!

G. W. BACHMAN.

Winona, Miss., July 20, 1900.

NOTES.

We had an appreciated call last week from Rev. T. J. Upton, the enterprising pastor at Amite City, La.

The name appended to the report, on our third page, from the Rural Hill charge, should be J. W. Hall instead of J. W. Hull.

Rev. R. W. Bailey, the much-esteemed pastor at Moss Point, Miss., is taking a needed vacation at Colorado Springs, Col.

We are glad to learn that the father of Dr. H. M. DuBose, who has recently been critically ill at San Marcos, Tex., is now much better.

***

Prof. L. T. Fitzhugh, of Belhaven College, Jackson, Miss., passed through the city one day last week, and made the ADVOCATE office a pleasant call.

The many friends of that noble layman, Bro. J. H. McNeely, of Colfax, La., and his elect wife, will regret to learn that their youngest son, Guy Carradine, died July 13, aged one year three months and twenty days.

A brief note from Rev. T. W. Lewis, Carrollton, Miss., dated July 14, says: "Had Twentieth Century at McAnerny last Sunday. Got $57.75. Pretty good for a small country church of thirty-eight members."

***

The Midland Methodist, of recent date, states that Sessler Hoss, son of Dr. E. E. Hoss, has been appointed to a cadetship at West Point by President McKinley, who has the right to appoint ten cadets from the country at large.

On our second page will be found an interesting article from the pen of Sister L. Crary Sadler, who used to be a frequent contributor to the ADVOCATE columns. Her article was intended for our semi-centennial number, but unfortunately it failed to reach us in time for publication therein.

Rev. M. L. White, the pastor at Carthage, Miss., sends us the following encouraging news: "Bro. Moore and myself have just closed a fine meeting at a new appointment at a school-house. Ten excellent people united with the church. Great good has been done. We hope to be able to make a full report this year from this charge."

Rev. J. A. Poe, pastor of the Mt. Pleasant charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes that he has a delightful appointment, and says he expects to do good work for the Twentieth Century Fund. Good subscriptions were secured for that worthy cause on a recent Sunday. He reports that every interest of the church is doing fairly well.

Rev. W. H. Sanders sends us the following interesting item from Indianola, Miss.: "Yesterday morning (July 19), at 9 o'clock, the Dallas Well Boring Co. struck water in this town at a depth of 1,236 feet, and the people of this place are happy over the fact of having a fine flow of water of good quality and sufficient to supply all the needs of a town three times the size of this."

A brief note from Rev. J. A. Poe to the editor conveys the following sad intelligence: "Bro. J. E. Johnson, of the North Mississippi Conference, is very low. His recovery is exceedingly doubtful. Let the brethren pray for this veteran of the cross, and for his anxious and devoted family. Bro. Johnson has long been a faithful itinerant, and is much beloved by those who know him."

We are in receipt of a card from Rev. C. McDonald, pastor at Tyro, Miss., in which he says:

"There have been several cases of sporadic scarlet fever in my family. They were all of a mild type, and all up again. As we have had no new case in two weeks, we hope we are through with it. It did not spread in the neighborhood. During our sickness there was the kindest attention by both Methodist and Baptist neighbors. We never had better friends anywhere."

THE PIANOS AND ORGANS — Represented in our exclusive agencies embrace all the requirements of a perfect high-grade instrument. We make terms to suit, and guarantee our goods.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Areola, Miss., EDITOR

How many Leagues are planning to have their pastors or presidents to attend the Southern League Conference? Raise the money and let them go, with their expenses paid by the League.

The Epworth Leaguers of Madison Circuit are to make, during the next few weeks, a special study of Porto Rico, using as a text-book "Our Island Empire."

At the unveiling of the Lambuth Monument at Pearl River Church, on the Madison circuit, on the ninth of August, Mr. Lamar Field, president of the Madison Epworth League, is to deliver the oration.

In connection with the Madison Circuit Sunday-school and Epworth League Institute, to be held Aug. 8 and 9, there will be a Twentieth Century Thank-offering meeting, and Rev. A. F. Watkins, D. D., will preach the sermon.

Let the new district secretaries plan at once for District League Conferences.

The League at Pocahontas, Miss., begins the next six months hopefully, with Mr. David Conghlin as president.

By the time this issue of the ADVOCATE is in the hands of its readers, representative Leaguers from all parts of Southern Methodism will be gathered together in Atlanta, Ga., in the first great Southern Epworth League Conference. May the wisdom and spirit of God direct in its deliberations! We trust that those Leagues which pledged different amounts to defray the expenses of the Tri-State Conference at Seashore, Aug. 1-9, will send same, as Miss Vic Thompson directed in the last issue of the ADVOCATE. The work in different parts of the State seems to be coming to the front. We hear good things from the different State officers. We should be glad to make some announcements for them, and give some of their plans to the public through this department.

The revival season is full upon us; let no preacher be afraid to call mourners.

LOUISIANA.

REV. H. R. SINGLETON, Ruston, La. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors and Epworth Leaguers of the Shreveport District -

In another part of this paper you will find a program of our second Epworth League Conference. The success of this meeting depends upon every one of us doing our full duty.

If your name is on the program, please be on hand, that the feature assigned to you may be successfully carried out. If you are not on the program to open the discussion of some topic, come to Conference prepared to express your ideas, or give your experience on those topics with which you are most familiar.

Let every pastor see that his work is well represented at this Conference. If you have a League, call it together and have delegates elected. If you have no League, then please appoint six or eight young people that can go, that should be interested in League work, and send their names to Rev. J. O. Bennett, Keatchie, La., and to me at Haughton that I may assign them some part.

Please call attention publicly to this meeting, and urge your young people to go. We will use the Young People's Hymnal. So let every one that has one bring it.

Let those who come have the Pledge and the Apostles' Creed on his, or her, tongue's end, as we will use these in the opening and closing exercises. Let us come praying for the baptism of the Holy Spirit, and come ready to take any part that may be assigned to us.

I am instructed to ask each League in the district to contribute one dollar towards the expenses of programs, postage, etc. So let the pastors please see to it that this small amount reaches either Rev. J. O. Bennett, or the undersigned, or is brought by the delegates to the Conference.

The people of Keatchie are making extensive preparations for the Conference, and will give us the best they have. Let us not be behind them.

Remember—Keatchie, La., Aug. 1, 2 and 3, 1900

WM. G. EVANS, For Committee.

NOTICE.

To the Leaguers of the Shreveport District:

The District League Conference will convene in Keatchie, La., on Wednesday, Aug. 1, at 8:30 P. M. Rev. J. B. Williams, of Pelican, La., will preach the opening sermon. We hope every League in the district will be represented. A splendid programme has been prepared, and we trust that all to whom subjects have been assigned will be present and fill their places on the programme. Let all those who expect to attend send in their names to me at once, so that homes may be provided for all. J. D. BENNETT, Pastor.

SOME RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS IN CHINA.

In China a large number of the people worship their fathers and mothers, instead of God. Dead parents and other ancestors are worshiped about thirteen times a year, namely: on their birthdays, on the anniversary of death, on New Year's Day, on the fifteenth day of second month, at the vernal equinox, on the fifth day of fifth month, on the fifteenth day of seventh month, and of eighth month, at the autumnal equinox, on the last day of the year, and at the visitation of the tombs. Whenever one parent is specially worshiped, as on the birthday, the other parent is also worshiped. Ancestors are worshiped by offerings of fish, fowls, pork, cakes, tea, wine, rice, spirit money, and incense. The very poor use small quantities, the rich great stores, of food-stuffs; but all must offer the full number of dishes.

Some men set apart a portion—perhaps, a tenth of the land owned by them—for supplying the expenses of worshiping them after their death. These people contribute regularly large sums of money to their religious faith. Their liberality is in strange contrast with what many of us do, who have a knowledge of the Son of God.

Questions to ask the school:

1. Why do the heathen rage? Sin has made them mad.

2. What can we do now for the missionaries in China? We can pray the Lord to protect his anointed.

3. Do you pray for our missionaries?

4 Would you not like to have some one pray for you, if you were in their condition? Let all our Sunday-schools pray earnestly for these precious lives and their great work, and they will be drawn in closer fellowship with the great Head of the church. R. H. B. GLADNEY,

For the Bd. of Missions of N. M. C.

TO THE PREACHERS.

Bro. Norman Guice, a young man of Jefferson Street station, who will be licensed to preach on the twenty-fifth of this month, desires to be of some service in his church, pending the session of our Annual Conference. He is a good musical director; sings and plays well. To anyone needing his services, either in song or pulpit, I most cordially commend him.

Brethren who contemplate holding revivals this Summer and Fall will do well to secure the help of this young brother.

Address C. Norman Guice, Natchez, Miss.

The Mutual Life Insurance Com'y OF NEW YORK.

RICHARD A. McCURDY, PRESIDENT.

Is the oldest active Life Insurance Company in the United States, and the largest and strongest Company in the world. It is purely mutual—belonging exclusively to its policy-holders, for whom it has accomplished results in excess of those of any similar institution.

SINCE ITS ORGANIZATION IN 1843

It has paid to living members	$283,157,427 64
To beneficiaries of deceased members	204,591,282 42
Total paid to members, both living and dead	$487,748,910 06
And now holds for the security of its present members	277,517,325 36
Paid to and invested for its members	$765,266,235 42

THE POLICIES OF THIS COMPANY

are remarkable for their liberality, large guaranteed values, and entire absence of all technical terms or traps. Being practically incontestable, they provide a legacy and not a lawsuit.

Persons desiring policies in this Company can secure them from the Company's nearest agent, or if no agent is convenient, by writing to the General Agent, giving date of birth and stating what amount of insurance is desired.

MOLDING THE CLAY.

Within their tiny hands my children hold
A ball of yielding clay,
And, as they try some dainty form to mold,
I hear them softly say:
"What shall we make—an apple, or a vase;
Some marbles, or a fan?"
One little boy, a smile upon his face,
Says: "I shall make a man."

Straightway, with lengthened face, he at his task
Begins, and 'neath the hands
Unskillful, weak, and yet too prond to ask
For aid, a form expands,
Crude, and yet not too poor to show the man
Hid in the maker's thought—
How different yet if some skilled artisan
The ball of clay had wrought!

To-day within my hands my children lie,
I shape them as I will,
And seek for aid from him that is on high,
That he may with his skill
Teach my weak, willing hands to rightly mold
The clay that I have sought,
That in true forms of beauty may unfold
The Maker's highest thought.

HER GIFT.

The minister's eyes swept with intense searching the apathetic faces of his stylish, worldly congregation. He had made an impassioned appeal for help in the support of a little mission church among the mountains—a section where rough men and women knew scarcely anything of God and the religion of Christ. He had hoped to inspire the people with the spirit of giving, to make them feel that it was a sweet, blessed privilege, and—he had failed. A sense of desolation crept over him.

"God help me," his lips murmured mutely. He could not see the bent figure of little crippled Maggie in the rear of the church—a figure which was trembling under the fire of his appeal.

"Lord Jesus," the little one was saying brokenly, "I ain't got nothin' ter give; I want the people in the mountains ter hear 'bout my Savior. O, Lord, I ain't got nothin' ter—"

What was it that made the child catch her breath as though a cold hand had taken hold of her heart?

"Yes, you have, Maggie," whispered a voice from somewhere; "you've got your crutch, your beautiful crutch that was given ter you, an' is worth a lot of shinin' dollars. You kin give up your best friend' what helps you ter git into the park where birds sings, an' takes you ter preachin,' and makes your life happy."

"Oh, no, Lord," sobbed the child, choking and shivering. "Yes, yes, I will. He give up more'n that fer me."

Blindly she extended the polished crutch, and placed it in the hand of the deacon, who was taking up the scanty collection. For a moment the man was puzzled; then, comprehending her meaning, he carried her crutch to the front of the church, and laid it on the table in front of the pulpit. The minister stepped down from the rostrum, and held up the crutch with shaking hands. The sublimity of the renunciation unnerved him so that he could not speak for a moment.

"Do you see it, my people," he faltered at last; "little cripped Maggie's crutch—all that she has to make life comfortable? She has given it to the Lord, and you—"

There was a moment of silence. The people finshed, and moved restlessly in their cushioned pews.

"Does anyone want to contribute to the mission cause the amount or money this crutch would bring, and give it back to the child who is helpless without it?" the minister asked gravely.

"Fifty dollars," came in husky tones from the banker.

"Twenty-five."

"One hundred."

And so the subscribing went on, until papers equivalent to $600 were lightly piled over the crutch on the table.

"Ah, you have found your hearts—thank God! Let us receive the benediction," almost whispered the minister as he suddenly extended his hands which were trembling with emotion.

Little Maggie, absorbed in the magnitude of her offering and the love which prompted it, comprehended nothing that had taken place. She had no thought of the future, of how she would reach her humble home, or of the days in which she would sit helpless in her chair as she had once done. Christ had demanded her all, and she had given it, with the blind faith of an Abraham. She understood no better when a woman's arms drew her into close embrace, and soft lips whispered into her ear:

"Maggie, dear, your crutch has made $600 for the mission church among the mountains, and has come back to stay with you again. Take it, little one."

Like the flash of light, there came the consciousness that in some mysterious way her gift had been accepted of God, and returned to her, and with a cry of joy the child caught the beloved crutch to her lonely heart; then, smiling through her tears at the kind faces and reverential eyes, she hobbled out of the sanctuary. —Gertrude M. Jones, in Christian Observer.

THINGS EVERY BOY SHOULD KNOW.

"I believe," says a Southern writer, "in schools where boys can learn trades. Peter the Great left his throne and went to learn how to build a ship, and he learned from stem to stern, from hull to mast, and that was the beginning of his greatness.

"I knew a young man who was poor and smart. A friend sent him to one of those schools up North, where he stayed two years, and came back a mining engineer and bridge builder. Last year he planned and built a cotton factory, and is getting a large salary.

"How many college boys are there in Georgia who can tell what kind of timber will bear the heaviest burden, or why you take white oak for one part of a wagon, and ash for another, and what timber will last longer under water, and what out of water?

"How many know sandstone from limestone, or iron from manganese? How many know how to cut a rafter or brace without a pattern? How many know which turns the faster, the top of the wheel or the bottom, as the wagon moves along the ground? How many know how steel is made, or how a snake can climb a tree? How many know that a horse gets up before, and a cow behind, and the cow eats grass from her, and the horse to him? How many know that a surveyor's mark on a tree never gets any higher from the ground, or what tree bears fruit without bloom?

"There is a power of comfort in knowledge, but a boy is not going to get it unless he wants it badly. And that is the trouble with most college boys. They don't want it; they are too busy, and haven't got time. There is more hope of a dull boy who wants knowledge than of a genius, who generally knows it all without study. These close observers are the world's benefactors."—Selected.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.
All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. Newton Hathaway, M. D.
Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.
T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. On injection cured me."
Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."
Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

TRUE AND OBEDIENT.

"Charlie, Charlie!" Clear and sweet as a note struck from a silver bell the voice rippled over the common.

"That's mother," cried one of the boys, and he instantly threw down his bat and picked up his jacket and cap.

"Don't go yet! Have it out!"

"Finish this game! Try it again!" cried the players, in noisy chorus.

"I must go this very minute. I told her I'd come whenever she called."

"Make believe you didn't hear!" they all exclaimed.

"But I did hear."

"She won't know you did."

"Let him go," said a bystander. "You can't do anything with him. He's tried to his mother's apron strings."

"That's so," said Charlie, "and it's to what every boy should be tied, and in a hard knot, too."

"But I wouldn't be such a baby as to run the minute she called," said one.

"I don't call it babyish to keep one's word to his mother," answered the obedient boy, a beautiful light glowing in his blue eyes. "I call that manly; and the boy that does not keep his word to his mother will never keep it to any one else—you see if he does," and he hurried away to his cottage home.

Thirty years have passed away since those boys played on the commons. Charles Gray is now a prosperous business man in a great city, and his mercantile friends say of him that his "word is his bond." We asked him how he acquired such a reputation.

"I never broke my word when a boy, no matter how great the temptation, and the habits formed then have clung to me through life."—Baptist Commonwealth.

Some day the watchers will move silently about your home. The shadows will lengthen in the twilight of your departing day. Your arms will reach up to encircle some neck in a last, clinging embrace. Your eyes will look up to catch the last tender message—unspoken because the heart is breaking. The heart that has served you so well will send out its life currents with a feeble flutter. Lips, always rich with words of love, will stiffen into silence beneath the parting kiss! And then!—Arms will be folded over the quiet heart! Loving fingers, in their last tender ministry, will press lids over the sightless eyes! The one that loves you best will press a last kiss upon the pallid lips, and then seal them for the burial! What then? "The spirit will return to God who gave it." What then? Brother, sister, how will you meet your God?—Interior.

THINGS CHILDREN SHOULD KNOW.

That it is not good form to appear absent-minded in company.

That it is necessary to observe the rules of table etiquette strictly at every meal.

Younger children should be taught that it is not polite to take seats at the table before other members of the family have done so, but to remain standing beside the chair until all have assembled.

Do not forget to teach the children to say "good night" to each other, as well as to older members of the family, when they go to bed. It is seldom they will do it of their own accord, because comradeship and equality render them thoughtless of little courtesies. Familiar use has robbed the phrase of its significance, but every child should know that "God" and "good" spring from the same root, with the same meaning. "Good-bye," is "God be with you," and the old-fashioned phrase, "Good night to you," is "God guard the night to you." It may, perhaps, have a different meaning for the children if they know this, and, perhaps, the homely phrase will come more readily for each other—Exchange.

DOING AND NOT DOING.

"Sir," said a lad, coming down to one of the wharves in Boston and addressing a well-known merchant, "have you any berth on your ship? I want to earn something."

"What can you do?" asked the gentleman.

"I can try my best to do whatever I am put to," answered the boy.

"What have you done?"

"I have sawed and split all mother's wood for nigh on two years."

"What have you not done?" asked the gentleman, who was a queer sort of questioner.

"Well, sir," answered the boy, after a moment's pause, "I have not whispered in school once for a whole year."

"That's enough," said the gentleman. "You may ship aboard this vessel, and I hope to see you master of it some day. A boy who can master a wood pile and bridle his tongue must be made of good stuff."—Christian Leader.

BEER OR A HOME.

Many men of small income spend 5, 10 or 20 cents a day for beer. Five cents a day saved, and at the end of each year put to interest at five per cent., would, at the end of ten years, amount to $205.50; twenty years, $560.00; twenty-five years, $815.00. Ten cents a day so treated would in the same periods respectively amount to $405, $1,120, and $1,630. Twenty cents a day would amount to $810, $2,240 and $3,260.

Think what a comfortable cottage home, with beautiful surroundings in the suburbs of a city or in a village, might many a working man possess for the money he expends in a few years on beer.—National Advocate.

It is the boy who sticks to his bush that fills his pail with berries. It is the miner who digs away as soon as he finds paying dirt who makes money at mining. One in ten thousand may stumble upon big lumps of gold by continually roaming, but the other nine thousand nine hundred and ninty-nine will not; and, in the end, the man who digs persistently will usually find the most and the largest nuggets.—Selected.

RAIFORD—On April 4, 1833, in a pious, cultured Christian home in Pike county, Miss., Mrs. E. J. Raiford, as a bright, beautiful babe, first opened her eyes upon the light of this world, and on Sunday morning, July 1, 1900, in Gloster, Miss., while the heavens were all aglow with the rosy light of Aurora, her pure, faithful soul—surrounded by loving children, grandchildren, and friends—forsook its tenement of clay and returned to God, who gave it. The days and years that rolled between these two dates were very many indeed, and all well spent. The whole life of the deceased, from its joyous beginning to its glorious ending, was devoted to true and noble living. Being intelligent, cultured, well-poised, and generous, she was regarded by all who knew her as one of the noblest of the noble ante-bellum Southern women, who filled well the various positions occupied in life. As daughter, sister, wife, mother, friend and neighbor, she was a model most worthy of imitation. And the same thing was true of her as a church member. Yielding to the pious influences that surrounded her from infancy, she joined the Methodist Church in childhood, and remained an active, faithful, useful member to the day of her death. For years she and her noble husband, Hon. Wm. B. Raiford, who preceded her to the beautiful beyond, were the principal support, both financially and morally, of the congregation to which they belonged. Hence the church, as well as father, mother, children, grandchildren, together with a circle of neighbors and friends, will rise up in the great day of eternity and call her blessed. She leaves three daughters, two sons, six grandchildren, with a host of friends, to mourn because she is not; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. They know where they may find their loved one, and may they all follow in the light of her pure life to that bright world of eternal radiance and glory!

J. W. McLAURIN.

DEGANT—Mrs. EUGENIA DEGANT (nee Breeden) was born June 22, 1853, and departed this life March 17, 1900. She was married to Stephen DeGant, Sept. 26, 1880; was left a widow at the age of twenty-five. She was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and had been since early in life. She lived a quiet Christian life, and bearing all her suffering with the greatest of patience. She suffered a great cost, as her disease was of that kind that lingers long. It was the dreaded disease, consumption; but she hardly ever complained. She would look at us with a smile when we were around her bedside, and say she knew we were doing all on earth we could for her; then she would tell us that she wished she could be spared to be with us longer, and especially her only child and aged mother. She leaves one little girl, a widowed mother, three sisters and three brothers to mourn her loss, but our loss is heaven's eternal gain. May God bless and comfort the lonely child she has left in this world of sin and sorrow! We know it is lonesome for her, for what is home, or what is life, without a mother? She was the oldest of us, and, of course, she was a sister and a mother to us, too. She was so gentle and kind that it seems to us like sometimes we can hardly live without her; but the Lord's will be done, not ours. May the Lord help us to live so we will meet sister again! Is the prayer of her baby sister, JULIA Y.

MAY—ALLIE J. MAY was born in Sunflower county, Miss., in 1879, and I "fell on sleep" Feb. 3, 1900. She became a Christian at an early age, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Sandy Bayou under the ministry of Rev. D. M. Miller. From the day of her conversion she entered joyfully upon the labor of her Lord, serving as secretary of Sandy Bayou Sabbath-school. Affable in manner, lovable in disposition, and Christ-like in spirit, she was loved by all who knew her. In her death the home has lost the solace and stay of advancing years, the church a lively member, and the community the presence and power of a young life dedicated to God. May the unerring hand that shaped and guided her young life model the lives of the loved ones she has left behind!

"We shall miss, but we may meet her,
If we but in Christ abide."

J. M. DAVENPORT.

BUTLER—KARL DE WITT, little son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Butler, was born July 16, 1898, and died May 2, 1900.

While all was done that loving hands could do, the fatal disease held on, and, after twenty-four hours of intense suffering, death ended his sweet, innocent life. Though brief his stay here, yet he had entwined his young life firmly and tenderly in the affections of those who knew him most intimately. Having learned to talk very young, and being of a lovable disposition, he was unusually attractive for his age, and very promising.

"Because his smile was fair,
His lip and eye so bright,
Shall love, with weak embrace,
Detain his heavenly flight?"

No; God, in his infinite wisdom, knows best. We will trust in his gracious promises, and bye and bye we will meet again.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to August, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Tien Tsin neighborhood has been entirely cleared of Chinamen.

China has declared war against Russia, and has sent troops into Siberia.

In recapturing the town of Blagovetshenk from the Chinese the Russians lost 870 men killed.

Colon, Colombia, is in the hands of the insurgents, having been taken July 16 without a fight.

The street railway strike at Dallas threatens to develop into a general "sympathetic" strike.

Japan has granted permission to the United States to land armed troops and military supplies at Nagasaki.

Gen. De Wet's force of Boers were defeated near Lindley, Friday, and broke into two parties on their retreat.

Mount Azuma, in Japan, broke into eruption July 17, and the lava engulfed several villages, killing or injuring 200 persons.

Secretary Hay is still confident that Minister Conger is alive, and his confidence is inspiring hope in the mind of the doubters.

Gen. De Wet has again cut Gen. Roberts' line of communication, both by railway and telegraph, and captured 100 of his Highlanders.

Aguinaldo's mother has taken him a copy of the amnesty proclamation. He will consult his advisors and return an answer within a month.

Secretary Long has cabled Admiral Remey to use, and to urge the officers of other nations to use, every endeavor for the relief of Pekin.

The Presbyterian Board of Missions has received cablegrams from China announcing that the damage to missionaries and missions is increasing.

The latest Chinese horror is related in the butchery of sixty missionaries and one hundred native converts at Tai Yuan. Further massacres are looked for.

Secretary Hay has telegraphed Minister Conger, authorizing him to offer to the Chinese Government the assistance of the United States in suppressing the "Boxers."

The city of Tien Tsin has been looted by the soldiers and allies, the Americans and Japanese alone attempting to prevent the thefts. Public funds amounting to $2,000,000 were stolen.

It is said in Washington that the Emperor of China and the Dowager Empress have sent a cable letter to President McKinley, asking the assistance of the United States in the present troubles.

The Emperor of China has telegraphed the Kaiser, saying the murderers of Baron von Ketteler will be punished, and expressing the hope that the relations of China to Germany will not suffer.

President McKinley has accepted the offer of the Chinese Government to mediate between the imperial government and the powers, but on conditions which must be met by the Chinese Government.

The Chinese control a considerable stretch of the Amur river, which will prevent the Russians using that stream for transportation purposes. The Chinese have 120,000 troops on the border, the Russians 78,000.

A London dispatch points out that there is one dominant mind controlling the Chinese movements, and that the Conger message was sent out to lure the allies to Pekin prematurely. Li Hung Chang is considered the master mind.

An imperial edict has been issued in China saying that in the Confucian philosophy it is written that envoys should not be killed. It is argued, therefore, that the foreign ministers could not have been killed with the connivance of the government.

In the Blue and Gray reunion at Atlanta, on July 20, Gen. Gordon took exception to a part of Gen. Shaw's speech, and replied that the people of the South would not teach their children that their fathers fought for an unjust cause. The incident ended happily, but both speakers showed much feeling.

For Dyspepsia
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate.
Dr. T. H. ANDREWS, late of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, Pa., says: "A wonderful remedy which gave me most gratifying results in the worst forms of dyspepsia."

Secretary Hay, on July 20, received through Minister Wu and other Chinese officials a cipher dispatch from Minister Conger, announcing the legationers were alive on July 18, but in imminent peril. Many well-informed people believe the dispatch was written early in June and suppressed, and now forwarded to deceive the civilized world.

The navy of the United States is growing considerably, and must in future be reckoned with as one of the most formidable and homogeneous of the world's great fleets. About ten years ago we had but a few modern ships in commission, while to-day we have in the neighborhood of seventy, and as many more are building in various stages of progress towards final completion.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Livor, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:

Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever by using two bottles.

Free to Inventors.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.

This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE (For Young Ladies), JACKSON, MISS.

One of the most thoroughly equipped High Grade Schools in the South. Buildings new and modern, heated by steam and lighted with electricity. Both rooms for hot and cold water on all floors. Beautiful campus of twelve acres of native forest trees. No school for girls in the South can show such a health record. During the past Winter, noted for epidemics of pneumonia, la grippe measles and small-pox all over the State, there was not a single case of any of the above diseases, or any serious case of sickness of any kind, in the college. The Faculty is composed of specialists in all departments. In Music, Elocution and Art the College offers exceptionally fine advantages. The authorities of the New England Conservatory of Music and Elocution say: "Of all our pupils from the South those from Belhaven College stand not only in the highest rank in their classes, but are regarded, without exception, as possessing those womanly traits of character and that degree of intellectual development which command instant respect and admiration." Next session begins October 1st, 1900. For our beautiful catalogue, address L. T. FITZHUGH, A. M., President.

GOD LOVETH THEE.

BY GERTRUDE PALMER VAUGHN.

God loveth thee, then be content;
Whate'er then hast his love hath sent;
Come pain or pleasure, good or ill,
His love is round about thee still.
Then murmur not, nor anxious be;
Rest thou in peace, God loveth thee.

God loveth thee. Though dark the night,
His smile shall make the pathway bright:
When weary ways before thee lie,
The Lord, thy helper, draweth nigh.
Press bravely on, the end to see;
Be not dismayed, God loveth thee.

God loveth thee through all thy days;
Thy life should be one song of praise.
Trust him to lead who is the way,
Thy feet shall never go astray,
But, safe at last, thine eyes shall see
That to the end God loveth thee.

LETTERS FROM CHINA.

The following letters from China, one from Dr. Young J. Allen and the other from Dr. A. P. Parker, the latest news by mail from the East, will be read with great interest throughout the church. These letters were addressed to Dr. Lambuth, who has furnished them for the Advocate:

Shanghai, China, June 23, 1900.

DEAR DR. LAMBUTH: Your telegram, signed by yourself and Mrs. Trueheart, reached me yesterday afternoon, and was promptly acted upon. Nothing half so serious as what we are now called to witness has been experienced by us before. Timely warning was given, but no heed was taken till the crisis closed on the unsuspecting legations in Peking. As I write the capital is isolated and the worst is feared. . . . Intrigue is rife in the capital, and it is said that Prince Tuan, father of the heir-apparent, has taken charge and shut the gates of the palace on the Emperor and the old Dowager. But as he, Prince Tuan, is the head of the Boxers, it would appear that the work of the allies is pretty clearly cut out for them. They will have to suppress the Manchus, overthrow and shut up the Dowager, and if it be possible to get hold of him, restore the Emperor to the throne and dictate the future policy of the country through him.

As to Shanghai and the region round about, while no serious danger is apprehended, as the officials in this region from the viceroy down are friendly to foreigners and opposed to the Boxers, yet every precaution is being taken both by the foreign consuls in concert, and also by the local officials. You need not be anxious as to our not being on the qui vive. But it is plain that the governments of the West have not yet fully apprehended the gravity of the present issue, which is nothing short of the entire expulsion of foreigners from the country, and the extirpation of Christianity from among the people, by destroying all converts, their chapels, churches, etc.; also the entire influence of our civilization as far as may be expressed in reform or the new learning. In other words, it is the expiring (as we hope) effort of the old or conservative regime of the East, of China in particular, against the aggressive power of the new order of things as expressed in commerce and missions.

In 1860, when the allies reached Peking, they had it in their power to dictate the policy of China, but they failed to appreciate it. Now that opportunity has come again, and we hope that the experience of the past forty years will suffice to impress the nations with the absolute necessity of making the best possible use of it. The country—that is, the Chinese as distinguished from the Manchus and the spirit embodied in the Empress Dowager—is in favor of progress, reform, and liberty; and as the Emperor had already commended himself to the Chinese by his liberal decree, it would not be difficult to control the country if he were restored. Boundless possibilities of development are open to China, even easily attainable, with a liberal government, and it is to be hoped that the United States, whose government has so recently done so much in favor of the "Open Door" policy, will not fail to stand in her place at this crisis and vindicate her right to a share in the benefits of China reformed and delivered from the faction (Manchu) whose lease of power would seem to be well-nigh exhausted.

Whereunto this disturbance will grow before finally being subdued no one can say, but this all assuredly believe—to wit, It is the beginning of the end. The only issue anticipated is the overthrow of this long-practiced imperial duplicity and the conversion by force, if need be, of the nation to the idea that foreign nations are as invincible in war as the principles of this civilization are irresistible in the gospel. At present the Chinese have the advantage of us at the North. Our troops were landed as a guard to protect the lives and property of our people against the Boxer banditti and marauders at Peking and Tien Tsin, and to assist the Chinese troops to suppress them. But, lo! the Empress Dowager and the authorities of Peking have resented their landing, and are protecting the Boxer robbers, and opposing, killing, and destroying our people and their property. Hence it is that to suppress the Boxers, we must first suppress the head of the government, and to do that the armies arrayed against us must be overthrown. But that will be easy if the powers unite to do it, and make no compromise. . . .

There is no doubt at all as to the animus of the authorities now dominant in Peking; hence we should not be at all surprised to hear that every foreigner, male and female, in both the capital and Tien Tsin, both of which are now absolutely in the power of the imperial troops, have been murdered. However, insane as the authorities are now, it is just possible that an apprehension of future retribution may stay their hands from such a suicidal process of exterminating their own party and dynasty. [Since the above was written Tien Tsin has fallen into the hands of the allied forces.—EDITOR.]

Pray for us. But let nothing deter you. China must be redeemed. The whole world is interested and involved. It has been said that China is the only country that could make all the European governments shoot in the same direction. That is true now, and every country is represented in the allied fleets at Taku. May this political and military union endure as long as the East opposes the West, and, further, may the glorious opportunity of this persecution against missions produce a similar unity among the great missionary churches, and assure to us in the near future history of China that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church! Hundreds of native Christians have been butchered already, and many more, I fear, will perish before the trouble is quelled. But if the churches will do their duty unappalled by this crisis, the future will vindicate God's providence in China, and make even these terrible experiences to magnify his power and his grace. As ever yours,

YOUNG J. ALLEN.

Shanghai, June 29, 1900.

DEAR DR. LAMBUTH: The viceroys and governors of the Yang-tse Valley and the southern provinces have given every assurance of their purpose to protect all foreigners and their property within their jurisdiction. They have, in conjunction with the foreign consuls at the ports, Shanghai, Chingkiang, Han-kow, etc., concerted thorough and harmonious plans for the instant and rigorous repression of disorder, and we have every reason to believe that there will be no serious disturbance in this part of the country. I sent you a cablegram to-day, saying, "Yang tse Valley quiet." You will understand that it means that the central provinces are not being seriously affected by the war, and that there is no probability of any outbreak against foreigners in this region.

A number of the viceroys and governors of the southern and central provinces have united in sending vigorous remonstrances to the Peking Government against their folly in upholding the Boxer rabble and provoking the enmity of the foreign powers. As the viceroy at Wuchang, Chang Chin Tung, says, "There is but a hair's breadth between the dynasty and destruction." He urges that Kang Yi be dismissed from the government, and that Tung Fu Hsiang, the general whose troops are now fighting the foreigners around Tien Tsin, be cashiered at once. This shows that the usurping reactionaries at Peking have not been able to carry the provincial governors and viceroys with them in their insane effort to drive out all foreigners from the country. God, in his providence, has inclined the hearts of these men to be favorable to foreigners, and therein, humbly speaking, lies a large factor for our safety here. If they had followed up Kang Yi and Prince Tuan in their war against foreigners, then we should have been in very great danger, indeed, in Shanghai, and, in fact, all over the country. There would have been no place where we could have rested in peace on the soil of China—at least, not until an overwhelming force of foreign soldiers could have reached here and taken possession of some of the ports along the coast. But it would have taken so long to accomplish such a tremendous task as that that most of the foreigners would either have been massacred or driven out ere foreign troops could come to our help. But the good Lord has many ways of taking care of his people, and we are in his hands. . . .

God is ruling this storm, and he will accomplish his own purposes of love and mercy for the people, no matter what wicked men and devils may do to oppose him. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Yours in his name,

A. P. PARKER.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

President McKinley's conditional acquiescence in the request of the Chinese Emperor to mediate with the powers to bring about a restoration of law and order in China without war, is very favorably regarded in Washington, not only because it was in keeping with the highest conception of the duty of the head of a great Christian nation, but because it promises to put a speedy end to the uncertainty regarding the fate of the foreigners in Pekin. If the Chinese Government has been acting in good faith in its declarations through its Ministers, at Washington and in Europe, it should not find it either difficult or humiliating to comply with the President's conditions—to put the foreign Ministers in communication with their governments, and to have the imperial army act in concert with the powers in restoring law and order. If it has not been acting in good faith, it can have no right to expect either mediation or mercy from any of the powers whose treaty rights have been trampled upon. If the Chinese Emperor accepts the conditions imposed by President McKinley, and lives up to them, that will practically end the present troubles in China, and make the sending of an allied army to Pekin unnecessary. If he declines to accept, or quibbles, it will be taken to mean that the Chinese Government has been intentionally deceiving this government about the safety of Mr. Conger and the other Ministers in Pekin.

Bishop Thoburn, of the M. E. Church, whose many years' residence in India and China has given him an insight into Eastern affairs such as few Americans have, and who has only recently returned from China, has some very positive opinions on the methods which should be used to give China permanent peace. He thinks there never will be abiding peace in China until some powerful Christian government takes the work in hand, overthrows all the Chinese armies, establishes a vigorous government all through the interior, and disarms the people, as has been done in India. He thinks the idea of maintaining the integrity of the present Chinese Empire utterly hopeless, and that if the English-speaking nations continue the policy embraced in that idea, other countries will gradually absorb the Empire, which, he thinks, would be deplored for centuries to come, both by the Chinese and the English-speaking peoples. Of our relations to China, Bishop Thoburn said: "I think Providence indicates somewhat clearly our duty in the immediate present. As to the future, we can only trust to the development of events for further guidance. Without any planning or seeking, we have been placed in possession of the strongest naval position in the immediate vicinity of China. We are destined in the early future, unless we blindly refuse to accept an opportunity which Providence manifestly is offering to us, to become the strongest naval power in the Pacific. Nearly forty years ago a brilliant Scotch writer published an article, in which he pointed out that the Pacific Ocean was destined to become a great American lake. Our country lies face to face opposite China. We ought to maintain not only a strong position, but the leading position in that part of the world. At the present time our leaders are trusting altogether too much to Secretary Hay's agreement with European powers to maintain an open door in China. That agreement is worth nothing whatever unless the American Government is prepared to enforce its terms, if necessary. Russia could promise to-day, and to-morrow quietly inform our government that, owing to the change of boundary lines, it had been found necessary to introduce a common fiscal system throughout the empire. In such a case the promise given to Mr. Hay would not be worth the ink used in writing it. I think five or six of our strongest men-of-war should have been sent at once to the Chinese coast, and a force of not less than ten thousand troops as quickly as possible, in order that the world should be convinced that we know our rights, and dare to maintain them."

State Department officials are confident, from reports sent by consuls and private individuals, that outside of Pekin and Pao-Ting-Fu no Americans have been killed in China. The department has spared no expense in cabling for information as to the safety of Americans who are known to have been in China, either as missionaries, business men, or travelers, and is constantly making new efforts to ascertain the fate of those at Pekin in a manner so authentic that the doubts which surround the Chinese assertions of the safety of the ministers may be removed.

Washington, July 25, 1900.

ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference convened at Bunkie, June 13, 1900. The Rev. J. D. Harper, our faithful and efficient presiding elder, occupied the chair. The opening sermon was preached by the Rev. Geo. Jackson, one of our beloved and time-honored superannuates; text, "God forbid that I should glory, save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ."

The delightful weather, good attendance on the part of the citizens, the open-hearted hospitality of the good people of Bunkie, and the spirit of brotherly love that pervaded the Conference throughout—all conspired to make it a most enjoyable and profitable occasion. The routine business of the Conference was taken up, and reports of most of the works showed progress and hopefulness. Several of the preachers reported protracted meetings that had resulted in glorious revivals. Churches are being erected and parsonages built on some of the works. Preachers are laboring energetically, and in most places the outlook is encouraging. Nine pastors were present and six absent, and very many of the lay delegates were absent. The Conference passed a resolution condemnatory of those preachers and laymen who are members of our body who have absented themselves without rendering a legal excuse," and "resolved that preachers be requested to complain against members of the Quarterly Conference who, having been elected to the District Conference, fail to attend the same, and that the Bishop be requested, under call of Question 20, to inquire whether the preachers attend the District Conference, and if not, why not?" If the absent members of the Conference had been present, the writer is sure they could have easily voted down the above resolution by a handsome majority. No tobacco or anti-tobacco legislation was promulgated. Following the lead of the Shreveport District Conference in conferring the degree of D. D. upon Bro. Alford, I am sure the Alexandria District Conference, had it been cognizant of its executive and electoral functions, would have elected at least two Bishops (Lee and Turner) and several D. D.'s.

In connection with the District Conference, Bro. Harper had arranged elaborate and appropriate programmes for holding a Sunday-school Conference and a Missionary Institute. These two features of the Conference added largely to the interest and instructiveness of the occasion, and were sources of enjoyment to all.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Centenary College, was a welcome guest of the Conference, and made a telling speech for Centenary.

Dr. LaPrade, representing the Twentieth Century Movement, delivered himself in his usual felicitous manner, and his genial face added much to the pleasure of the Conference. A strong educational resolution was adopted.

Bro. R. H. McGimsey, on the education resolution, and Bros. Ward and Watson, with other delegates, were prominently connected with the business of the Conference.

The preaching, like all Methodist preaching, might be compared irregularly as "good, better, best."

The "love-feast" on Sunday was a gracious occasion. More than a hundred testimonies for Christ.

Delegates to the Annual Conference are: J. M. Watson, R. H. McGimsey, Dr. S. D. Ward, and W. A. White.

Bro. N. J. Roberts, as a Conference host, can not be surpassed. No doubt about that.

The writer enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. J. M. Watson, whose delightful family spared no pains in providing for the comfort and pleasure of their guests.

Alexandria was selected as the place for the next Conference.

On the adjournment of the Conference the members departed for their homes, carrying many pleasant memories of the little city of Bunkie and its hospitable people.

C. C. MILLER, Sec'y.

The 20th Century Movement.

AN EXPRESSION OF OUR FAITH.

The Twentieth Century Educational Movement is the expression of the faith of the church as well as of its growth. Great achievement calls for great liberality. The history of the church for the past fifty years is explanatory of the present educational movement, and justly so, for the church should give expression to its gratitude for prosperity. Individuals sometimes receive rare blessings, but never seem to think that it is their duty to return thanks for these blessings. We trust that our people will all learn a lesson from the conduct of Abraham, who pursued Amraphel, king of Shinar, after he had captured Sodom, and carried away Lot and his family, and rescued Lot and his family with all their goods, and when Abraham met Melchizedek on his return from the slaughter of the kings, he, to show his gratitude, gave Melchizedek, who was God's priest, the tenth of the spoil. During the century now closing the efforts of the church have been wonderfully successful. Think for a moment of an annual increase of thirty-seven thousand to the Methodist Church and fourteen thousand to the Baptist Church. With such an increase, do we not need a revival in school interest? We are expecting every member of the church to make a free-will offering to the church of one dollar, at least. This is a small amount, and we are commanded not to despise the day of small things.

B. H. RAWLS.

Tylertown, Miss.

A NOBLE OBJECT-LESSON.

The pastor and members of Grace Church, Atlanta, have given a noble object-lesson to all who are disposed to think that the work for missions in China should cease until the troubles in that empire are quieted. That church takes the correct position that the agitations in China will result in conditions more favorable to missionary operations than ever before, and there being already a very large proportion of Chinese who are demanding Western civilization and favor the mission movement, there will be a greater demand when these troubles are over.

Hence they recognize that it is the duty of the church at home to get ready to meet that demand when it comes. In accord with that view Rev. J. E. Dickey, the pastor of Grace Church, preached on the Twentieth Century Movement last Sunday with special reference to the needs of the Soochow school enterprise. After the sermon he called for contributions to that enterprise, and with hearty accord his people responded with donations amounting to $1,200.

When we remember that this church is by no means a rich one, the response was remarkable, and the lesson is one that ought to inspire the whole church.—Wesleyan Advocate.

The total subscriptions up to date to the Twentieth Century Movement for the Tennessee Conference amount to about $43,500, without counting Mrs. Nicholson's gift. The membership of the church in the bounds of this Conference, reported in the last "Journal," is 67,225. It will, therefore, be seen that about two-thirds of the amount necessary to secure a dollar per member for this Conference has now been pledged.—Midland Methodist.

"What is this educational mass meeting for?" asked one layman of another. "Oh, they want money, I guess," answered the other, as he winked knowingly, and thrust his tongue into his cheek with self-complacent wit, forgetting the fact that the quid had cost him more money in a month than the church had cost him in a year.—Midland Methodist.

"I think in this Twentieth Century Movement we have made a mistake in not emphasizing sufficiently the fact that its offering is a thank-offering."—Bishop Duncan.

PRAYER.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

A prayerful soul breathes through the face
Like perfume through a rose;
No art can imitate the grace
Of spiritual repose.

The heart that talks with God in prayer
Unconsciously imparts
Some portion of the truths learned there
To other minds and hearts.

It needs no utterance of a word,
It needs no pen or book;
What God speaks to the heart is heard
In every act or look.

Pray much; in pleasure, toil, or rest,
Call on that Unseen Force,
And let your heart kneel in your breast,
Communing with The Source.

PARIS LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

THE PALACE OF CONGRESSES AND HISTORY OF RELIGIONS.

Strange as it may seem, about the best place to study the United States at the present time is in the Paris Universal Exposition. When you are very close to a big thing you can not see it. Perspection is necessary in measuring its scope. I have just returned from a visit to the building where many International Congresses, Sociologic, Scientific, Philanthropic, Educational and Religious, are held. The Congresses sit in the large upper halls where many eminent specialists from all parts of the world are met to confer and discuss. In the lower halls are exhibits of various countries, and the exhibit of the United States is in the second room to the right. In all the rooms of these buildings are displayed pictures, tables, maps, and models of hospitals, schools, reformatory institutions, libraries, etc. It is interesting to know that our country is ahead of all others in circulating libraries, and surprising to learn that Italy comes next. We have not nearly such large libraries as some other countries, but the difference is, that ours are mobile and useful, while these old country libraries are stagnant. The great libraries of Europe are for savants, ours are for the people. If you doubt this, try to get into one of the old-world libraries, and see what a mesh of obstruction and red tape you will have to struggle through. You will need to present a written order before you can enter, and the man from whom you get it is more inaccessible than a United States cabinet minister. You can enter the National Library at Washington, and I think any library in the United States, and read without formality or card any book on the shelves. Mr. Melville Dewey, of the State of New York, has done more for the improvement of the circulating library than any other man. The idea which possessed him was that a library should not be a mere reservoir or museum for rare and curious books, but a reservoir with pipes leading into every household. In other words, dissemination, rather than accumulation, has been his aim and accomplishment. The broadcasting of wholesome, chaste literature by means of the traveling country libraries of recent invention is bound to have a most salutary effect upon the intelligence of the country, and will doubtless do much to neutralize the flood of cheap, bad books and debasing journalism. "Do you know," said Ruskin, "if you read that book, you can not read this one?" When we reflect that only a small proportion of the really good books can be read in a lifetime it is literally true that in reading a trashy book we are losing forever the time to read a good one.

It is auspicious for the future intelligence of the citizens of the United States, and especially of Italy, that these two countries lead all others in the circulation of wholesome literature. It means for Italy a completion of her emancipation which was only partially accomplished when Garibaldi entered Rome and overthrew the temporal power of the Pope. Yesterday I saw on one of the most crowded boulevards of Paris a long procession of boys of from eight to twelve years old marshalled by two men who were in citizen's clothes, and not as in former days the long domino of priests. I asked one of the leaders if they were public school children. The reply was: "Oui, Monsieur, garcons de l'ecole Nationale." I could not help saying, "Vive l'ecole publique!" for the future of France is more dependent on the education of the youth of the country than its great army.

I shall have more to say about this Palais of Congresses and the questions considered by the eminent specialists who are now here. To my mind this, while the least frappant, is really the most important part of the Exposition. It means more for human amelioration than the latest thing in plows, automobiles or electricity, though I must not be understood as minifying their usefulness. I learn that there will be no Congress of Religions such as was held at Chicago, but there is on the program "d'Histoire des Religions" to be discussed from the third to the eight of September inclusive, and this will doubtless bring up the subject in its breadth. There will be no participation by the Roman Catholics.

As the very intelligent Frenchman, M. Emile Bourgevis, of the office of the Secretary-General, said: "The Catholics do not like discussion." For reasons of policy the Catholics took a part in the Chicago symposium. It had to be done, or the utter unfitness of the church for intelligent modern humanity and Christianity would have been accentuated in a way to seriously injure this great politico-religious organization in the United States, but there was an entre nous understanding between the American hierarchy and the Vatican that the fraternization of Cardinal Gibbons and others at Chicago was for effect, and their lavity on this occasion did not in the least affect the ancient policy of Rome. Indeed, it was quickly followed by a repressive and retrogressive encyclical from the Pope, and a reaction against "Americanism" or "Heckerism"—in other words, a reaction against common-sense as applied to religion.

There is not in France or in French politics any reason why the Catholic Church should make a pretense of liberality as she did in the United States at Chicago, for just as an attempt to appear abreast with the age would help her in a country where religionists think, it would injure her prestige and her power with a people who, in matters of religion, at least, have had for ages all thought repressed.

DISTRICT DOTS.

The presiding elder's position gives him a broader field of vision than the circuit preacher or the man in the station can possibly have, and, for this reason, he ought to get a more comprehensive view of things pertaining to the progress of the cause of Christ. I have long thought that such a commanding position demands that its incumbent should possess a heart overflowing with a sincere love for human kind, and a mind capable of seeing things in their true relations and able to coordinate all influences so as to make them work harmoniously in God's great plan of human redemption. The importance of such a position imposes heavy responsibilities, and the duties which arise out of this relation are most onerous, and, in our polity, some measure of success depends upon the wisdom exhibited in meeting those responsibilities and the alertness manifested in discharging those duties. I have never been able to discover the rule by which our Bishops choose presiding elders; that is, the rule that will fit every case. I suppose that in their godly judgments they do the best they can with the material they have in hand. I happened to be some of that material, and, therefore, I am in this high place. Occupying this position, I am obliged to see things which I did not see in other positions. Of some of these things I will write.

I am not a stickler for old things simply because they are old. With all my heart I believe in progress, and progress means that much that is old will be passed by and forgotten. The world and the church outgrow many ancient and venerable things. A progressive church comes into conditions where many long-cherished usages fall out of use because they are no longer usable. But there are some old things which are good yet, and will be good as long as human life continues as it is. There are a few good old things connected with our church services which we ought to be careful to cherish. But I notice that some of our preachers are giving these good old usages very little attention.

The ritual of our church is very simple, and eminently appropriate for all occasions for which it is provided. Some of it is said to be more than a thousand years old. Long experience has demonstrated that it can not be improved in its simplicity, nor can anything be substituted for it that will equal its appropriateness. There is good reason, then, for making its use mandatory. The law of the church says, "The ritual shall be invariably used in all the offices for which it is prescribed." In the face of this positive law some of our preachers conduct the services according to programs of their own devising—programs less appropriate and far inferior to the ritual prescribed. This practice educates our people in a wrong direction. It educates them to be satisfied with usages which are not Methodistic, and which are far inferior to those we have inherited from our fathers. It is a bad business to train anybody to be content with things of an inferior quality!

Our Book of Discipline lays down an order of public services in the church, and says positively, "The morning service shall be conducted in the following order," and then gives the order. This is as mandatory as words can make it. This is the rule by which we are to be guided in conducting the public service. Every preacher, when admitted into full connection, promised "not to mend our rules, but keep them." Yet there are many preachers who never follow this order of service. This is specially the case with the younger preachers. In many cases very little Scripture is read in the hearing of the congregation. There is manifested an unbecoming haste in hurrying through the introductory services to get to the sermon, as if that were something far superior to the Word of God. When the church, by the hands of the Bishop, presented the Bible to the preacher, and said, "Take thou authority to read the Holy Scriptures in the church of God," she expected the preacher to exercise that authority upon every proper occasion, and that was his promise. There is one reason for reading the Scripture in the congregation which is valid everywhere, and that is, there are many people who never read it at home, and the only Scripture they ever get is what they hear at church. It is also made mandatory upon us to use the Lord's Prayer in the morning service and the apostolic benediction in dismissing the congregation. These seem to be going out of use entirely in some places. There is a preacher whom I have heard at least a hundred times dismiss congregations, and I have never heard him use the benediction prescribed. And yet we all, as preachers, have promised "not to mend our rules, but keep them."

Now, some may think I am stickling about matters that are not essential. I put the case in this nutshell. As preachers, we have voluntarily promised to "keep our rules." That promise has created a duty; a failure to do that duty is a sin; sin carries its punishment in dimming the intellect and weakening the moral nature, and that paves the way for easier failures in the future. The harm that comes of unfaithfulness to voluntary vows is in the weakness and deterioration which are wrought in the mental and spiritual natures. This is the reason Solomon said, 'Better is it that thou shouldest not vow than that thou shouldest vow and not pay." P. E.

"HOW SHALL THE MISSIONARY SPIRIT AMONG OUR PEOPLE BE INCREASED?"

(Read before the Missionary Institute of the Corinth district, North Mississippi Conference, at Inka, Miss., May 8 and 9, 1900, and published by request of that body.)

Having been appointed by our beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. M. Young, to take part in the discussion of this all-important subject, and having a personal knowledge of the fact that his heart is burdened with anxiety for the intelligent development of the missionary spirit throughout his district, and believing his plans to be wise and efficient, and calculated under the guidance of the Holy Ghost to lead our preachers and people to great success, I commit a few of my choice thoughts on the subject to paper, to be conveyed to you through the kindness of my pastor, Rev. H. S. Spraggins:

To be a Christian is to have the missionary spirit, and to have the missionary spirit is to have the "mind in you which was also in Christ Jesus." "Now, if any man have not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his." We are expected to give some satisfactory answer to the above question, which, if brought into service, will increase the disposition on the part of our people in the district to spread the religion of Jesus Christ. To our mind this question contains the main-spring of our whole success as pertaining to missions. Hence the answer should be both clear and accurate. We give the following prescription as a sure cure, and one that will certainly increase the circulation of the missionary spirit among our people:

1. An old-fashioned Holy-Ghost revival in all of our congregations, such as is born of fervent prayer, and preaching the old fundamental truths of the gospel as laid down in our Lord's sermon in the mount, in his orders to the seventy, and in the third chapter of John, and also embracing the crucifixion, resurrection of Jesus Christ, his final commission to his disciples, the doctrine of future rewards and punishment, and of the general judgment. There is a pressing demand in these shallow days for going over the old battle-ground of the cross where our fathers preached till the world trembled beneath their feet. We must preach repentance, faith, regeneration, and entire consecration of body, talent and means to the service of God; and then that promised power, deep spiritual life, or sanctification, will as certainly come upon the people as "the fire of the Lord fell and consumed the burnt sacrifice of Elijah" in days of old, or as they were all filled with the Holy Ghost on the day of Pentecost. Then there will be no further trouble about money to send the gospel to the foreign fields. The revival that will increase the missionary spirit among our people will never be born of strife one way or the other. But Christ alone must be preached in all of his love and fullness. The forces of the church must not be divided—"Together we stand, divided we fall."

2. To increase the missionary spirit our pastors must feed the flock of God with the bread of missionary preaching from the pulpit. The pulpit stands head and shoulders above everything else. Pastors must "not shun to declare all the counsel of God" on this subject. The great weight of our Master's command must be earnestly and intelligently laid upon the consciences of the people, that it is their Christian duty to go or send, and tell the world of Jesus and of his love. As a rule, Christian people do as they are taught by the preachers. They must be faithfully instructed by their ministers in love and simplicity as to the solemn obligation they are under to spread the gospel. For pastors to postpone preaching on the subject of missions until the hour before taking his collection is not a good plan. Because of this mistake some pastors fail to get the full amount of their assessment. There are more ways than one to preach on missions. Before preaching on the subject the minister of God has no right to preface his message with a long string of apologetical preliminaries. This method of itself greatly tends to increase the prejudice already existing in the minds of some people, and thus hinders the very end the pastor wants to accomplish. We are commanded to preach the gospel as it is in Jesus without apologies, yet with hearts of love and tongues of fire. The collection itself is the easiest part about it, provided the necessary information has gone before, and is in the minds of the people. As to the manner in which a pastor takes his missionary collection, is also very important. An intelligent, godly pastor ought to be able to put the same degree of interest into the minds and hearts of his people that he himself has in the subject of missions. The greater part of our missionary contributions come from members who are well informed on the missionary question.

3. To increase the missionary spirit among our people the circulation of the right kind of literature is absolutely indispensable. As a student can not learn at school without books, as a farmer can not till the soil without the necessary implements, likewise it is impossible to educate our people on the subject of missions without putting such books and church papers into their homes as they need. Pastors who calculate on having success must utilize this very important method of preaching the gospel. We are commanded to "be wise as serpents and harmless as doves." This obligation can not be fulfilled without placing good literature into the hands of our people. This is pre-eminently a reading age. Every wide-awake pastor will never cease his efforts until his people are supplied with those books and periodicals that he knows will develop in them the missionary spirit. If our pastors do not persuade the people to take such literature as they ought to read, the world will get them to take what they ought not to have. The struggle is between the world and the church. This is the battle-ground where the war of good and evil literature is being fought. It is left for the preachers and official church members to say who shall gain the victory. God bless you all!

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

Mr. Editor: It will be of interest to many of your readers to know something of the extensive improvements we have recently made and are making in our courses of study, faculty, buildings and equipments; therefore, with your permission, I will mention some of them briefly.

The enrollment last year ran up to 361 students, with 185 boarders in the college, with 25 or 30 boarding in town, making over 200 boarding students. We had 242 music students, which, so far as I can learn, is the largest music school in the South. We also had more advanced students, more that were really prepared for college work, and more that wanted to take a high course of study. This led us to add another year to the course of study, and to separate more distinctly the Scientific, or B. S., from the Classical, or A. B. course. This gives us a very high and thorough course. It was already very high, as can be attested by the fact that some of our students who have attended the University of Chicago entered with advanced standing, and received the following substantial compliment, which means much, coming from such a high source:

The University of Chicago.
Office of the Dean of the Senior Colleges,
Chicago, April 23, 1900.

President J. W. Beeson, Meridian, Miss.—

Dear Sir: Your letter, of the eighteenth, to the Recorder has been handed to me, in order that I may answer one of the points concerned. I enclose blank, for advanced standing. Please have Miss ——— fill this out in full, and send to me. There will be no doubt about receiving her without examination and with some advanced standing. Several of your graduates have entered here with some advanced standing, passing through my hands, and my memory is, that the whole of them have been a credit to the work of your institution. It would be well for Miss ——— also to send catalogue of the institution of the date of her graduation.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I am, Yours very truly,

A. H. Tolman, Dean.

Vanderbilt will also admit our students with advanced standing on merit without examination. Wellesley has arranged to admit our students on certificate. This is proof of the high character of work this college is doing, and now, with another year added, it makes the work still higher. We have also arranged two shorter courses—one a normal course, for public school teachers; one a high school, or business course. These are to accommodate those who can't remain long in school, and who want to prepare for business, or for public-school examinations.

We have also added a department of domestic science, including scientific cooking, chemistry of foods, etc. This, I believe, is the first private, or church institution, in this country to make this departure. We have in charge of it one who has spent a year at the Oread Institute of Domestic Science, of Worcester, Mass., taking a full course, graduating in June with honors. This subject of domestic science, scientific cooking, chemistry of foods, etc., has long been neglected in the South. Our women depend too much on the colored "Mammies," and know too little themselves about what we eat and how to prepare it. Our girls ought to be taught this subject in college. Hence we have gone to considerable expense in establishing this department.

We are also arranging to erect and thoroughly equip a chemical lecture-room and laboratory for sciences, etc. We are spending a great deal of money on the department of science, and intend to have it second to that of no college for girls in the South in this line. We have employed as teacher of sciences a brother of the president, Prof. M. A. Beeson, B. S., a graduate of the A. and M. College of Alabama, who has made a specialty of the sciences, and will be one of the best teachers of this department in the State. Another brother of the president, J. L. Beeson, A. M., Ph.D., from Johns Hopkins, who has made a specialty of the sciences for years with great success, has been engaged on account of his experience and ability to plan and equip the new laboratory. This will put our science department ahead of most colleges for girls.

The Chair of Languages is filled by an A. B. from Wellesley; the Chair of Mathematics by a post-graduate student from the University of Chicago; the Chair of Higher English by an A. B. from the University of South Carolina; the Chair of History and Philosophy by an A. M. from the Potter College. The assistant in English is also a post-graduate student of the University of Chicago, etc. In fact, our equipment and faculty are by far the finest we have ever had, and already a large number of the rooms have been engaged for next session.

We have the same great pianist as director of music, with an able corps of 9 musicians as assistants. This department has the confidence of musicians, as can be seen by the enrollment of 242 music students.

Last year we had 90 girls to profess salvation, which, for religious work, surpassed that of any previous year. In fact, we put the religious above everything else. While we do not neglect the intellectual and physical training, we aim to make them secondary to the spiritual. We believe in Matt. vi, 33, and are trying to carry out the command of the Master. Our pastors have, doubtless, found some noble Christian workers and helpers in our girls we have sent home this Summer. Many have written me of starting family prayers in homes in which prayer was never head, the girls conducting worship themselves in presence of father and mother. Many have started Sunday-schools, Bible classes, prayer meetings, or some sort of Christian work. This is not the case, Mr. Editor, with girls returning from most colleges. They generally return full of slang and college airs. God forbid that we should send them out other than Christian workers. This is the great need of the country today—a Christian young womanhood. Of course, we fail in some individual cases, but most of our girls went away bright Christians, and, I believe, every one went away a better girl than when she came.

DYING WITHOUT GOD.

A youth at one of the large iron works in Sheffield was some time ago accidentally thrown on to a red-hot armor plate. When he was rolled off by his fellow-workmen it was doubtful if he could live, as nearly all one side of him was burned to the bone. His workmate cried, "Send for the doctor!" but the poor, suffering youth cried:

'Never mind sending for the doctor; is there anyone here who can tell me how to get saved? My soul has been neglected, and I'm dying without God. Who can help me?'

Although there were 300 men around him, there was no one who could tell him the way of salvation. After twenty minutes of untold agony, he died as he had lived! The man who saw this accident, and heard the cries of the dying youth, was a wretched backslider, and when I asked him how he felt about the matter, he said:

"I have heard the cries ever since, and wished I could have stooped down and pointed him to Jesus, but my life closed my lips."

Does your life tell sinners that you are saved, or does it close your lips when those around hear you talk and witness your actions?—Texas Advocate.

The layman who would not be missed from his church membership more than a broom-straw pulled out of the ocean ought to begin to ask himself the wherefore of it all. A plume on a hearse, and a piece of crepe on a hat or arm, are not evidences enough that some one has lived and died.—Midland Methodist.

MUD SLINGERS.

At almost the last school I attended the small boys had what they called their mud-battles, usually in the Spring time after a rain. Those who were to take part divided into two squads, and took their stations on each side of a ravine whose banks abounded in clay. Each boy was provided with a long, keen switch of some tough wood—generally from a plum thicket. At a given signal each boy pressed a small clay ball tight on the end of his switch, and with a quick and dexterous swish sent the mud ball at the object of his attack, and woe to the boy who was so unfortunate as to be hit. The victory was with the side that was successful in crossing the ravine and driving their opponents to cover. Some of the boys became so successful in the art of mud-slinging that they could hit an adversary easily at a hundred yards range.

I have often wondered lately of people I have met, here and there, if they had not served their apprentice ship in the mud-slingers' army. It surely seems so.

I heard a college president, a few years ago, present the claims of his school to a District Conference, and from start to finish his harangue abounded in abuse of a neighboring school of his own denomination.

A preacher who had lately left the Southern Methodist Church was preaching in the bounds of this pastoral charge last year. He abounded in abuse of our Bishops and connectional officers and ministry, and set himself up as a dictator whose wisdom in regard to doctrine and polity was superior to that of all our conferences and councils.

Lately I attended a Conference of one arm of our church organization, and there before the young life of the church I was pained to find the mud-slinger at work. In this case, as in many others that have come under my notice, the object at which the missile was thrown was not present.

It is generally the case that the mud-slinger lacks those essential attributes of character that mark the true gentleman, and abounds in those that predominate in the low politician and hoodlum element of large cities. When a man has sunk so low in human depravity that he feels it necessary to pull down the reputation of some one better than he is to raise himself up in the world, then we can count it a sure thing that he is not worthy of the honor he seeks. He had better step down and out and make room for some one with merits of his own.

In these days the mud-slinger is to be found almost everywhere—of both genders and all ages. Who has not heard the gossip of the village tear down a reputation to such an extent that months of right conduct would be required to live down the effect of half dozen sentences? I once knew a preacher's wife handicapped for a whole year in a community by the remark of the former pastor's wife, "They say she is proud." I heard a man remark once of his pastor, "Well, he is a good man, I expect; but he is not of our kind."

Surely Methodists, who have promised to refrain from "uncharitable or unprofitable conversation," and who profess to love the law of God which includes all backbiters from the rewards of the gospel, should not be enlisted in the mud-slingers' army.

"Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill?.... He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor." (15th Psalm.)

PREACHERS' INSTITUTE.

The Preachers' Institute for Holly Springs district met in Red Banks, July 4, at 9 A. M. Bro. Hounoll, our presiding elder, was in the chair, presiding in his usual business-like manner. The meeting proved quite a success in almost every particular. The attendance was very good; most of the preachers in the district being present. The congregations were very much better than was expected, and most earnestly attentive.

The preaching, which was done by Bros. A. W. Langley, G. W. Strickland and M. D. Fly, was of a high order. It had the old-time gospel ring, and was truly edifying and soul-stirring. The subjects of depravity, the salvation of the heathen without the gospel, peculiar doctrines of Methodism, rebaptism, and others, were very earnestly discussed.

The good people of the little town of Red Banks vied with each other in hospitality. I never saw a more generous people. May their kind increase!

All in all, the meeting was profitable and pleasant to all, for which we are due Bro. Babb thanks for kind attention, and also Bro. Hounoll for an appropriate and timely program.

DR. CHALMERS' STORY.

There is a story of Dr. Chalmers. A lady came to him, and said: 'Doctor, I can not bring my child to Christ. I've talked, and talked, but it's of no use." The Doctor thought she had not much skill, and said, "Now you be quiet and I will talk to her alone." When the Doctor got the Scotch lassie alone he said to her: "They are bothering you a great deal about this question; now suppose I just tell your mother you don't want to be talked to any more upon this subject for a year. How will that do?" Well, the Scotch lassie hesitated a little, and then said she 'didn't think it would be safe to wait for a year, something might turn up. She might die before then." "Well, that's so," replied the Doctor, "but suppose we say six months." She didn't think even this would be safe. "That's so," was the Doctor's reply; 'well, let us say three months." After a little hesitation the girl finally said, 'I don't think it would be safe to put it off three months—don't think it would be safe to put it off at all," and they went down on their knees and found Christ.—Moody's Child Stories.

FROM THE WORK.

GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT INDIAN BAYOU, LA.

We have just closed our protracted meeting at this place. The good Lord was with us in great power from beginning to finish. We have received thirty members into the church, and have over twenty applicants more to receive. I don't know how many were converted, but over three hundred who were unsaved before the meeting began promised to lead new lives. The oldest men here say they never saw such congregations, nor so much interest manifested before. The congregation the last night of the meeting was estimated at one thousand. Bro. A. W. Turner, of Boyce, preached for us six days and the writer preached four more. Bro. Turner did us some splendid preaching. I never had better revival preaching, and I don't believe any evangelist in the land could have had better results than we had.

J. P. HANEY.

WATERPROOF, LA.

On July 2 we commenced prayer meeting in Waterproof, holding services every night during the week. On the eighth we looked for ministerial help, but a night or two before a card came, notifying us that the preacher we expected could not come. However, we went on with the services through the following week. On Tuesday evening Bro. Neil, of Winsboro, came, and remained until the following Wednesday week. The meeting closed on Monday night, the sixteenth instant. The congregations were tolerably good, considering the weather. Bro. Neil preached us some fine gospel sermons, which we all enjoyed. Several came to the altar, but no conversions were reported. We believe that much good has been done.

On Sunday, July 22, our Sunday-school at Waterproof held their Children's Day. It was a bright, cheering, happy time. We enjoyed listening to the children as they spoke and sang, for the programme selected by the Sunday-school Committee was appropriate and helpful. The children and grown people who took part all did well, and our youthful organist also performed her part excellently. We raised $4.65 clear of expense.

MARIETTA CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I have just closed a ten days' meeting of great spiritual power. It began at Blythe Chapel, on the Marietta circuit, eight miles from Booneville, on the third Sunday in July. It was opened by a Children's Day service at 10 o'clock, which was very interesting; then a few minutes after eleven there was preaching by the pastor, who preached on day and night for ten days, including the fourth Sunday. We had no ministerial help. The Lord was with the pastor and his flock with unusual manifestations of his presence. There were not as many conversions as we usually have in meetings of such deep work of grace, but there were some very bright converts, many backsliders were reclaimed, and the whole church was aroused to action. One of the results is that all the financial claims of the church will be brought up in full. This church, like many others, needed this revival very much.

We begin another meeting soon, and shall work and pray for a great revival throughout the charge.

We are now ready to begin the erection of a good church-building at Wheeler's Station, on the M. and O. R. R, and hope to have it ready for holding a revival meeting in it this season. We have the money in hand for the material, and so will pay as we go. This house of worship will be first-class, 36x60 feet. Pray for us.

Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

MOBISM IN NEW ORLEANS.

As a result of the foul assassination early Tuesday morning, of last week, of two police officers and the serious wounding of a third by a negro desperado, who defied arrest and succeeded in making good his escape, a large mob, composed of toughs and hoodlums, assembled in this city the night following the deplorable tragedy, bent on attacking and killing negroes, and wreaking diabolical vengeance upon them. The city was kept in a terrible uproar nearly the whole night, being completely in the hands of the mob, which assaulted every negro it met, and committed a multitude of outrageous acts. During that night of terror one negro was killed, two were fatally injured, and twelve other persons, several of whom are white, were more or less seriously wounded. One store was completely looted of weapons and goods. An attempt was made to storm the Parish Prison, where several negroes were confined, but the police having anticipated this effort, were thoroughly prepared to meet it, and succeeded in thwarting the attempt.

During the greater part of Thursday the rabble continued its acts of violence and intimidation, as the result of which business was very seriously affected, and the entire negro population was terrorized. Most of the large wholesale houses, which employ negro teamsters and porters, were unable to fill orders because of insufficient help, while dozens of retail establishments experienced similar trouble. Later in the day it was learned that mob rule had caused Louisiana State bonds to depreciate from a point to a point and a half on the New York market. By noon the better element of the city became thoroughly aroused to the gravity of the situation, and thousands volunteered to assist the police in restoring order. The mayor had 1,500 special officers sworn in; part of the State militia was ordered out by the governor, since which time further acts of violence and lawlessness have, for the most part, been suppressed.

During the prevalence of mobism the saloon keepers showed their usual disregard for law and order. Although at an early hour on Thursday the mayor wisely ordered the saloons to be kept closed for the remainder of the day, in order to keep down lawlessness as much as possible, the saloonists, with but few exceptions, paid no attention to the mayor's instructions, and the police, astonishing to tell, seemed to make little or no effort to enforce the mayor's order.

We feel sure that the majority of the colored people in this city deeply deplore the recent terrible tragedies as much as do the whites, and it is both highly unreasonable and unjust to hold a whole race responsible for the lawless acts of one, or more, individuals.

As the Times-Democrat well says in a recent editorial anent this outbreak of mobism:

"The bloody horse-play of the mobs is full of instruction for the whole South. It is evident that the grand idea of white supremacy has become the stalking-horse of anarchy in this part of the Union. It can not be too quickly and conclusively shown that negro rule was not shattered for the mere purpose of placing the reins in the hands of white disciples of the Commune. The Caucasian is now in control of all departments of the government, and he must attest his claim to superiority by a rigid and impartial exercise of power. Every industrious and law-abiding negro must be protected in his life and property; the thriftless and lawless must be punished by inflexible, but purely legal, methods. Communities can not, any more than individuals, afford to play with fire. It behooves the colored people especially to keep a close watch on wretches of the Charles type, so that incidents like the murder of Day and Lamb shall never be repeated."

THE NEGRO DESPERADO KILLED.

On Friday afternoon, July 27, several hours after the above was written, information having been obtained as to the probable location of the house in which the negro desperado, Charles, had taken refuge, a squad of police was sent thither to effect his capture. Before it was found in what part of the house he was lurking, he shot down two policemen, one of whom died instantly, the other lingering but a short while. A terrible fight, lasting fully two hours, then ensued between the negro murderer and a large number of officers and citizens, who determined to capture him at any cost. All attempts to kill him or drive him out of the building failed, until it was set on fire. He then had to come out, and met a speedy death, his body being riddled with bullets. Ere he was despatched, he succeeded in killing and mortally wounding six men, including the two policemen murdered two days before. He also wounded seven other persons. So intense was the excitement and infuriation caused by this terrible affair, that the mob which had collected was with difficulty restrained from slaughtering negroes indiscriminately. Despite heroic efforts by the police to protect them, several other negroes were killed, one of them having been arrested in the house where the desperado was harbored. Had it not been for the splendid service rendered by the citizen police and the militia, it is probable that a riot would have ensued, and that there would have been a general massacre of the negroes. Under the circumstances, those whose duty it was to preserve order could hardly have done any better than they did. During the night some unknown person applied the torch to the Thomy Lafon negro school, which was burned to the ground. It was valued at $16,000, and was uninsured.

Later.—Evidence has been obtained showing that the desperado, Charles, was assisted in his last fight by one or two other negroes. Several suspects are under arrest, and the matter is being thoroughly investigated. The city is now perfectly quiet.

WHOM SHALL WE FOLLOW—CHRIST, OR UNCHRISTLIKE MEN?

We know of scarcely anything more amazing than the impotent impudence with which some professing Christians set their own opinions above the express teaching and commands of Christ as regards the duty of disciples and of the church. Such persons are wiser (?) indeed than what is written. It almost passes belief that in this age any man who claims to be a Christian should be so uninstructed and unChristlike as not to believe in foreign missions. The final commission of the Master to his disciples was: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Yet in the face of this explicit command, which leaves not a shadow of a doubt as to the great duty of the church, from time to time some would-be Solomon arises and proclaims it abroad that it is none of our business to seek to convert the Chinese, or any other heathen nation, and has the audacity to assert that the gospel is meant only, or at least chiefly, for the Anglo-Saxon race. The Scriptures emphatically declare that "God hath made of one blood all nations of men;" that "Christ is the propitiation for the sins of the whole world," and also affirm that "the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him."

We must believe in the unity of the race, in the universal scope of the gospel, and in its adaptation to the spiritual needs of all men, or else reject the Bible altogether. Either the gospel was meant for all nations, or it was not meant for any.

Which, then, shall we accept—the teachings of Christ, or the idle speculations and gospel-opposing opinions of selfish, sinful, silly men, some of them, perchance, church members?

THE YELLOW DRAGON.

It looks as if Providence had ordered the Chinese Coat of Arms. The Serpent has been the symbol of the enemy from the time of Man's fall in Eden, until the closing chapters of the Apocalypse.

How expressive of the moral characteristics of China's Viceroyal Ministers that are now dealing with all the outside world is this Yellow Dragon! The depth of their statecraft is deeper than the Yellow Sea; their words smoother than oil. That they should be able to say anything, after the continental breadth of their murders, is most surprising. They have destroyed some of the most cultivated, intelligent, and honorable persons sent to the Empire of China, as representatives from the great States of Christendom. They have put to the sword men and women representing the religion of the Western Nations; they have brained children by the thousand; they have tortured, as cannibals do, their own people who have professed the name of Christ, cutting them to pieces while alive.

It has not been without provocation that this vast empire has arisen from seeming stupor to assert itself. When the several states of Europe attack an empire of four hundred million inhabitants, expecting to divide it out among themselves, what wonder if they encounter a resistance only less than a Java earthquake? Armed with war material of the latest invention, both for land and sea, it will be a mercy of God if this vast horde is content to confine itself to its own geographical limits. Already Corea is moving, and the reaction may involve the Pacific Isles, in a general effort to overthrow the governments of Germany, Holland, Portugal, Spain and England in their distant possessions. Even Japan, that is now with the Allies, has a natural sympathy with China, rather than with the nationalities of Europe.

Fortunately the labor of Christian missionaries during the past fifty years has fitted the East with the Word of God, translated into many tongues, and scattered it, so that every man, as on the day of Pentecost, can hear in his own language the wonderful works of God. And by the Book learn the history of his dealing with them and their fathers; and can realize, by the Holy Spirit, the unutterable riches of Christ toward man.

If Christianity remains the same as in the days of St. Paul, it will be by suffering that the sons of God will be brought to glory through the leadership of the Captain of our salvation. Probably for years to come these unchristian, civilized millions will be left to work out the problem of life, through the Spirit of Christ, without any further intervention of Western Christianity. The seed of the gospel has fallen there upon many a field that will prove rich and deep in autumnal wealth—yielding "an hundred fold." The glory of the Lord will spring from the East, a new centre, to illumine the whole earth.

What stern severity do these terrible chapters in the history of missions give to the labor of love! Religion ceases to be child's play. It is felt to be a matter of life and death. "I came," said Christ, "not to send peace, but a sword; if you have none, sell your garment and buy one." With the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God, we go forth, as ever, conquering and to conquer.

When Peter was delivered into the hands of four relays of soldiers, to be executed the next day, the church made earnest prayer for him, and through an iron gate, and iron shackles on his wrists, an angel brought him out into the open street, to the company of disciples, and to liberty. Yet but little prayer is proposed in the churches or Advocates for the deliverance of Christians in China.

The attendance upon the Southern Epworth League Conference, held in Atlanta last week, was disappointingly small. From five to ten thousand delegates were expected, but less than one thousand put in appearance.

THE SITUATION IN CHINA.

The Chinese Government is undoubtedly playing a bold game in dealing with the outside world, and thus far has succeeded astonishingly well. There is the most urgent need of prompt and energetic action on the part of Europe and America in bringing the Celestial Empire to terms, but, as yet, almost nothing has been done, and there is still prospect of a considerable delay before the allied forces advance upon Pekin. It now turns out that the foreign ministers are being held in Pekin as hostages, pending overtures for the abandonment of hostilities. An advance on Pekin by the allies will, it is stated, be taken as a signal for the slaughter of the foreign ministers by the Chinese. Thus the powers are placed in a most perplexing predicament. Meanwhile the noted Chinese viceroy, Li Hung Chang, is showing himself to be one of the wiliest statesmen the representatives of the foreign powers have ever had to deal with.

An official dispatch, dated July 21, has been received in London from Sir Claude MacDonald, the British ambassador in Pekin, which makes it certain that most of the legationers at Pekin are still alive. The message states that all women and children are in the British legation. Casualties to date, sixty-two killed. For nearly a month preceding July 16 the legation suffered from repeated attacks by the Chinese. Since that date an armistice has been in force, but a cordon has been strictly drawn around the legation.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

On Sunday morning, July 22, the assistant editor had the pleasure of dedicating a neat little church called Pine Grove, located about fifteen miles east of Brookhaven, Miss., on the Lincoln circuit, of which Rev. Geo. W. Hiveley (local preacher) is the efficient and beloved pastor. The building has been used for church purposes for some little time, but was never completed until a few weeks ago. On the day of its dedication it was filled to overflowing with attentive auditors. At the conclusion of the services a delightful dinner was served on the grounds. In the afternoon we enjoyed listening to a stirring sermon by that consecrated local preacher, Rev. Milton Ferrel, who resides within the bounds of the Adams circuit.

During our sojourn in the neighborhood, in company with Bro. Hiveley, we were most hospitably entertained by Bro. John Evans, and by Prof. E. L. Sutton, a warm-hearted Baptist brother.

As the country around Pine Grove is being rapidly developed, the prospects for the future growth of the church, the present membership of which is quite small, are favorable indeed.

WHO ARE OPPOSED TO FOREIGN MISSIONS?

The Herald and Presbyter rightly says: "Those who say, 'I don't believe in foreign missions,' put themselves in very objectionable company. Satan does not believe in foreign missions. Infidels do not believe in foreign missions. The worldly-minded do not believe in foreign missions. Neither do stingy Christians."

A NEW BOOK.

PROBLEMS OF LIFE. Selections from the Writings of Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D. Selected by S. T. D. With introduction by Washington Gladden. 12 mo. 307 pages. Cloth. Price, $1.50. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co.

The selections in this book are from the published writings or reported sermons of Dr. Abbott, from the years 1895-1899, inclusive, and are grouped together in convenient paragraph form, under appropriate heads. It is a volume replete with grand, stimulating, and suggestive thought, and brightly illumines the facts and truths of Christianity as well as the path of Christian duty. The author, who is one of the most scholarly and celebrated preachers in America, is a man of deeply evangelical spirit, and has the skill of making truth appear attractive, impressive, and practical. Among the numerous topics treated of in this book, we note the following: The Home, Character, Love, Courage, Meekness, The World, Luxury, Care, The Brotherhood of Man, The Church, Prayer and Special Blessings, The Bible, Education, God, Christ, The Kingdom of Heaven. Though not designed for consecutive reading, this volume furnishes golden instruction and delightful refreshment for the Christian pilgrim, and light for the truth-seeker. While we do not accept some of the views held by the author, we regard this as an exceedingly valuable and edifying book.

We quote one or two short paragraphs to give some idea of its excellence: "Prayer is not always peacefully talking to God; it is not always quietly listening to God; it is sometimes hard wrestling, not with God, but with ourselves. It is true that we are sometimes to wrestle in prayer, never with God, as though he were holding grudgingly back his gifts, but with ourselves, that we may find our way to him."

"Our earth our best music is dissonant, for our instrument is sadly out of tune. To die is to be set in tune to God's eternal key-note—love. It is to come into harmony with one's self, and, therefore, with God. It is to come into harmony with God, and, therefore, with one's self."

DEATH OF REV. JOSEPH JOHNSON.

The Rev. Joseph Johnson, a superannuated preacher of the North Mississippi Conference, died at his residence in Mt. Pleasant at 4:15 P. M., on July 26. He will be buried in Iuka to-day.

Bro. Johnson has been a traveling preacher for more than fifty years, and was one of the most useful men of North Mississippi and West Tennessee. He died in the faith. A fuller notice will be given soon.

It is a heroic sight to see Bishop Wilson turn his face toward the Orient at this time of darkness and bloodshed. That the prayers and affections of his people will follow him goes without saying. He visits Japan, then Korea, then China, reaching the latter about the first of October. This will make his fifth trip to the far East. It is gratifying to know that the ocean voyage always improves his health. Mrs. Wilson is with him. ***

How fond the enemies of mission work are of crying out that "charity begins at home." It does, indeed, but true charity does not stop there. The ones who are the loudest in proclaiming the half-truth mentioned are usually the ones who care very little about the spiritual and temporal needs of the poor and the neglected at home.

Wherever the Lord's servants engage in any work that calls for unusual sacrifice and self-denial, such as is not seldom necessary in carrying forward the work of foreign missions, there is nearly always a Judas at hand ready to say: "Why this waste of toil and treasure! We are exceedingly sorry to learn that our highly esteemed friend, Dr. W. L. C. Hunniontt, of the Mississippi Conference, has, for a week or more, been dangerously ill at Natchez, Miss. He is being tenderly cared for at the home of Bro. Gus J. Bahin. Sister Hunniontt was called to his bedside early last week. The latest news is that he is now considered out of danger. On account of his illness the Doctor was prevented from attending the Natchez District Conference, which met at Harriston last week, and over which he expected to preside. EDITOR.

The editor regretted very much ol being able to attend the Southern eague Conference; bnt for the erious illness of the little one, he ould have been there.

Let all the preachers go back to he old way. Call mourners, and alk to them and pray with them in he old-fashioned way. We make a lea for the old way.

We are glad to give apace for the ery encouraging report from the Meridian District League Conference. Wish we could have been there.

The Meridian District League Conference was held in Central Church, Meridian, July 10-12, and was a most enjoyable and profitable occasion. M. W. D. Hawkins presided throughout the Conference.

The address of welcome by Mr. Marvin Ormond, of Central League, was responded to by Miss Cora Harrington, of Daleville. We were favored and helped by the presence of Mr. G. H. Mathis, of Columbus, whose inspiring addresses and encouraging words were a great feature of the Conference. Her exemplification of a League social was very fine and much enjoyed. Those who were present will not forget the Butterflies and Sunflowers, and especially the young bachelors and spinsters who united their sundered hearts.

Rev. Richard Wilkinson, of Aberdeen, delivered a lecture on "The Twentieth Century Man," which was highly appreciated.

The committee on the Plan of Work brought in a resolution recommending the holding of advisory meetings annually at three points in the district, viz.: Meridian, Landerdale, and Waynesboro.

Many interesting papers were read and discussed with much freedom and profit. The paper by Miss Maggie Kennedy, of Lauderdale, on "How to Conduct a Literary Meeting," was ordered to be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE and Epworth Era.

The following officers were elected: President, Rev. H. M Ellis; first vice-president, Mr. J. B. Holland; second vice-president, Miss Vic Wise; third vice-president, Miss Cora Harrington; superintendent Junior Department, Miss Nannie Ledyard; secretary, Miss Myrtle McConnell; chairman Missionary Committee, Dr. H. F. Tatum.

Absentees will never know how much they have lost by not attending this most helpful League Conference.

Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

The Royal is made from the most highly refined and wholesome ingredients, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is cheaper at its price than any similar article.

Samples of mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food, and in many cities their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a corrosive poison, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

A NOBLE WOMAN TAKEN FROM US.

We are deeply pained to learned of the death, which occurred at Shreveport La., July 21, 1900 of Mrs. J. F. Foster, corresponding secretary of the Louisiana Conference W. F. M. S. She was one of the most gifted, useful, and consecrated women in the church, and will be missed more than words can express. As Sister Fullilove well says: "Her decease has cast a deep shadow over the whole membership of the Society as well as the church and entire community of Shreveport—her native place." May the Lord graciously bind up the crushed and bleeding hearts of the bereaved ones. A more extended notice will appear next week.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Mrs. G. H. Mathis, of Columbus, Miss., has an article in your issue, of July 19, on "The League—Some Plain Facts." It strikes me that some of Sister Mathis' facts are not facts.

First: One of the main objects in the organization of the League was the education of "our young people in the missionary work of the church." (See Discipline, par. 248.) I am glad the Leagues are engaged in this work.

Second: There is a "Holston Plan," first adopted by the Leagues of the Holston Conference, but I know nothing of a "Holston-Cobb plan." (See Fifty-fourth Annual Report of Board of Missions, page 102.)

Third: I have spent two days trying to find out the amount of that "big debt with which the Board of Missions has again overwhelmed the church, and for which the Epworth League of the church is largely responsible." I have exhausted all the sources of information at my command, and I fail to find it. It is not in the report of the Board of Missions, nor in the report of the treasurer. I would be glad to know the amount that "overwhelms the church and burdens the League." The balance sheet of the treasurer can be found on page 146 of the last annual report of the Board. It is all-important to have the facts in every matter. If the bills payable to the treasurer are good, then the bills payable by the treasurer are more than secure, and a balance of $16,722.94 in cash on hand, or was the first of April last.

Fourth: It is news to me that the Board of Missions pays Mr. Cobb's expenses to the State League Conferences to "monopolize the whole thing, and to dictate plans for the incoming year." If I were a young Leaguer, I would not be monopolized or dictated to by anybody. As I think, the Holston Plan has been wisely, earnestly and judiciously presented to the Leagues, and they have seen the wisdom and need of it, and have voluntarily adopted it.

Surely no large number of Leagues or Leaguers are "so disgusted with a plan adopted by their own State organization as to withdraw from it." If that is a fact, then all such Leagues and Leaguers are in a bad way. There must be some mistake about this.

I write more to elicit facts than to provoke controversy.

GILDEROY.

That Missionary Meeting in Jackson, Aug. 14 and 15.

Not only is every "beloved" presiding elder in the Mississippi Conference, and every member of the Conference Board of Missions, invited to attend that meeting, but also every member of the Conference Sunday-school and Epworth League Boards is most cordially invited to meet with us. Many important matters will be discussed, vitally interesting to every child of God. We do not purpose to "invade" any other department of church work, or to provide for the payment of any "overwhelming debt" of the Mission Board, except what is involved in Matt. xxviii, 18-20, and Rev. xxi, 17. The Board of Missions is not in debt one cent. The individual church members owe much money to the missionary cause, but there is no 'missionary debt," as we commonly use the term.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and dollar sizes are sold by all good druggists.

THE FARMER BOY.

Pulling the weeds from the garden,
Driving the cows home at night,
Dropping the corn in the Spring-time,
Nailing a pale on tight;
Hunting for eggs in the barnyard,
Looking for turkeys astray,
Carrying lunch to the reapers,
Tossing the new-mown hay;
Riding the horses to water,
Feeding the chickens and cows,
Throwing the hay to the mangers,
Down from the fragrant mows;
Whitewashing corn-cribs and fences,
Gathering fruit from the trees,
Covering flower-beds in Autumn,
For fear of an early freeze;
Pumping the clear, cold water,
Chopping an arm-load of wood—
These are the farmboy's gymnastics;
They're cheap, but none the less good.

Michigan Advocate.

"GO ON, SIR, GO ON!"

Arago, the great French astronomer, tells us that he became so discouraged in the study of mathematics that he almost resolved to abandon his effort. He was just about ready to give up when he happened to notice something printed or written under the paper binding of his book. He unfolded the leaf and found it was from D'Alembert. The letter said: "Go on, sir, go on! The difficulties you meet will resolve themselves as you advance. Persevere, and the light will dawn and shine with increasing clearness upon your path." This striking passage made an impression upon the young mathematician's mind which he never forgot. It was a perpetual spur to his ambition, and came to him just in the nick of time. He resolved then and there that he would surmount every difficulty; then he would become a great mathematician himself. He tightened his grip and urged himself on until fame took him up and told the world the story of one of the greatest astronomers of his time.

Hanging on was one of Grant's strong points. He did not know how to let go. He would keep pegging away, no matter what the obstacles, until he triumphed.

The race is to the plodder. I have in mind several very brilliant graduates of last year and years before, who promised a great deal, and of whom friends predicted great things, but somehow they have disappointed all expectations, simply because they lack sticking qualities. They are good scholars, and they imagined because they ranked high in college that they would rank high in life without great effort.

But they lack the hanging-on quality. They do not realize that, in practical life, the race is to the plodder, and not necessarily to the swift. This is why so many brilliant class leaders have become disappointments to their friends. The chain is no stronger than its weakest link, and lack of perseverance is a fatal deficiency which nothing else will supply.

Perhaps the greatest secret of success in life is due to those sticking qualities. Grip conquers the world—the faculty of sticking and hanging on when everybody else lets go. It is the five minutes more which wins the battle—the dogged perseverance, the determination of never giving up until death or victory comes.—Siftings.

WHAT A CHILD'S KISS CAN DO.

In a prison in New Bedford, Mass., there is a man whom we shall call Jim, and who is a prisoner on a life sentence. Up to last Spring he was regarded as a desperate, dangerous man, ready for rebellion at any hour. He planned a general outbreak, and was "given away" by one of his fellow-conspirators. He plotted a general mutiny or rebellion, and was again betrayed. He then kept his own counsel. While never refusing to obey orders, he obeyed them like a man who only needed backing to make him refuse.

One day in June a party of strangers came to the institution. One was an old gentleman, the others ladies, and two of the ladies had small children. The guide took one of the children on his arm and the other walked until the party began climbing the stairs. Jim was working near by, sulky and morose as ever, when the guide said to him: "Won't you help this little girl upstairs?"

The convict hesitated, a scowl on his face, and the little girl held out her hands and said: "If you will, I guess I'll kiss you."

His scowl vanished in an instant, and he lifted the child as tenderly as a father would. Halfway up the stairs she kissed him. At the head of the stairs she said: "Now, you've got to kiss me, too."

He blushed like a woman, looked into her innocent face, and then kissed her cheek, and before he reached the foot of the stairs again the man had tears in his eyes. Ever since that day he has been a changed man, and no one in all the place gives less trouble. Maybe he has a little Katie of his own. No one knows, for he never reveals his inner life; but the change so quickly wrought by the child proves that he may forsake his evil ways.—Selected.

SMASH THE TRAPS.

Gen. Booth tells the following anecdote: "A little girl, whose older brother's lack of compassion for small creatures distressed her, injected this into her bed-time prayer: 'O Lord, don't let the little birds get into Robbie's trap in the garden. Please, don't let them! Oh, I know they won't! They can't! Amen!'

"'Dolly,' said her mother, 'what makes you so certain?'

"'Why, 'cause—'canse I went out in the garden and smashed the trap.'

"We pray for souls threatened by the traps of Satan," said the general, "but that's not enough. We must smash the traps."—Michigan Advocate.

That is a good lesson, and it ought to be well learned and applied by every State and municipal government and every church member. But what can we think when the States and towns are setting the traps for our boys and men?

Atlanta, Georgia, and other towns are setting the death traps, the whisky saloons, in many places, and members of the churches are helping to set them by giving their votes to the unholy work. The lives, souls, welfare, happiness and general success of thousands of our citizens are caught and ruined in these traps, and yet we help to carry them on. We see the evil, but we haven't manhood enough to smash the traps. Poor, feeble manhood!—Wesleyan Advocate.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. On injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

WHY SO MANY FAIL.

President James Rea, of the New York Commercial Teachers' Association, tells, in Success, for July, why many persons fail to obtain and hold good positions:

"Many young men fail to achieve success because they lack the power or inclination to do hard work. The head of one of our large department stores, in addressing a body of teachers, said: 'No man in the practical world of to-day can hope to get on if he shirks his work. I ask you to use all your power and influence to instill in the minds of those you teach the truth that a man owes work to the world, while the world does not owe him anything.' An expert accountant of many years' practice said: 'The best man I ever had in my employ was a plodder.' The writer, in his experience as a teacher, coming into contact with many thousand young men, has rarely, if ever, found a student who did not possess sufficient ability to make a successful start in life if he was thoroughly imbued with the precept—'Keeping everlastingly at it brings success.' Many young men fail to render valuable service through lack of ability to do accurate, systematic work. The business community demands well-trained minds, capable of grasping details and carrying out instructions in a correct and orderly manner. The young man who possesses this faculty is a rarity, and never need be without profitable employment.

"Above all else, the young man who would succeed must be honest and temperate. He must be what he would appear. There is a premium upon those who possess sterling manhood, fixity or purpose, and a determination to overcome obstacles. Life's highest prizes are within their grasp."

THE SALT OF LIFE.

Enthusiasm, like beauty, is a divine gift, and yet it can be cultivated. To the admonition of the wise man then, "With all thy getting, get understanding," I would add this other, With all thy getting, get enthusiasm. It is the salt of life, the transmuting power that renews and enriches everything it touches. It gives new heart and courage to the timid, new hope to the disheartened, and to the already strong and courageous increased power for good.—Orison S. Marden, in Success, for July.

WHY GRANT NEVER SWORE.

While sitting with him at the camp-fire late one night, after everyone else had gone to bed, I said to him:

"General, it seems singular that you have gone through all the tumble of army service and frontier life, and have never been provoked into swearing. I have never heard you utter an oath or use an imprecation."

"Well, somehow or other, I never learned to swear," he replied. "When a boy I seemed to have an aversion to it, and when I became a man I saw the folly of it. I have always noticed, too, that swearing helps to rouse a man's anger; and when a man flies into a passion, his adversary who keeps cool always gets the better of him. In fact, I never could see the use of swearing. I think it is the case with many people who swear excessively that it is a mere habit, and that they do not mean to be profane; but, to say the least, it is a great waste of time."—Michigan Christian Advocate.

WHY JENNY LIND LEFT THE STAGE.

"The Swedish Nightingale, Jenny Lind," says Onward, "won great success as an operatic singer, and money poured into her purse. Yet she left the stage when singing her best and never went back to it. She must have missed the money, the fame and the applause of thousands, but she was content to live in privacy.

"Once an English friend found her sitting on the steps of a bathing machine on the sea sands, with a Lutheran Bible on her knee, looking out into the glory of a sunset.

"They talked and the conversation drew near to the inevitable question. 'Oh, Madame Goldschmidt, how is it that you ever came to abandon the stage at the very height of your success?'

"'When every day,' was the quiet answer, 'it makes me think less of this (laying a finger on the Bible) and nothing at all of that (pointing to the sunset), what else should I do?'"

HE DROPS THAT KIND.

Sam Jones, the evangelist, asks the following pertinent question:

"Do you know that boys are more particular who they go with than girls? You may think it is a strange statement, but it is so. A girl will go on the street in open day with a boy that gets drunk, but the minute a boy finds out that a girl drinks, he drops her. I wish our girls would be as particular with whom they go as the boys are."

THE WATCHWORD OF SUCCESS.

A boy walked into a London merchant's office in search of a situation. After being put through a series of questions by the merchant, he was asked: "Well, my lad, what is your motto?" "Same as yours, sir," he replied. "Same as you have on your door—'Push!'" He was engaged.

There is a neat bit of philosophy in the story of the little girl who, having read a book on such subjects, told her smaller sister, whose birthday came in December, that people born in that month invariably had very bad dispositions. The little one, after a moment's thought, said, gravely, "Jesus was born in December." There is no force so great as the expulsive grace of God.—Central Advocate.

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

PATTERSON—MARY VIRGINIA, eldest child of J. D. and L. Weathersby, "favorite with parents and other children," was born near Hebron, Lawrence county, Miss., Aug. 27, 1876; married to F. E. Patterson, of Rocky Springs, Claiborne county, Aug. 19, 1896; died March 8, 1900.

"A little child shall lead them." A gentleman gave Mr. Jones twenty-five cents to give to see as I wished, expressing great regret at his inability to give more. Told him of the death of his little boy; that he had not been a Christian, but determined to be one. Said he did not know me, but heard me give a talk on missions once. Two years previous I gave a talk (sot for money) in behalf of the W. H. M. S. at the church near his home; so I placed the name of Robert Duncan Patterson on the baby Roll. This beautiful child, with his winsome baby grace so lovingly enshrined in the hearts of parents and all connections of both families, "like the flower dispensing fragrance in the morning and withering at eve, lent sweetness to the home but a little while, was transplanted to the heavenly garden, May 3, 1900.

Not long since the father wrote me from Hebron. The mother, while on a visit to her parents, died, after a short illness, from la grippe and pneumonia, leaving a baby four years old, which bears the mother's name. He never fully recovered from the grief occasioned by Robert's death. She would talk often of now she loved her sorrow, and how happy she would be when called home; seemed to realize that her stay was short. To hear her talk, and her complete trust in Jesus, was sublime. Did not belong to any church, but intended to unite with the Methodist Church as soon as she could attend meetings." Under last illness "expressed willingness to die, only hating to leave her loved ones behind." He did not reach Hebron until she was dead, but his name was her last word. Beautiful she was the most amiable girl he ever knew; loved wife, loving mother, dutiful child.

May the breathings of the Holy Spirit upon the hearts of the bereaved husband, parents—for whom she so often most earnestly prayed—three sisters, brother, and little daughter, lead them to "call upon" the Lord "in the day of trouble," and at last be a reunited family in heaven!

I know our good friend, cultured, noble, will pardon some extracts from a recent letter, full of grand and lovely thoughts: "At times my soul seems bound to earth with its own sorrow; a sorrow that is so deep that at times I feel that life is not worth the battle. Oh, to give up and die! Then, thanks be to God when my heart seems breaking, I hear that blessed promise, 'Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.' Remembering my own nothingness, I would be content to stand in some obscure corner, gazing with enraptured eyes, unnoticed and alone, crying with a glad shout, 'Abba, Father.'" MRS. E. D. JONES.

BROADFOOT—PETER BROADFOOT was born in Chesterfield district, S. C., Sept. 22, 1833, and died April 12, 1900, aged sixty-six years six months and twenty days. He moved with his parents to Mississippi in 1836, and to the community where he has since lived in 1841. He enlisted as a soldier in the Confederate Army in 1861, and afterwards joined the Sixth Mississippi Battalion, which was converted into the Forty-sixth Mississippi Regiment. He made a faithful soldier unto the end of the war. He was married to Miss Sarah A. Grigne, Nov. 15, 1865. This union was blessed with a family of eleven children, two of whom died before their father. The other nine are left, with their mother, to mourn their irreparable loss.

Bro. Broadfoot joined the M. E. Church, South, in the Summer of 1866, during the pastorate of Rev. R. J. Jones at this place. While we may not be able to say that he was a great man, we may say that he was a good man, and was faithful and true in all the relations of life, and especially a faithful follower of Jesus Christ. To the Father, who is able to heal the broken-hearted, we commend the bereaved family. D. C. LANGFORD, Pastor.

Trenton, Miss.

MATTHIS—MARY ELLA, infant daughter of Dr. E. J. and Mary Matthis, of Quitman, Miss., was born Oct. 9, 1898; was baptized by the writer on Sept. 3, 1899, and was taken to heaven on May 15, 1900, after a short illness. She was a lovely child, beautiful in disposition as in feature, intelligent above the average, and, needless to say, the darling of her parents and grandparents. Brief was the visit she made to the Quitman home, but through the grace of Jesus she now dwells, and shall abide forever in the home of her heavenly Father, whence the echo of her sweet voice and the influence of her precious memory shall come back to earth, calling father and mother and brother and sister to join her in the better land. May they always hear that voice, and feel that influence, and realize that the family circle is not broken, but that Mary Ella is only separated from them for a little while, and waits their coming to the ancestral home!

That perfect acquiescence in the will of that God who doeth all things well may fill the hearts of Bro. and Sister Matthis, is the prayer of their pastor. A. T. BELL.

RITCHEY—JAMES NATHANIEL, son of N. A. and M. E. Ritchey, was born Aug. 14, 1896, and died March 11, 1900, aged three years six months and twenty-nine days.

Another precious little jewel has been deposited in the heavenly treasury. Now that the little chair is vacant, and the sweet little voice is hushed, and the innocent little footfalls are no longer heard, as they once were, going to and from the innocent employment of childish play, may father, mother, sisters and friends remember that little Bud is not dead, but peacefully asleep in the tender, loving arms of Him who said, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of once is the kingdom of heaven." Your priceless jewel has been placed beyond the cankering influence of a sinful and troublesome world, and deposited among the riches of that world beyond this veil of tears, where all is joy, peace, and happiness. "Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted" (The Master). J. B. BLACKBURN.

GASTON—MRS. ETNA M. GASTON (nee Moss) was born in Choctaw county, Miss., May 19, 1878; was married to Mr. Wade H. Gaston, of the same county, Jan. 5, 1899, and died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Moss, near Chester, Miss., May 29, 1900.

Sister Etna was a great favorite in the family and among a large circle of friends. Always affable, genile, patient and true, she won all hearts. See joined the M. E. Church, South, when just a little girl, and never violated a clegie one of its rules to the day of her death. Having thus lived a beautiful Christian life, her future is secured. She leaves to mourn her absence a gallant and devoted young husband, parents, brothers, and sisters. This was one of the most devoted married couples I ever knew, and her father's family was, and is, a model of Christian self-sacrifice to family devotion. They have assurance that they will strike hands with her after a season.

W. L. ANDERSON.

WALTON—MRS. SALLIE WALTON (nee Mosley) was born in North Carolina, Dec. 6, 1840, and died May 14, 1900, in great peace with her Lord and Savior. In early childhood she moved to the State of Mississippi, and settled in the western part of Tallahatchie county. She made a profession of religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in the year of 1880, at Ebenezer Church, on what is now the Oreola circuit.

Sister Walton was educated at Grenada College for Young Ladies, and after finishing school she was married to Mr. I. D. Wallace, and as a result of the union, six children were born unto them, three of whom are still living and three have gone on before. May the grace of God that was her comfort in death be the comfort of the bereaved in life!

KENDALL—Resolutions adopted by the second Quarterly Conference of Shiloh circuit, Mississippi Conference, on the death of Rev. Louis KENDALL:

Whereas, It has pleased "Him who doeth all things well" to remove from us our beloved brother and fellow-laborer, Rev. Louis Kendall, who was, for many years prior to his death, a local elder in the M. E. Church, South, living in the bounds of the Shiloh circuit; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Quarterly Conference of Shiloh circuit, Forest district, of the Mississippi Conference, in session at Salem Church, April 30 1900, that in the death of Bro. Kendall we have experienced a great and heartfelt bereavement. In his death the church has lost an able and faithful minister of the gospel, who, both as an itinerant and local preacher, wrought long and successfully for her good. Strong in intellect, pure in character, sincere in purpose, and unwavering in his devotion to right, the community and church have lost a wise leader and trusted counselor, the country a patriotic and public-spirited citizen, and his family a kind and devoted husband and father.

Resolved, That we hereby extend to the bereaved relatives our heartfelt sympathies and prayers. We commend to them the gospel of comfort our brother preached so long, which will sustain them now, and fleshly feed them where "God will wipe away all tears." We rejoice in the priceless heritage which he has left them and us, and pledge ourselves ever to revere his memory and strive to emulate his virtues.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the widow of our deceased brother; also a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication.

(Signed) P. D. HARDIN,
S. D. RHODES.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to August, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

It is said King Humbert carried life insurance policies aggregating $7,000,000.

Telegraphic communication between Shanghai and Chee Foo has been restored.

The Chinese threaten to kill remaining legationers if the allies advance on Peking.

President McKinley sent a message of condolence upon the death of King Humbert.

The Atlanta Convention of the Epworth League was brought to a close last Sunday.

Gov. Candler of Georgia thinks the President should send 100,000 men to China at once.

The Italian Parliament will meet immediately upon the return of King Victor Emanuel III. to Rome.

Col. Wm. J. Bryan says he will make imperialism the keynote of his speech of acceptance at Indianapolis.

The War Department intends to purchase several additional batteries of mountain guns for service in China.

Assurances have been conveyed to the Italian Government that the Vatican will make no attempt to embarrass the Ministry.

The Dutch steamer "Prinz Wilhelm I." was wrecked on the north side of the Island of Inagua. The passengers and crew were saved.

The dronth and hot weather in London has been broken. During the past twenty days all records for the past forty-three years for high temperature were surpassed.

Telegrams from all towns and villages of Italy show that all the country deeply mourns the death of the King. Everywhere flags are half-masted and shops are closed.

It is reported from Shanghai that the Boxers attacked the missionaries and native Christians at Pao Ting Fu on July 9. A foreign physician and 2,000 converts were massacred.

Emilio Silvertri, a young Italian millionaire, has almost compisted the organization of an expedition to the North Pole in search of the Duke de Abruzzi, King Humbert's adventurous nephew.

Messages have been received by both the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and the American Bible Society corroborative of the report that the missionaries at Pao Ting Fu had been massacred.

As a mark of appreciation of the conclusion of the commercial agreement between the United States and Germany, the Emperor has conferred orders upon several diplomats engaged in bringing about the result.

A cablegram says the Chinese General, Li Ho Keih, is now marching on Peking. He has ordered his troops to exterminate all Christians. Already one French priest and from 2,000 to 3,000 natives are reported to have been slaughtered.

An imperial Chinese decree says: "The foreign ministers are happily at present safe and sound, except Ketteler. We are having the foreign legations supplied with provisions and fruits as a token of the interest we feel in them."

Arrangements have been completed for the purchase by the United States from Spain of the Islands of Cibitu and Cagayen, southern islands of the Philippine archipelago, outside the boundary prescribed by the treaty of Paris.

A dispatch from Foriesburg says the capture of the town was preceded by fighting, which was stubbornly contested for two days. Hunter's forces had the hardest work in forcing Relief's Nek, his casualties amounting to about 100.

The latest imperial edict, or which purports to be an edict, says the foreign ministers in Peking are held as hostages pending overtures for the abandonment of hostilities. The edict also commands that no foreigner shall be allowed to escape from the interior.

Robert Charles, the murderer of Capt. Day and Patrolman Lamb, was captured and killed on Friday, but not before he killed three men and wounded six others. New Orleans was again under martial law. A negro schoolhouse was burned at midnight on Friday by rioters.

OFF THE TRACK means great disaster when applied to a fast express train. It is just as bad when it refers to disordered blood or deranged stomach. Hood's Sarsaparilla puts the wheels back on the track by curing the troubles.

Indigestion, nausea, are cured by Hood's Pills.

A messenger sent from Tien Tsin on July 10 returned from Peking on July 24. He reports that imperial troops surrounded the Tartar city. They told the messenger the legationers were safe. Fighting stopped on July 14, and four days later the Imperial edict was issued enjoining the protection of foreigners.

King Humbert of Italy was assassinated at Monza, Italy, on Sunday by a man named Angelo Bressi, who shot the King three times as he entered his carriage. It has been ascertained that Brezzi resided for about a year in Paterson, N. J., and that he went from this country to carry out an anarchistic plot.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Livor, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:

Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Tulane University published in this issue.

The advantages offered by the University for real college work in letters and in science are of a superior character. Under the able direction of President Alderman, assisted by a zealous faculty, with large and well-equipped laboratories and workshops, with new and approved apparatus, fine buildings and ample grounds, the Tulane University of Louisiana is making an honorable record and has prospect of still greater usefulness for the future. In the election of Dr. Alderman to succeed the late Colonel William Preston Johnston, as President of the University, the administrators have made a wise and popular choice. President Alderman brings to his new office a large experience in University work, having been President of the University of North Carolina for a number of years, and is a man of great executive and administrative ability.

A Handsome Educational Structure.

The citizens of Bowling Green are faithfully pushing the work on Cherry Brothers' new college building, and it will be completed by the first of September, 1900 The new building will be a magnificent structure, which will not only be a credit to the citizens of Bowling Green and the schools, but the entire South. The building will stand as a handsome school structure and monument to the work of the schools, the loyalty and faithfulness of the thousands of students who have attended the institutions, as well as the citizens of Bowling Green, who have given their time, money and sympathy to the development of the enterprise The schools will have a daily attendance of one thousand students during the coming year. We congratulate Cherry Brothers upon the great success of their institutions. Anyone desiring information should address H. H. Cherry, General Manager, Bowling Green, Ky.

LETTER FROM CHINA.

DEAR DR LAMBUTH: By the steamship "Coptic," of the twenty-third instant, I acknowledged your telegram, and also gave yon some particulars of the sitnation. There has been a slight improvement dnrlng the week. Shanghal is now pretty well protected, and the Chinese officials are co-operating most oordially, so that all apprehension of tronblo here has nearly abated. At the north, however, there is not mnch, if any, improvement, beyond the fact that the foreign forces are beginning to mako themselves felt. The Takn forts have been captnred (they gnarded the entrance to the Peiho, yon know), and relief forces have reaohed Tien Tsin, and also fonnd and bronght in Admiral Saymonr, with his beleaguered detachment, which failed to reach Peking, and had to retnrn to Tien Tsin, after an absenoe of abont seventeen days. No reliable news as yet from the legations at Peking, and great anxiety is felt for their safety.

The powers are working together with the ntmost nnanimlty and cordiallty, and there is, I think, a pretty general determination that the dupliolty of the Chinese Government must end with the close of this campaign. In other words, the reactionaries are to be snppressed, and the Emperor restored to his throne and power. With that objeot in view, the allied powers are making their way to Peking, and the Chinese of the provinces are in full sympathy with their purpose and movements. It is on this account that there is bnt little fear of war with China. It is an Imperial riot that is being snppressed, an imperial revolt against reform and progress, confined almost exclnsively to Peking and the Empress Dowager and her advisers. These are anti-foreign, and welcomed the Boxers, with their repnted magio powers, in the hope of driving all forelgners ont of the conntry and extinguishing their influence altogether. In other words, this is—may we not hope?—the final drama in the long struggle between the East and West, light and darkness—the old and the new civilizations. Of this, at any rate, I feel assnred; so fnlly assnred that I connt it no prophecy: that when the allies retire, they will leave China restored, and reform and progress fnlly reinstated.

This being the case, I can not too strongly nrge and insist on onr Board and chnrch doing all that has already been projected in their plans for China. This closing year of the century shonld be crowned with snccess in China. Its opening is now assured, and when it comes, there will be an overwhelming demand for onr missionary work—particnlarly books, edncational, religions, and literary, and for schools. Now is the time to set np onr press and to fonnd our projected school in Soochow.

The present reform spirit in the country was prodnced by onr literature, and when this campaign sets it free again, it will tax all onr resources to provide for its demands. You will be glad to know that, notwithstanding all the drawbacks, funds continue to be received from the Chinese from the school in Soochow, abont $19,000 being now reported. With the restoration of peace, and the assurance of reform and progress from Peking, the conntry will once more respond most eagerly and liberally to onr plans, and success wait on onr efforts to give China a better literatnre and more of it, and a better edncation with increased facilities.

Now, let the chnrch respond, not only with the money, but with the proper men—men for the projected press and Pnblishing Honse, and men—experienced, up-to-date men—for the college, or nniversity, in Soochow. We mnst show that we are in earnest, and for once rise to the occasion—the grandest, I believe, in the history of world-wide missions. May the Lord help yon, my dear brother, to meet the demand as it should be met—no more makeshifts, no more playing at missions, no more one-man concerns. Let ns have the trne thing, or retire altogether.

In earnest, Yonrs,

Y. J. ALLEN.

Shanghai, China, June 29, 1900.

P. S.—Referring again to your cablegram advising that onr missionaries in the interior take proper precantions, etc., allow me to say that yon mnst not snppose that we were all canght napping, as were the ministers in Peking, for as early as Feb. 16 I wrote to the Nashville Advocate—via March 22nd issne—calling the attention of our people to the gathering storm. Bnt that was not all. I wrote to my brother-in-law, Mr. F. E. Haskell, late chairman of the American Association here, advising prompt action, which was taken by telegram to President McKinley, and by letter to the Secretary of State; also advising Minister Conger at Peking; and, fnrther, to secnre nnity of action, I got an English friend to likewise move the British (China) Association to commnnicate with the Asiatic Association in London, which was done. Bnt, after all, it only caused the foreign governments to slightly prick np their ears, and the ministers here sent telegrams home announcing that the Tsung-li-ya-men had assnred them of protection, etc., and said that all was safe, etc., which news had barely reached home ere tronble began in earnest, and Peking was isolated, and now, for nearly twenty days, there has been no commnnication with the legations, and we do not know where or how they are. I saw this clond in the middle of February, and as the above true statement shows, made dne efforts to meet it. Others in Shanghai saw it, too—Mr. Drnmmond, for instance—and is on record.

All onr people are safe. All those in the interior have closed their work and withdrawn except Dr. Park and a few others in Soochow, who will retire a little later. There is no alarm, and, perhaps, will not be any now, as the sitnation is better nnderstood by the Chinese officials and the Chinese generally. Y. J. A.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Again the President's retnrn to Washington was preceded by more cheerfnl as well as more definite news from China, although it is not yet either as cheerfnl or as definite as we shonld like it to be. Bnt, at any rate, onr minister and the other foreign ministers at Pekin are alive, and the legations are no longer being attacked. It is fnlly recognized in Washington that there will be no permanent safety in Pekin for any foreigner, whether minister, missionary, or bnsiness man, nntil the city is taken possession of by the allied army. The policy of this government is to insist npon the occnpation of Pekin before condncting any negotiations whatever with the Chinese Government, and prominent officials say that this policy will not be deviated from nnless Minister Conger shall so advise, and give good reasons for the change when he is allowed to freely commnnicate with onr government. It is felt that the powers will be in a better position to deal with the Chinese Government when they are in possession of Pekin.

Visitors from the Pacific slope are talking a great deal abont the rapid increase in Japanese immigration to the United States, bnt they speak more kindly of them than they did of the Chinese a few years ago, before the anti-Chinese law went into effect. One of these visitors—Mr. K. S. Hamilton, of Oregon—said: "It is estimated that last year close to 10,000 Japanese landed in British Columbia, and that fnlly 90 per cent. of them eventnally fonnd their way across the border into the United States. The only bar this conntry imposes against Japanese immigration is the alien contract law, and that is easily avoided. The Japanese Government has sought to check emigration from that conntry by requiring each intending emigrant, before he is permitted to sail, to give assnrety that he will not become a pnblic charge within three years. The wily Japs have evaded that by forming companies, the business of which is to fnrnish the required bond for a small consideration."

The Treasnry Department this week began issning the new 2 per cent. gold bonds, into which the financial act of Congress anthorized the fnnding of all the bonded indebtedness of the United States. The only portrait on the bonds is that of Benjamin Franklin. The symbolical figures are "Law" and "Light." On the back of each bond is the coat-of-arms of the forty-five States of the Union.

At this season, when the regnlar occnpants of Washington pnlpits are taking, or preparing to take, their vacations, the street evangelists are working their hardest. Besides the Salvation Army and an occasional travelling evangelist, Washington has a nnmber of men who have for years devoted their time and talents to this class of religions work. The oldest of these, in years as well as in length of service, is Mr. John Wesley Matchett, whose regnlar meetings, Snndays and week-day evenings, are known as the Fonntain Mission, because of their being held at the fonntain located in the open space at the corner of Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue. Mr. Matchett began his street work thirty-three years ago, nnder the anspices of the Y. M. C. A., and except dnring the few years he was in the West with Gen. Custer trying to pacify Indians, he has kept them np, of late years independently. He is seventy-six years old, bnt reads without glasses. He uses the symbolic method of catching the attention of his audience, having pictnres covering more than 600 feet of canvas, painted by himself, representing scenes and events from the Bible. His father was a Baptist minister, as is his brother, who occasionally assists him in his street work. He says a nnmber of men and women are as regnlar in their attendance at his services as many chnrch members are of their own. Rev. J. M. Little, who has charge of the "Gospel Wagon," operated by the Central Union Mission, is a clerk in the Pension Bnrean, and gives his time evenings and Snndays gratis, because he believes mnch good is accomplished by the work. Although this wagon has a regnlar stand near the mission building, it goes into all qnarters of the city, and always carries a load of volunteer singers and speakers. Rev. Henry Morgan, who was a Baptist minister in England, his native conntry, bnt who has been engaged in street work in this conntry for twenty-five years, dnring which he has held more than 5,500 meetings in 250 cities, also preaches from a wagon. His work is independent and non-sectarian. He is assisted by his wife, who is a member of the famous Hutchinson family of gospel singers, and their four boys, all of whom sing. Music is a special featnre of their services, and that it is more than ordinarily good singing may be seen by the class of persons who stop to hear it. Mr. Morgan was a student nnder the famous English preacher, Rev. C. H. Spnrgeon.

NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This Conference convened in Harriston, Wednesday, July 25, and closed Thnrsday, July 26. The attendance of preachers was the poorest we ever saw or heard of at a Distriot Conference. Pre-engagements, we learn, prevented some from attending, while sickness prevented others. We are not in sympathy with this pre-engagement business. The lay brethren tnrned ont in better force than the clerical, and, perhaps, np to the average attendance.

In the absence of the beloved presiding elder, Rev. W. L. C. Hnnnicntt, D. D., who was providentially detained by critical illness, Rev. W. H. Hnntley, of Fayette, presided over the Conference with ease and ability, to the entire satisfaction of all the brethren. In fact, he measnred np beyond the expectations of everyone, and it was the general verdict that he is a born presiding elder.

Soon after organizing, the Conference sent the following telegram, expressive of their love and sympathy to Presiding Elder Hnnnicntt, who was at the residence of Gen. Gns Balhn, Natchez: "Dear Brother: The sincere sympathy and earnest prayers of the brethren of the Conference are with yon in yonr severe affliction." The critical illness of the presiding elder threw a gloom over the Conference, and made each heart anxious.

Reports were had from every charge except one. These reports show the spiritnal and temporal affairs of the chnrch to be np to the average. While in places there is a decline, in others there is considerable advancement. The preachers seem to be full of the Spirit, and all look to be well fed, except ye secretary, who does not represent his work fairly. Some good revivals were reported, a qnickening of the spiritnal pnlse of the chnrch, and enthnsing new life into the dead sinner. Some building and repairs on parsonages and chnrches were reported.

Special attention and prominence during the session were given to religions services. The preaching was good. Every sermon contained food for the soul. Those who dispensed this spiritnal food from the pnlpit were Revs. R. A. Breland, K. S. Enoche, J. W. McLanrin, and W. H. Hnntley.

Bro. C. N. Gnice, son of Bro. John A. Gnice, of Natchez, who gradnated with honors at Millsaps College the past session, was licensed to preach, and also recommended to the Annnal Conference for admission on trial. Bros. W. S. Higginbotham, of Meadville, and J. B. Blackbnrn, snpplying the Homochitto charge, were recommended for admission on trial also.

The Conference enjoyed its stay in Harriston with those good people who know how and do entertain in the highest degree, and its association with that big, whole-souled, jolly, godly pastor, Rev. A. D. Miller.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Jefferson Street Church, Natchez.

JOHN W. CRISLER, Sec'y.

The 20th Century Movement.

FOUR MONTHS TILL CONFERENCE.

WHAT ABOUT THE THANK-OFFERING?

Reports in hand give the following definite results:

Rev. W. C. Harris, Cleveland, has secnred sixteen dollars, "with probably a few dollars more to be reported."

Rev. Thos. J. O'Neal, Hillsboro, secnred seventeen and 50-100 dollars, and is "still pushing the work, and hoping to be able to report a handsome thank-offering by Conference."

Rev. J. E. Cnnningham, Rosedale, has secured twenty-seven dollars, and hopes "to get more yet."

McAnerny, Rev. T. W. Lewis, P. C., with thirty-eight members, has given sixty dollars.

Rev. H. T. Cnnningham, Vaiden, has secured ninety dollars.

Prairie circuit, Rev. R. A. Tucker, P. C., with one hundred and twenty-three members, snbscribed two hundred eleven dollars, and will not stop short of two dollars per member. This circnit leads. Others could do as well if they would bnt try.

Winona station, Rev. J. C. Park, P. C., has given two hnndred eighty-one and 25-100 dollars. Preparation is now being made to increase this to five hnndred dollars.

Acona Chnrch, on Black Hawk circnit, and Rev. W. C. Lester, pastor, have snbscribed three hnndred twenty-five dollars. Black Hawk and Sweetwater will increase this to five hnndred dollars. Bro. Mitchell, P. E., and Bro. Lester were assisted in the Acona rally by Dr. Murrah and Rev. T. W. Lewis. Bro. Mitchell will hold rallies on other circnits dnring the third qnarter. The amonnt snbscribed in the Winona district approaches thirty-five hnndred dollars. The presiding elder hopes for four thonsand.

Rev. J. H. Shumaker, Kosciusko, observed the week of prayer with a very elaborate program; the collection will be taken later.

Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E., has given constant and painstaking effort to the cause, and if the pastors have wisely followed his intelligent and consecrated leadership, Forest district will be behind none.

Special attention is directed to what follows this letter, taken from the Texas Advocate. Do like conditions prevail anywhere in Mississippi? If so, let each pastor see to it that neglect lie not at his door.

J. R. BINGHAM.

Carrollton, Miss., Aug. 6, 1900.

We hear bnt little of the Twentieth Centnry Movement in some portions of onr various Texas Conferences. We hope this is no evidence of a lack of interest, and yet, when people are deeply in earnest abont a thing, they nsnally talk a good deal concerning it—especially Methodists. One thing we do know, and that is, in some of onr leading appointments there has been no plan to date inaugurated, and bnt little in the way of special effort is being pnt forth by the people. Our wealthy stations ought to take the lead in this movement, and their influence will be felt far and wide; bnt quite a nnmber of these are practically dormant on the subject. It is time that all such charges were bestirring themselves, as onr Conferences will begin to meet in abont another quarter. No pastor ought to be willing to go up to his annnal gathering until he has given all of his people a special opportnnity to make an offering to this cause. It is quite certain that Bishop Candler will stress this feature of the work when he comes to preside at onr Conferences, and it is still more certain that the great church to which we belong is looking to her preachers and people for something worthy of her history in this mighty movement.—Texas Advocate.

W. F. M. S.

MRS. J. F. FOSTER.

The death of Mrs. J. F. Foster, corresponding secretary Louisiana Conference W. F. M. S., which occurred July 21, 1900, has cast a deep shadow over the whole membership of the society as well as the chnrch and entire commnnity of Shreveport—her native place.

About eight years ago Margnerite Crain was graduated at Belmont, and returned to Shreveport, where a wide circle of friends received her with open arms, ready to welcome her into society as one of its choicest favorites, bnt in two weeks after her retnrn she was powerfnlly converted under the ministry of Rev. J. L. Pierce, and forthwith consecrated her life to the Master. In vain the world held out its arms invitingly to a career of social success. This gifted, beautiful girl had seen the King in his beauty, and she chose to follow the meek and lowly Jesus, whose footsteps lead unerringly up the shining way to everlasting life.

Ever heeding the call "to the work," she responded gladly to every duty which opened in her pathway. As Snnday-school teacher, organist of the chnrch, vice-president of the Epworth League, missionary worker, she was faithful and zealous. For several years she was lady manager of the juvenile society, and the seed she planted in the hearts of the children will bear rich fruit in the chnrch at home and abroad. The devotion of the juvenile band was expressed in most unmistakable measnre at the funeral of their beloved lady manager. There is a little Christian maid, Margnerite Crain—her namesake—in far-away China, whose soul will turn heavenward when she hears that her "dear lady" has gone before.

When the duties of Conference corresponding secretary were assigned Mrs. J. F. Foster, she accepted the work with fear and trembling, on account of her youth, bnt her motto had ever been, in answer to every call, "Here am I," and she went forward, relying on Him who never calls amiss. With the wisdom of devotion and the zeal of youth, she threw her whole soul into the work. She was eminently qualified, and for the one short year of her incnmbency she proved herself a most efficient officer.

There was a modest firmness and winsome grace in this lovely woman which was almost irresistible, and won from all respect for the religion which she professed.

On the tenth of February, 1899, Margnerite Crain was married to Jacob Flavel Foster—a most congenial union, for her Christian husband encouraged rather than hindered her good works.

I am sure that every member of her beloved sisterhood will extend deep sympathy to the bereaved family, and especially to the young husband, who sits in dumb silence nnder the mysterious Providence which seems to have ruthlessly shattered his perfect happiness. To us it seems that a beautiful life has been taken from a field of usefulness, bnt we know that God can make no mistakes, and she has only been removed to a higher position of honor somewhere in the kingdom.

Mrs. Foster died as she had lived—in perfect resignation. The veil was lifted to her fading earthly vision, and with radiant countenance she told of the beautiful angels about her bedside waiting to bear her to heaven. "Oh, the beautiful brightness!" she exclaimed again and again. Her last injunction to her husband was to meet her in heaven, and to train their infant son to be a missionary—"the highest calling on earth," she added.

The remarks of her pastor, Dr. W. T. Bolling, at the impressive funeral services were a beautiful tribute to her memory. "Life is not in length, bnt in the work one does. Some live a century, and yet live bnt little, while others live much in a few fleeting years. Our dear young sister was of the latter class. Twenty-four years marks bnt a span, and with many is but the morning in which worldly pleasures are enjoyed; bnt not so with Margnerite Foster. Hers was a different mould and a higher womanhood, with a spiritual capacity which could never be satisfied with the nothings of mere pleasure. Her life was on a high plane, and her broad vision from the mountain-top took in spiritual things which are invisible to eyes of duller sense. She gave her heart to God in the early morning of life, and rounded into a beautiful young womanhood. We will miss her, bnt her influence will remain like the precious aroma of a lovely flower long after it is cut from the stem. To us who can not see why death should come to one so young, the Master says, 'What I do now ye know not, bnt ye shall know.'" MRS. T. P. FULLILOVE.

EACH IN HIS PLACE.

BY CHRISTINA ROSSETTI.

Content to come, content to go,
Content to wrestle or to race,
Content to know or not to know,
Each in his place.

Lord, grant us grace to love thee so
That glad of heart and glad of face
At last we may sit high or low,
Each in his place.

Where pleasures flow as rivers flow,
And loss has left no barren trace,
And all that are, are perfect so,
Each in his place.

TO THE BATON ROUGE DISTRICT.

(Extracts from the address of the Presiding Elder, delivered at the Baton Rouge District Conference at St. Francisville, La., July 5, and published by request of the Conference.)

It is not possible for me to form as accurate and complete a conception of the district and its needs as I should like for your information and for the correction of those errors that may be found to exist in any such organization. It is possible that what I deem in need of correction, or what deficiencies seem to be in need of supply, what wrongs, according to my view, ought to be righted, I may not perceive in all relations. I may look upon single facts, or groups of facts, as isolated because of my lack of full acquaintance with the district. But, bearing in mind my liability to error, I desire your attention as I point out some ills and their remedies. I have diligently used my opportunities for the time that I have been upon the district as presiding elder. I have held 34 Quarterly Conferences, and averaged a sermon a day. The Twentieth Century canvass has been organized, with Bro. I. D. Wall and Rev. H. W. Rickey as committeemen with me. Twelve mass meetings have been held, and about $2,000 has been raised, mainly in subscriptions. I have aided the preachers in taking up missionary collections, and am gratified to report that the amount subscribed on the foreign mission collection to date is $730—an excess over the whole amount contributed last year, and this from but 13 churches of the 61, or more, on the district.

A comparison of the statistical aggregates for 1899 with those of 1894—the year that the Baton Rouge district became a part of the Louisiana Conference—shows that there has been no progress on the district during that period, save in the benevolent collections, and that has been inconsiderable. There was a loss of 35 in membership, 7 Sunday-schools, 153 scholars, and $28 13 collected by Sunday-schools for missions. The contributions for ministerial support fell from $9,113.05 to $8,983 30—a loss of $129.75. The gain in benevolences was $187.15 for missions, and $62.23 on the other benevolences. If we compare the statistics with those of the previous year, however, we shall find within the year 1899 a considerable gain, which was counterbalanced by a previous loss in membership and collections. It may be that the district is on the upward grade, and that the losses have been more apparent than real. I do not undertake to account for the small gain, or the loss where there is a loss. The suggestions for amendment that I shall make, trusting to have your hearty co-operation, must commend themselves to your godly judgment by their fitness and reasonableness, and their compatibility with experience and the teachings of the Bible.

1. Organized Christian effort is needed almost everywhere. I know it avails not to organize when there is no life. But it is not possible that the degree of our organization represents the actual spiritual life in the church. By timely and simple organization we may do a much-needed work of conserving and strengthening the things that remain. The whole Methodist system is fully committed to organization, and there is no question as to principle or method among us. There are many excellent people who do not hold with us in this, but they usually find their sphere of Christian work and fellowship elsewhere. We have an approximately complete organization in theory. On the Baton Rouge district it is but a theory in most cases. Out of 61 organized societies, or churches, there are 37 that have no prayer meeting; there are 22 that have no Sunday-school; 56 have no Woman's Missionary Societies of any sort; 55 have no Epworth League. Bible classes are not to be found in more than two or three places, although it is made the special duty of the preachers (par. 212) "to form Bible classes wherever they can, for the instruction of larger children and youth, and where they can not superintend them personally, to appoint suitable leaders for that purpose."

These Bible classes could be formed by the circuit preacher at the place of residence, at least, and there conducted by himself weekly. They might be formed at other appointments on the circuits, and taught by the preacher when he makes his regular round. In the intervals of his presence a teacher might be found; if not, once a month would be far better than nothing. Especially should catechism classes be formed for the children. The co-operation of parents must be had in order that the children may be sent to the class and made to study their lessons. The indifference that is complained of everywhere as existing on the part of the parents can be overcome to some extent by personal appeal and by specific preaching on the subject.

The appointment of prayer meetings is not difficult, but it seems to be almost impossible to keep them up at most churches. They flourish for a few weeks or months immediately following the annual revival season; then die away. Does this indicate that the work of the revival was superficial, and that the seed fell mostly upon stony ground? Is it because our people have no perseverance? Are they so soon wearied in well-doing? Is it not to be feared that they will never reap if their piety has so little vitality? On the circuits especially there should be a prayer meeting of some sort every Sabbath. It is not to be wondered at that the spiritual life of the people is undeveloped when their worship consists of one service a month. Watchful care over these prayer meetings and frequent exhortation, together with personal interest and instruction as to methods of leading them given by the pastor, will do much towards making attendance the permanent habit of the people. Without this community of prayer and the social worship of the prayer meeting some of the richest promises and largest benefits of prayer are forfeited. On the last round I have been endeavoring to hold love-feasts wherever possible, but have succeeded in comparatively few places. I am sometimes informed that there are no testifying members, none who pray in public, and that a love-feast can not be held. Does this not indicate a need of renewing our means of cultivating the expressive and social side of religion? With the prayer meeting we must try to combine some of the functions of the old class meeting, which has entirely disappeared, and forever, I suppose, so as to cultivate the witnessing power and praying gifts of our converts.

The Sunday-schools are far more numerous than the prayer meetings, but fall short of effectiveness. In some cases they are good, especially at the stations, but in others they are little better than nothing. The children take small part in the singing, the service is conducted in a slovenly manner, the lesson occupies about ten minutes, and gives no real instruction. A general social gathering follows this little performance, and far outweighs it in importance in the estimation of most of the young people. Here, again, the need is of system and organization. Here, again, the burden falls upon the shoulders of the pastors. They have much to do, and important work, but I dare affirm that there can not be anything of greater importance than the religious education of the children. Better let some other things go than cause to stumble one of these little ones. The annual revival brings far less permanent results than would an equal amount of attention to Christian nurture distributed throughout the year. Whole churches without the witnessing power, and void of the spirit of Christian liberality, stagnant and deteriorating, are the obtrusive evidence of need for more educative work at the educable period. If the pastor can not do better, he will do well to take charge of the Sunday-school himself at the monthly circuit appointment.

The Epworth League probably requires more attention to make it profitable than most of our pastors can give it; but there are places where Leagues could be organized to advantage, and where they would be a great means of grace to the youth of the church and a mode of profitable activity. The mistake usually made is in organizing all sorts of material into the League. It is absolutely impracticable to operate the League unless a majority of its members are spiritually alive, and all pledged to active work. It is a means of culture, not of conversion, and presupposes conversion as the basis of its work. Christian culture is needed as a conservator of Christian life, and organization as a director of spiritual power. Wherever the pastor can give it the needed attention a League should be organized on these lines, and carefully trained to become independent of the pastor's help. But that training will take much time and work.

The Woman's Missionary Societies (both Foreign and Home) are much more easily carried on than any of the forms of organization already mentioned. A sermon on the subject, followed by a call for a meeting, the formation of a membership, a little instruction as to how to carry on the monthly meetings interestingly, establishment of correspondence with the officers of the Conference Board, and the matter is accomplished. But the pastor can not then dispense himself from care over the new society. The meetings are but monthly, and could usually be attended by the pastor. The results in intelligent understanding of the subject of missions, excited interest in the spread of the gospel, and the begetting of a spirit of prayer and liberality would make the assessment in full a by-product if we could bring about an earnest and general movement on the part of the women.

2. The cultivation of the spirit and habit of worship is much needed. Throughout the greater part of the country congregations there is an indecorum and flippancy, absolutely inexcusable on the part of congregations that have been so long formed and so long under religious instruction, if it has been indeed instruction. I rarely secure the attendance of more than a third of the congregations while the lessons from Scripture are being read. Groups of men stand talking outside and distracting the attention of those within, throughout the Scripture reading. The sickening fumes of cigarettes float in at the opened windows, and as soon as the benediction has been pronounced from one to a dozen matches snap in the church itself, and the baneful cigarette again begins its annoying and dissipating work. These things ought not to be permitted. They are antagonistic to worship. They displace reverence by flippancy. The Discipline lays down an order of service, including lessons and prayers and hymns. It is the minimum of a simple, dignified, worshipful service, and should be scrupulously observed by the preachers; and the people should be taught to take part therein, especially in repeating the Lord's Prayer and in singing. On occasions when the sacrament is administered the Ritual should be used, and the people taught to participate in those parts designed for all to join in.

The neglect of the Hymn Book and the voiceless congregations call for our serious attention. In many churches they have organs, but not often an organist who can play in such a manner that the people can sing. I have observed repeatedly that whole congregations stand with their mouths shut, not joining in praise at all, simply because no one can sing with the incorrect, capricious organ-playing. If we can not find organists who can play in such a manner as to aid the singing, we had better go back to the old method and do without instrumental help. I find myself in bondage often to the organist, who can play but half a dozen tunes, and none of them fit the hymns that I wish to sing as best helping the effect of the sermon. Often the place of the Hymn Book is usurped by the Young People's Hymnal, and it is impossible to find suitable hymns for the worship. The life of the church is impoverished on its emotional side, and worship loses much of its attractiveness and power. I suspect there are many embarrassing things connected with the organ and choir in some of our congregations, and reformation is difficult. I desire earnestly to urge the matter upon your attention, brethren. Let us turn to the Discipline, and read directions concerning public worship. Notice that the Ritual is to be used invariably in all offices for which it is prescribed. The directions for guarding against formality in singing, if faithfully observed, will go far towards reviving this important part of the service. The requirement that all our congregations use our own Hymn and Tune Book is not fulfilled by the use of the Young People's Hymnal, which is our own only in the sense of being published by our own House.

3. During the course of the reports of the pastors we shall doubtless hear much of the financial deficits, and little of the real hardship that is sometimes implied in the scant figures for ministerial support. Is there not some way of accounting for this other than upon the hypothesis of stinginess on the part of the people? I have no doubt that there is need for much education in the line of Christian liberality, and that there are some of our members who are averse from giving; but I believe that much is attributable to lack of financial system. The disciplinary plan of assessment by consent, and payments during the year, as may be suited in the special case, if put into operation early in the year, will probably give us more use of the resources we actually have. The old way of calling upon people towards the end of the year, and raising the preacher's salary under pressure, should be superseded by some other plan, if for no other reason, because of failure or inefficency in the present.

It becomes necessary for the pastor to call his Board of Stewards together, see to it that regular meetings are held, and aid them in making the division of their work in many cases, if it is to be done at all. It may be no part of his regular work, but it will usually be found a welcome help to his Board, and will result well for the collection of money for ministerial support. As it is impossible for Boards of Stewards on circuits to meet often, and even at Quarterly Conferences it frequently happens that no one is at hand to represent the more remote societies, it would be well for the stewards of each society to form a sub-board or committee, and have a monthly meeting at least. Records should be kept, the disciplinary provision for keeping account of all moneys should be complied with; and if no representative is present from a society, a report should be sent in to the Quarterly Conference.

The total amount of contributions for ministerial support by our 5,859 members on the district last year was $8,983.30, making an average when divided among the membership of $1.53 contributed for support of the ministry. But here, as usual, averages are misleading, for, in point of fact, it is the few who contribute in sums much larger, and the many give nothing at all. I am told of some who refuse to assume any proportion of the expense of maintaining the gospel. These should be patiently labored with, and made, if possible, to see their error, and then, if they are still indifferent or disobedient to this duty, they should be dealt with. They are violating as clear a commandment of the New Testament as that to be sober or chaste. I trust I shall be able to render aid to the Boards of Stewards this year, and regret that my lack of acquaintance with the methods in vogue, and their failure to secure results at the beginning of the year, put it out of my power to get an early start in aiding you to institute better financial systems.

4. The condition of houses of worship should engage our care somewhat more closely. The church should be as neat and as beautiful as the people can afford to make it within limits of good taste and appropriateness to divine worship. I am glad that we have come to this beautiful church for our District Conference, and trust we shall go away with a fresh appreciation of the value of beauty and cleanliness in the house of God. A sermon, as a sermon, would be just as powerful in a barn as in a temple, provided the people were unable to have anything but a barn; and worship would be equally acceptable, whether in this mountain or in Jerusalem, conditioned, as it is, entirely by the sincere faith of the seeker. But the spirit ever strives to find an appropriate outward expression or concrete manifestation of its inner states. We may as well ridicule the posture of kneeling in prayer as to say that the state of the house of worship has nothing to do with the character of our worship. The reverence for the house of God, and the consequent preparation for hearing the worship therein, that come from care for the place, are worth seeking.

5. I have been impressed by the loss that we suffer in the benevolent collections by reason of the omnibus system. The collections are pooled, and the preacher in charge takes up one collection in every congregation, or goes around privately and secures contributions for all these causes at once. The result is a lack of intelligence in giving. I have taken up missionary collections in twelve churches recently, and in several I have been informed that the people were under the impression that what they had subscribed was for all the benevolences. At first I was in despair of the English language as a vehicle of conveying my meaning, as I had preached and harangued an hour or more on the one subject of foreign missions, expressly stating that the collections, usually very full ones, were for that cause; but I afterwards concluded that it was the force of habit governing those who were accustomed to the missionary sermon as an introduction to an appeal for all the benevolences. In the better-organized and instructed churches this will do, but it works badly with most of our circuit congregations. I know that a large part of the time the preacher has before his congregation would be taken up by preaching upon several benevolent subjects each year; but I think it would be more useful in producing an intelligent church life and broad view of the work of the kingdom of God, and the financial results would be far better. It may be objected that the people would be repelled by too frequent collections. That may be true, but the loss would be slight, and the gain to those who were not repelled great.

However, no hard and fast rule can be laid down. Only let each one determine in advance that he will raise the whole amount of the apportionment, and let him form plans to that end. We can not do anything without plan and method. First, it is needful for the people that they give the money; second, it is needful that the church have the money for its work; third, it is our duty to raise the money. This is one of the things we are appointed to do; one of the most irksome, it may be, but none the less our duty. I say this not because I believe any one of the preachers on the district is careless or indifferent upon the subject, but in order that we may re-emphasize, and restore to its position of proper importance, a work that, in our evangelistic zeal, we may be in danger of allowing to go by default.

6. I have, by circular letters, direct correspondence, and through the ADVOCATE, called your attention to the great Thank-offering, and will, at this time, express my sincere thanks for your constant, hearty, and efficient co-operation in every plan and effort looking towards the raising of the amount expected of our district. I have been especially aided by Bro. Rickey and Col. Wall in canvassing the district. Dr. Cooper, Prof. Crisler and Dr. LaPrade have also willingly and efficiently given aid. Though the amount already subscribed is less than half our proportion, less than half the work has been canvassed. I appreciate the magnitude of the task that devolves upon you brethren, and realize how greatly it will increase your already large and burdensome labors to complete this canvass by making an individual appeal to every member of our church on the district. You can not do it alone, I fear. Public meetings can reach only a portion of the people. In order to do the work we must organize for it, and having made our plans and effected our organizations in each congregation, we must watch closely and see to the carrying out of these. The politicians have got from the Bible a method by which the great presidential campaign is now being carried on. They organize with their captains of thousands (ward bosses) and of tens (heelers) and their great leaders, all the way from the chairman of the National Committee to the State and Parish Executive Committees. Into the hands of every doubtful man will be placed literature adapted to his position by the workers of both parties. Manifold millions of pages of literature will be circulated, running up the postage bills into the hundred thousand. Public meetings will be held; the minds of men will be filled with the subject, and allowed to go on working out the results in action. It is not sufficient with these men that the matter be brought to the attention of everybody. Within six weeks of the election a complete political census will have been taken, and it will be known exactly how every voter stands, whether Democratic, Republican, or doubtful. These men work for success. So must we, in our smaller territory, but larger cause, organize, and work, for the success of this Thank-offering. Let committees be appointed in every congregation; let the preacher in charge meet these committees frequently. Let them together lay out the work, and make a canvass. Provide literature to be used wherever it can be used. Let the pastoral letter of the Bishops be read at every appointment, and let the preacher keep the subject of the Thank-offering before the people constantly. Do not allow any service to pass without mentioning it. Bishop Galloway's pamphlet on the Twentieth Century Movement in Methodism can be had at five cents per copy, and should be widely distributed. A sermon should be preached to every congregation, and public collection taken. Let us set before us as a goal the securing of a contribution from every member. The time for payment of the offerings may be deferred, but we should be as vigorous and rapid in finishing the canvass as possible. Whether the date set is practicable in every congregation or not, let a week of prayer be observed, and a Thank-offering Day be appointed.

I should be glad to see a large part of the Thank-offering directed to the Soochow University and correlated school system of our China Mission. The open door lays before us a constantly enlarging prospect for the spread of the kingdom of God in that hoary empire. The man who can contemplate, unmoved, the events of the last few years in Asiatic history, and the present crisis of China, is indeed obtuse; the signs of the times are written in vain for him. We should be stirred and thrilled by the magnitude of the prospect that opens before our church. While in the northern part of China disturbances are making missionary work difficult and dangerous, in our mission fields there seems to be no prospect of disturbance, and the opportunities increase. It would be well to circulate Dr. Lambuth's pamphlet, "China the Open Door," and give those who wish the opportunity of subscribing to the China educational work. I have forms of subscription specially prepared for this, and will be glad for brethren to take them for use.

7. The subject of camp meetings and revivals will be discussed in the course of our Conference. As the meetings have not yet been held, the results lie within the sphere of faith only. I trust the greater part of the district will be represented, and that as many as possible of the preachers will be present at the camp meetings. Your plans are made in the main for revival work in the churches, and I have no doubt we shall have an ingathering of souls. This is your reward, and the part of the work that comes with greatest satisfaction to the spiritual life of the preacher. It is for this that we are laboring and enduring, and without this we should feel that we had failed. "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bearing his sheaves with him."

I have a word of personal gratitude for the uniform kindness and hospitality of the brethren and the preachers who have aided me in the prosecution of my work, and from whom I receive many personal favors and sincere tokens of brotherly love. That which is, in the nature of the case, less obvious, is, I am sure, not less real and efficient—your prayers and the strength that comes through them.

In a recent interview Thomas A. Edison said: "Chemistry undoubtedly proves the existence of a Supreme Intelligence. No one can study that science, and see the wonderful way in which certain elements combine with the nicety of the most delicate machine ever devised, and not come to the inevitable conclusion that there is a big Engineer who is running this universe."

God can make the grief a grace, the burden a blessing, and light up the disappointment so that it becomes the torch of hope. The rod itself shall bud and blossom and bring forth almonds, so that the very thing that chastens us shall present beauty and fruit.—Anon.

Need of a Monument in Memory of Rev. Robt. Parvin.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me space in the ADVOCATE to say to the many friends of Rev. Robert Parvin (deceased), that while on a visit to Gibsland to look after the graves of my dead, in company with Bro. B. F. Parnell, I came to where our beloved Parvin lay. There was nothing to mark the spot, save a few bricks that lay around the grave, and they were almost entirely hidden. Had it not have been for Bro. Parnell's knowledge of the place, I would never have known who lay sleeping there waiting for the resurrection, for the grass had almost covered the brick from view. I determined at once to mention the matter to our District Conference. The result was the appointing of the committee named in Bro. Crews' note to the ADVOCATE

I wish to say in behalf of that committee, that any amount contributed for this cause will be greatly appreciated, and our appeal for aid to erect a fitting monument to the memory of Bro. Parvin is to all alike. Surely the name of Bro. Parvin has not faded from the memory of Louisiana Methodists, especially the members of the Louisiana Conference.

Come, friends: let us show our appreciation of this servant of God.

LOCAL PREACHERS.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me a small space in the dear old ADVOCATE, as I have never written anything, though I have been a reader several years. I would like to say a few words in reply to "Gilderoy's" letter in regard to local preachers, exhorters, and the great work that is neglected on account of the scarcity of same. We have some local preachers within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference (though laboring men) that are not so full-handed but what they would be ever ready to go where they are most needed. Some of us are so situated that we can't go 25, 50, or 100 miles, to assist in protracted meetings, but would be glad to be where we could aid in saving souls for Christ. Some of our pastors take prayer meetings, missionary meetings, and everything else in hand, and give the local preacher no chance; so we really have no chance at home. Why is this? Is it because we are local preachers? Is it because we do not go forward in the Master's cause? Are we not a part of the work? Why do not the pastors see the local preachers, and employ them to assist in some measure in ministerial work?

Yours in Christ,
H. E. CARTER, L. P.,
Seashore District.

DIED.

On Saturday morning, the fourteenth instant, at 2 o'clock, the precious baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Dance was taken from earth to live with God and the angels in a brighter world. A place in a home is vacant that no one else can fill; a jewel has been taken, the value of which is incalculable.

While Bro. and Sister Dance are heart-broken, yet they realize, as did Job, that "the Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

Life is not the mere living. It is worship—it is the surrender of the soul to God, and the power to see the face of God; and it is service—it is to feel that when we die, whether praised or blamed, whether appreciated or misinterpreted, whether honored or ignored, whether wealthy or destitute, we have done something to make the world better and happier.—F. It is because our prayers are too narrow, because we only want to fill the cup up within an inch of the top, that we are poor; when we are willing that the cup shall run over, there comes a springing out from heaven, a pouring down from above of that which fills the cup from the great wealth and mercy of our God.—Alexander McKenzie, D. BROOKSVILLE, MISS.

We have just closed a meeting of wonderful interest at X Prairie, on this charge. People say it was the best meeting held there for many years. Sinners were brought under conviction, and the church was powerfully stirred. The good done will, no doubt, abide. When strong men weep under the preaching of the gospel, and from their places declare that they are going to lead better lives, then go away fully determined to keep the promises made—that is a good meeting. My brother, T. W. Lewis, did the preaching after Monday morning. His plain presentation of the truth took hold of the people, and, I feel sure, great good was done.

Our quarterly meeting services embraced Saturday and Sunday, and Dr. Sullivan was in good trim. The outlook for Brooksville circuit was never brighter. E. S. LEWIS

REVIVAL AT COLUMBIA, MISS.

We have had a gracious revival here at Columbia. Our meeting began Thursday night before the third Sunday, with song and prayer service. Bro. J. T. Norsworthy led the choir and conducted these prayer services. Bro. W. M. McIntosh came Saturday night, and gave us his faithful services until the fourth Sunday night. These two men of God did good work for the Master. Everything was harmonious from start to finish. We had a fine choir of three violins, two cornets, and organ, and many voices. Misses Daisy, Ruby and Pearl McGee, of Tylertown, rendered very efficient help in the choir, and also in the altar work. We think there were about one hundred conversions and reclamations. Thirty-three joined our church and seven the Baptist, with more to follow. There were many in the churches here who had never been converted. The work done in the church was most helpful. All of us have been brought closer together.

Yesterday (the fifth Sunday) was a great day with us. We received twenty-five into the church at that service on profession of faith. We have five more applicants. We feel confident that this is the work of the Spirit through us, and that it will abide. Great stress was laid on the necessity of true conviction and experimental salvation. Most of the new members know that they have passed from death unto life. We endeavored to keep all the penitents seeking until they got the assurance, before they joined the church.

We have as good a church here, of as fine people, I think, as there are in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. The outlook for this church, as well as for the town, is very flattering. We have received fifty-eight into the church here this year; most of them on profession of faith. We have quite a number of splendid young people. We have great confidence in our young people, because they are willing to work. We count it a great privilege to be a co-laborer with this people in the vineyard of our Lord. To God be all the praise.

LETTER FROM REV. IRVIN MILLER.

I have just returned from helping Bro. L. J. Jones in a protracted meeting on Decatur circuit. The protracted meeting at Union was postponed until the second Sunday in September, on account of the farmers being so behind with their work; but services were held Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night. The congregation was very large Sunday and Sunday night, and indications pointed to a good revival if circumstances had justified the continuance of the meeting, but I think it was wisely postponed.

From there I went with Bro. Jones to Decatur, where the parsonage is located: found one of his little boys seriously sick, and helped to nurse him several days. He was convalescent when we left.

Friday evening we went down to Conehatta, and commenced the meeting there Friday night. We had a gracious revival; four accessions to the church, and Christian people wonderfully revived and built up. The glad shouts of rejoicing among God's children were heard at several services. Sickness and death in the community prevented the congregations from being as large as they would have been otherwise, but, in the main, they were good, especially at night. Father James Murdock McDonald ("Uncle Murdock"), a local elder, was with us, and, I think, preached better than I ever heard him. His presence was a benediction to us all. The meeting continued until Thursday. The closing services were to be held Thursday night, but a heavy rain set in about sundown, and no service could be held. We expected several more accessions that night.

Bro. Jones is well received, and is doing a good work on this circuit. He is living in a well-furnished parsonage. His people seem to love him very much, and are very kind to him and his family. His Conference collections are well up, decidedly above the average, and he is making strong efforts to bring them up in full.

There have been several deaths among my special friends at Conehatta during the past few months, viz.: Bro. Zeb. Dennis, Sister Eugene Keily, and Bro. Willie Horton.

A great deal of rain has fallen, and crops are badly damaged in Newton county. IRVIN MILLER.

The Abita Springs Hotel, which was destroyed by fire a short time since, is now being rebuilt, larger and better than before. The main building is to be heated by steam, and made thoroughly comfortable for Winter as well as Summer visitors, and hereafter will be kept open all the year round. Baths and sanitary plumbing, modern and of the very best, will be among the attractive features.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical

Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Beef Steak in a Bottle.

That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

A Serious Decision.

"Why CHILLIFUGE Won't Cure Chills"—is a question that brings to mind the story of a society of learned men formed for debating problems.

The question was presented: "Why a fish weighing ten pounds, put into a vessel of known weight, filled with water, did not increase the weight?" After hours of hot debate the fool of the club announced that it did, for while the debate had been going on he had tried the experiment.

OPEN-AIR PREACHING.

In the early days of Methodism open-air preaching was one of the most common and effective methods employed by her ministers in reaching the masses, and was, for a considerable time, looked upon as peculiarly Methodistic. Had it not been for the wise and frequent utilization of this means of gaining the ear of the common people, the neglected and the outcast classes, Methodism would never have become what it has been admitted to be, namely: the mightiest revival force of modern times.

We regret to say that, notwithstanding its advantageousness and wonderful efficacy, open-air preaching seems to have fallen into considerable disrepute among Methodists, and it looks as if we had about abandoned this method of evangelization to the Salvation Army and to "come-outers." Such neglect of an apostolic method of saving men is both foolish and hurtful. If Christ's ministry had been limited to the synagogues, how vastly lessened would have been his influence and work. Most of his wonderful discourses and parables were delivered to great throngs in the open air, by the sea-side, on the mountain-slopes, or on the streets. We can not improve either upon Christ's methods, or upon his example. Never was there a worker who "sowed beside all waters" more faithfully than did he. We are told that after the Lord's ascension the disciples went everywhere preaching the Word, which signifies not only that they proclaimed the gospel in every village and city whither they went, but that, wherever men would listen to the gospel story, whether at home, or in the synagogue, or in the market-place, they gladly declared it unto them. The Apostle Paul often resorted to open-air preaching to gain hearers for the gospel. One of his greatest sermons was delivered on Mars Hill, at Athens. It was the field-preaching of the Wesleys and Whitfield that awakened England in the eighteenth century out of icy formalism and spiritual death, and that set the British isles on fire with revival power. It was the field-preaching of Asbury and Jesse Lee, and the other noble pioneers of Methodism in America, that leavened the majority of the colonies with the gospel, and prepared the way for future denominational growth.

While in most country places now-a-days there is not as much need of open-air preaching as formerly, the need of such work in our cities, especially in the larger ones, is most imperative. In fact, unless the churches are going to rest content with reaching a small fraction of the population, street preaching and social settlement work are an absolute necessity. It was once the boast of Methodism that she carried the gospel to the common people and to the lower classes. In the great modern centers of population we are, sad to say, falling far short in this respect, and are confining our work too much to the respectable and the church-inclined. Some of our people are getting tainted with the high-church notion that a sinner can not be saved except in a house of worship in a regular way. People who can not be gotten to attend church are too often looked upon as either not worth saving, or as unsavable.

We are firmly convinced that Methodism is not achieving large success in the cities, partly on account of neglect of open-air evangelism. John Wesley used to say that nothing would save Methodism but what he termed "field-preaching." There are vast multitudes in the cities and towns, and not a few in some country places, who never darken a church door, and never hear the gospel at all, unless it is preached in the open air. It is astonishing with what ease a congregation can be collected at any time almost on the streets or in the fields. The street preacher often talks to from five to ten times as many men as he would have to hear him in a hall or a church.

If Methodism is to be true to her mission, if she is to make more rapid advance in the future than at present, if she is not willing for some other denomination to take her crown, then there must be a return to open-air work. If our cities are to be saved from becoming veritable Sodoms, there must be more aggressive effort towards evangelizing the non-church-going masses and the "submerged tenth." If our church is now too respectable to engage in such work, then it is too respectable to live. The preacher who thinks it beneath his dignity to preach to a motley throng on the streets, or in some obscure mission hall, evidently lacks the Christ spirit.

Open-air evangelism is trying in more senses than one, it is true; but if we are brave soldiers, and not cowards, we will not shrink from it on that account. While abandonment of regular church services is, of course, not to be thought of, ordinary methods need to be combined with extraordinary, if we are to be true to the voice of God.

It is high time for us to stop relegating this work to the ignorant and indiscreet, and to those who are not of us. A year ago the English Wesleyan Conference appointed a special committee to consider the question of open-air preaching. Said the Methodist Times, of London, recently in a strong editorial on this subject: "There ought not to be a single chapel in the kingdom which is not associated with some open-air service. The greatest practical mistake ever made in connection with Wesleyan Methodism was the abandonment of open-air preaching in many parts of the country, or, what is almost equally bad, the abandonment of it to those least capable of doing it effectively. . . We hold that open-air work has fallen into disrepute in this country, not only because the actual preaching has been unduly left to indiscreet and ill-equipped persons, but because a false ideal of open-air services has become prevalent. This has been largely due to the Salvation Army. Its great success a few years ago led many of our mission workers to imitate it; and open-air services are too often of a scrappy and fidgety character. One person after another pops up to say: 'Glory to God, I'm saved.' Now, endless repetition of testimonies of that kind does very little good. What we want is something quite different, namely: an open-air service conducted with as much care, reverence, and intelligent preparation as if it were under cover. . . . There ought to be a genuine sermon or exposition of the Word of God, together with an earnest appeal for immediate decision. Wesley and all the early Methodists practiced preaching in the open air. They did not merely utter pious platitudes, give short testimonies, and emit goody-goody talk."

POISONED BY ANARCHISTIC LITERATURE.

It now turns out that the negro desperado, Charles, who occasioned the outbreak of mobism in this city a short time ago, and who came to such a bad end, was the agent for a Liberian emigration society which has its headquarters in Birmingham, Ala., and spent most of his time in distributing the incendiary literature sent out by that swindling concern, and in obtaining subscriptions, usually paid in monthly installments, from negroes who could be induced to enlist as members. The society proposed to send negroes to Liberia in "colonies" of 1,500, at the rate of $41 per head. Not more than six or seven hundred negroes, however, were ever sent out. Most of those who joined, after paying the membership fee of one dollar, and two or three monthly installments, left their dues unpaid, and so forfeited their membership and all that they had paid in. These lapses inured greatly to the advantage of the promoters of the scheme, whose sole aim was to make money off the negroes by deluding them. A number of those who went to Liberia returned as soon as they were able to get back, and at once made it known that they had been grossly deceived. The experiences related by those who were fortunate enough to get back to this country were of the most harrowing description.

In order to induce negroes in large numbers to enter into the scheme, the emigration society mentioned has for some time been sending out pamphlets teeming with outrageous stories of race oppression, taunting the negro with his social inferiority, and picturing Liberia as a veritable paradise. These pamphlets also contained dark hints that the time was at hand when the negro must either defend himself, or be exterminated. The negro, Charles, pored over this inflammatory literature, and, it is said, was able to spout page after page of it. Is it any wonder, then, that, feeding upon such dangerous stuff, he developed into a murderous fanatic?

Says the Times-Democrat, of recent date, in commenting upon this matter:

"From this point of view, the case concerns the South and the nation no less nearly than it touches New Orleans; for it is clear that this gospel of hatred and murder has been preached throughout the length and breadth of the land. Such a train must be ever ready for the spark. The promoters of these nefarious schemes should instantly feel the iron clutch of the law. In this matter, of all others, an ounce of prevention will be worth a pound of cure."

We are glad to note that nearly every colored clergyman in the city has recently warned his flock against the Liberian scheme. Steps are being taken by the mayor to prevent the further circulation of all such anarchistic literature in this city.

A CORRECTION.

In writing up the recent riot, which took place in this city, the editor of the Nashville Advocate last week unwittingly made one or two misstatements which we feel in duty bound to correct. In the first place, he alleges that during the outbreak of mobism an orphan asylum was destroyed. The assistant editor was in the city during the whole time, and if any such institution was destroyed, he has not heard of it. Again it is charged that "the finest negro school in the city, built with the money of a negro, who had divided his fortune between the whites and the blacks, was laid in ruins." The school-building referred to, though one of the handsomest in the city, was not built with money left by the negro philanthropist, Lafon, but was erected by the city of New Orleans under and by the direction of a white Democratic council, and was named after Lafon on account of the high esteem in which he was held.

A NEW BOOK.

A SLAVEHOLDER'S DAUGHTER. By Belle Kearney. 12 mo. 209 pages. Cloth. The Abbey Press, publishers, 114 Fifth avenue, New York.

In this volume, fresh from the press, Miss Belle Kearney, the gifted temperance lecturer, whose fame has extended all over the Union, and who ranks among the noblest and most influential women the South has produced, has given to the public the story of her life, which has been one of varied experience, heroic toil and struggle, and splendid achievement. Several of the personal incidents narrated are touching indeed. It is, without doubt, one of the most charming and edifying biographies we have come across in many a day, and, barring the woman's suffrage views advocated therein, is worthy of the highest commendation. We predict for it an immense sale.

Miss Kearney is now the national organizer of the W. C. T. U. The large success which has attended her efforts strikingly attests her remarkable aptitude for the noble work in which she is engaged, as well as the strength of her character. Brilliant, cultured, and earnest-souled, she evidences great skill and verve both as a writer and as a speaker.

In addition to narrating recollections of her childhood, the events of her young womanhood, and the history of her work as a temperance lecturer, Miss Kearney, in this volume, treats interestingly and forcefully of the Old South, of the dark days of reconstruction, the negro problem, and the evolution of Southern womanhood. Several chapters are devoted to accounts of trips to Utah, Alaska, and to Europe. The book is adorned by a number of excellent full-page illustrations, a splendid portrait of Miss Kearney being given as a frontispiece. The printing and binding are elegant.

In a brief biographical note the publishers thus fittingly speak of Miss Kearney: "The writer of this book belongs to an old, conservative, Southern family. She was born on a plantation near Vernon, Miss., and was educated in her native State. A few years were spent in the gay society of the times, but the changed social and economic conditions that followed the Civil War led her to a nobler, more useful life. When quite young she became a teacher, and for six years ranked among the successful educators. In 1889 she was called to enter the lecture field, and has since risen to be one of the most logical, brilliant and popular speakers upon the American platform. Her public life has made her an extensive traveler; carrying her into Canada, Europe, and throughout the United States from Alaska to the Gulf of Mexico. In the years of varied experiences that have come to Miss Kearney, she has made a deep study of humanity, and the problems of life; this has caused her to be looked upon as one of the leaders of thought in the nation."

The contents of the August number of The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine are of varied interest. In Back to Ireland, Samuel Henry Pye corrects some of the traditional impressions regarding that country. Tennyson and Immortality, by William H. Moseley, is an excellent exposition of the trend of the great poet's work. The writer draws a comparison between Tennyson and Darwin. Rosa B. Lee's description of A Trip Up Mount Lowe is a model of breezy, vivid narrative. An appreciative sketch is given of Bishop John Philip Newman, one of the prominent figures of modern Methodism. T. Morcom Taylor has earned the gratitude of many readers in giving to the public a proper view of Dora Greenwell and Her Prose Writings. Dr. S. J. Niccolls makes Form in Worship the subject of an interesting and impartial discussion. The uses and abuses of religious forms, since the beginning of the Christian era, are analyzed. The eighteenth chapter of The Illustrated History of Methodism is A Literary and General Survey. The death of John Wesley, an impressive account of which is given in this chapter, suggests a review of the great religious movement which he had inaugurated and had so masterfully guided. The chapter deals, to a considerable extent, with contemporary literature, and the influence of Methodism upon it and upon the drama of the period. Published monthly by the Methodist Magazine Publishing Co., 223 North Second street, St. Louis, Mo. $1.50 a year.

A BEAUTIFUL MEMORIAL.

Mr. Dan A. James, of Yazoo City, will present to Millsaps College a fine telescope. It will be procured as soon as practicable, and will commemorate his love for his honored father, Mr. Peter James, who, at the time of his death, was a member of our Board of Trustees, and his affection for his brother, Mr. Sam James, who recently died in the city of Atlanta. This will be a singularly beautiful and appropriate memorial.

And in gratefully acknowledging this timely and valuable gift, I can not refrain from expressing the earnest hope that, as the instrument will always point upward, it will symbolize the aspirations of our young friend as he faces the great responsibilities now confronting him.

GRATIFYING REPORT FROM REV. C. P. SMITH.

Some time since this writer was appointed to lead the Twentieth Century Movement in the charges of Minden, Lanesville, Valley, and Gibsland, Prof. G. L. Wren being the lay member of the committee.

While we have not made a complete canvass of this field, we have placed the movement before the people of Minden station, and two churches in Lanesville charge, and two churches in Gibsland charge. We expect to visit the other churches of our division within the next two months. We submit herewith a report of subscriptions secured up to date from these charges:

MINDEN STATION.

Direct subscriptions	$122 50
Woman's Foreign Missionary Society	34 50
Total subscription by Minden station	$157 00

LANESVILLE CIRCUIT.

Pine Grove Church	$ 55 00
Lanesville Church	15 00
Total subscription to date by Lanesville	$ 70 00

GIBSLAND CIRCUIT.

Gibsland	$ 38 75
Athens	15 90
Total to date from Gibsland charge	$ 54 65
Total subscriptions to date from these four charges	$281 05

Valley circuit has not been visited at all as yet, and there are four churches within its bounds; three churches on Lanesville yet to visit, and two points on Gibsland charge—in all nine churches. We hope to secure in all from these appointments an amount sufficient to swell the fund to $500. Minden will average more than one dollar per member.

TO THE PREACHERS AND MEMBERS IN DURANT DISTRICT.

Dear Brethren and Friends:

At the recent session of our District Conference, at Kosciusko, the names of your humble scribe and Rev. J. H. Shumaker were added to the Board of Directors of the "Ministerial Educational Aid Society"; and the secretary of the District Conference was made Executive Committee in the absence of the action of the Board to collect and loan the funds of the society.

I, therefore, submit the following annual assessment, made by District Conference, and request that it be sent to me or Rev. T. W. Dye before Sept. 1, that we may be able to carry forward the work of the society in assisting young preachers in the district to go to Millsaps.

The assessment is as follows:

Durant, $6.50; Belzona, $5; Kosciusko, $6.50; Lexington and Tchula, $6; Kosciusko circuit, $5; Pickens, $6; Sallis, $5.25; Ebenezer, $5; Ackerman, $5.50; Louisville, $6; Ethel, $4; Eupora and Maben, $6; Rural Hill, $3; Cumberland mission, $2.50; Chester, $5; Poplar Creek, $4 50.

Please don't delay in sending in above amounts, as the time for arranging for the Fall term at college is here. Very respectfully,

W. L. ANDERSON,
Sec. Dist. Conf.

Chester, Miss., July 20, 1900.

NOTES FROM BRO. BACHMAN.

Grenada District Conference was held at Oakland, 26-28, ultimo. Presiding Elder Porter and Pastor Pittman absent on account of personal sickness. The attendance of both preachers and laymen very small. G. D. Shands, J. G. McGowan, R. W. Jones and James Moore were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh is conducting a meeting in Oakland this week.

Rev. Joseph Johnson, one of our fathers in the Conference, died at his home in Mt. Pleasant, July 26.

REVIVAL AT ADAMS CHURCH.

We have just closed a very fine meeting at Adams Church, on Adams circuit. The meeting resulted in a goodly number of conversions, and a revival of the entire membership of the church. All differences seem to have been harmonized, and brotherly love prevails. For these results we are profoundly thankful.

I was assisted in the meeting by Bros. I. L. Peebles and H. D. Howell. That these brethren rendered faithful and efficient service goes without saying to all who know them.

Adams circuit is in good, healthful condition, and will resume her wonted place in our report to Conference in December. W. G. FORSYTH.

President I. W. Cooper writes that the prospects for old Centenary were never brighter. Since commencement he has traveled over 3000 miles on train, and nearly 400 in buggy. The large chapel at Centenary is being ceiled, a large hall for the Preparatory Department is being fitted up, and everything is being overhauled.

We note with pleasure that Rev. J. B. Mitchell, of the North Mississippi Conference, a recent graduate of Millsaps College, won the gold medal week before last in the Southern oratorical contest, which took place at Monteagle. Bro. Mitchell was also the fortunate winner of the first prize in the oratorical contest during the Millsaps commencement.

We learn with deep regret of the death, which occurred near Sharon, Miss., on the thirtieth ultimo, of that saintly "mother in Israel," Sister E. C. Magruder, who had reached the ripe age of ninety years. She was one of the very salt of the earth, and was widely known and beloved. She is mourned by a numerous family connection, to whom we tender sincere sympathy.

We are in receipt of a letter from Rev. J. H. Montgomery, pastor at West Lake, La., in which he says: "I have just returned from a trip East for my health. I am glad to say that my family and I are much improved. My good people saw fit to give us a month off to make a trip to Georgia and Alabama, where we went to visit relatives. My work is moving on well. We have had several conversions and accessions to the church this year, and everything is harmonious."

We deeply sympathize with our much-esteemed friends, Bro. and Sister J. F. Cassels, of Gloster, Miss., in the heavy loss they have been called upon to sustain in the death of their daughter Carrie, who passed away very suddenly on the morning of the thirty-first ultimo, being in the nineteenth year of her age. She was a bright and winsome young woman of beautiful Christian character, and gave promise of great usefulness. May the Lord minister comfort to the sorrowing loved ones.

We heard the other day of a man who was opposed to foreign missions. Perhaps you have heard of him. He is a remarkable character. He is not only opposed to Christ, the great first foreign missionary, but he is opposed to this redeemed world and the good there is in it, all of which is the result of foreign missions alone. He is even opposed to his own salvation (if he has any), which was made possible only by foreign missions. He is a remarkable character, living in the last year of the nineteenth century, but more than six thousand years behind the times.—Wesleyan Advocate.

Says the Pacific Methodist Advocate, of recent date: "The NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE has just celebrated its semi-centennial anniversary. The editor says: 'On July 10, 1850, just half a century ago, the first number of the ADVOCATE was issued in the Crescent City.' It has always been true to conventional Methodism. Three of our most useful and honored Bishops came from its tripod, viz.: McTyeire, Parker and Galloway. The ADVOCATE, under the present able administration of Dr. W. C. EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

LOUISIANA.

REV. H. R. SINGLETON, Ruston, La.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

The First Southern League Conference is now a thing of the past. It was a success from start to finish. True, the attendance was not as large as was desired, but it was representative—that is, the best League workers from all the different Conferences were there, and will carry home the gnod, and disseminate it among the Leaguers.

Louisiana Leaguers were Misses Clingman, Tooke, Lessie Jackson, Willie Schwing, and Emma Thens, and Bros. Atkinson, Foster, G. D. Parker, and Ahrens, from New Orleans; Profs. Campbell and Carter, from Centenary College; and the Louisiana League editor.

The first evening was taken up with addresses of welcome and a response by Governor-elect Samford, of Alabama. Thursday morning was spent in discussing the value and importance of different League Conferences, and the conviction is prevalent that the District League Conference is the one from which to expect the best practical results.

The address of Dr Watkins, of Mississippi, was one of the best. He spoke on the range and limitations of League work Then came Dr. J. C. Simmons, of California, with an invitation to the International Convention in San Francisco in 1901 He completely captured the Conference, and, no doubt, if the start for California had been made as soon as he was through speaking, the whole Conference would have gone with him. The old veteran's hair is white, but he doesn't know it, and he is as young in heart as the youngest there.

Bishop Candler gave us two magnificent addresses, taking Dr. Hoss' place in "The Church in the Twentieth Century," and his own in "Methodism and Education." These fully repaid anyone for the trip, if there had been nothing else.

Gen. John B. Gordon's lecture on the "First Days of the Confederacy" was another treat thoroughly enjoyed by the delegates.

The Junior League work was well handled, and its importance emphasized, in the Friday morning session. That is the most inviting field in the whole range of League work to this scribe.

The address of Rev. J. A. Burrow, on the Epworth Era, was a gem, and we have the promise of seeing it in the Era soon.

Saturday was Missionary Day. It would have been rather a strange kind of Christian Conference if no time had been given to this most important institution of the church. The sentiment among the delegates was that one-fourth of the time and attention of the League should be given to missions. Of course, not all the time is to be spent thus, for we have other work to do, and if the Missionary Committee is alive and keeps up its part of the work, the other departments ought to emulate its example and work all the harder on their committees, instead of sitting down and crying that the missionary folks are taking everything. There's work enough for all. As it is now arranged, only one-fourth of the League's time and study is given to missions. One Sunday service in the month, and one book in the League Course of Study. The student's missionary library is not a part of the League course. The Holston Plan does not contemplate the wiping out of any debt, for there is no missionary debt now. It is simply to bring up the deficit in the pastoral charge. Missions was selected because missions is usually the fourth of the assessment, and because it is the most important assessment. Where this is raised, every other assessment is raised accordingly. This was the universal experience of the delegates.

In the Conference there were no better addresses than the "three in a row" of Hon. W. L. Stanley, Dr. O. E. Brown, and Dr. C. F. Reid—all on different phases of missionary work. Dr. Reid's speech is to be published by the Mission Board. Be sure to send for it if you want to understand the "Eastern Question."

Sunday was a rainy day. Yet all the churches were well attended, and all report delightful services. The Atlanta pulpits were nearly all filled by League visitors. In the afternoon the Junior Leaguers held forth to the largest crowd seen in the building during the Conference. At night the Conference ended with a consecration service led by Dr. Simmons, and on Monday we all started home.

The spirituality of the Conference was felt by all. The sunrise prayer meetings, the love-feasts, the sermons on Sunday, and nearly all the talks, were brimful of common-sense religion. The utmost good feeling, feeling of fellowship, prevailed, and every delegate went home feeling that the First Southern League Conference was a decided success. Dr. DuBose and the Atlanta committees are to be congratulated on the fine program they provided, the way it was carried out, and the delightful way in which the delegates were entertained. The demand for another Conference was almost unanimous, and we have no doubt the Board will call for one two years hence, to meet either at Louisville, or Asheville, N. C.

Let the Leagues that were unable to have delegates at the Conference, but want to hear of it, correspond with one of those who were there, and get an address on the Conference. Nearly any delegate from Louisiana will go for his bare expenses.

Hon. P. K. Abel, Winnfield, La., writes that he is much pleased with the Wellington Type Writer.

The Queen & Crescent Route will on Saturday, Aug. 11 1900, sell round-trip tickets to the following points at the extremely low rates named:

Minutes of the Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S.

I am sure the good sisters who held their Conference in Meridian will not censure Sister McQueen for the delay in getting out their Minutes, but will the rather give her their sympathy and prayers, when they know the facts. For a month she has been watching day and night by the sick bed-side of her little Emma, who is still very sick with fever. She has made all arrangements, and as soon as she can give the matter her attention the printers will complete the work.

THE TWO SIDES OF IT.

BY PRISCILLA LEONARD.

There was a girl who always said
Her fate was very hard;
From the one thing she wanted most
She always was debarred.
There always was a cloudy spot
Somewhere within her sky;
Nothing was ever quite just right,
She used to say, and sigh.

And yet her sister, strange to say,
Whose lot was quite the same,
Found something pleasant for herself
In every day that came.
Of course, things tangled up sometimes
For just a little while;
But nothing ever stayed all wrong,
She used to say, and smile.

So one girl sighed and one girl smiled
Through all their lives together;
It didn't come from luck or fate,
From clear or cloudy weather.
The reason lay within their hearts,
And colored all outside;
One chose to hope, and one to mope,
And so they smiled and sighed.

LINCOLN'S GREATNESS.

The greatness of a man's nature comes out more beautifully, perhaps, in his sympathy than anywhere else. A new and beautiful story has recently been published concerning Abraham Lincoln. It was while he was a member of Congress, and was home in Springfield, Ill., during the Congressional recess. He was going down the street one morning, when he saw a little girl standing at the gate with her hat and gloves on, as if ready for a journey, sobbing as if her heart would break.

"Why, what's the matter?" inquired the great, tall Congressman. And then she poured her broken little heart out to him, telling how she had arranged to take her first trip on the cars that day, and the expressman had failed to come for her trunk, and she was going to miss the train.

"How big is the trunk? There's still time, if it isn't too big." And he pushed through the gate and up to the door.

She took him up to her room, where her little, old-fashioned trunk stood, locked and tied. "Oh!" he cried, "wipe your eyes and come on, quick." And before she knew what he was going to do, he had shouldered the trunk, was downstairs and striding out of the yard. Down the street he went, as fast as his long legs could carry him. The little girl trotted behind, drying her tears as she went. They reached the station on time, and Abraham Lincoln sent his little friend away happy. I doubt if any other scene in the splendid life of that noble man reveals more beautifully the simplicity and grandeur of his noble heart. It is of the same grade and quality of action that afterward, when applied to national affairs, made men love him all over the world.—L. A. Banks.

REMUNERATIVE WORK FOR WOMEN.

There are thousands of ambitious young women art students in the United States. Every Summer, at graduating time, a small army of them goes forth from the special schools of New York and other cities. They are fully determined to devote their lives to art, and during Summer voyages in the country fill their sketch books with material for the serious work which is to begin in the Autumn. But in a great many cases this serious work never begins at all, for it often happens that the girl with the sketch book is herself the most attractive part of the landscape she may be depicting, with the result that Cupid busies himself with her affairs, and an artistic career is practically ended at its onset. From this fact the conclusion may be drawn that Cupid is an enemy to art.

Yet it has been said that women, viewed collectively, have stronger art instincts than men; and, as a matter of fact, the number of professional women artists is increasing rapidly.

The making of decorative designs for carpets, wall paper, calendars, book covers, and for many other purposes, and the drawing of figures for fashion plates, are becoming distinctively feminine spheres in art. Some of our best miniature and poster artists are women, as are a number of very talented workers in oils and water colors. But in illustrating for the weekly and monthly periodicals, which is a most lucrative branch of work, the men, to a considerable extent, monopolize the field.

The illustrating of short stories and novels, and much other work of this kind, is very congenial to women, and offers them a field which is far from overcrowded and which offers adequate financial rewards.—Success.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. On injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

A WOMAN'S TRUE WORK

"The work of a woman in the world is not to make money, but to make a home; her true business in life is that of wife and mother," writes "An American Mother," on "Is a College Education the Best for Our Girls?" in the July Ladies' Home Journal. "That is true with regard to nine out of ten of these pretty girls who are tiptoeing about now in caps and gowns, and cherishing the fondest hopes that they may some day be learned Fellows and Deans. They will marry perhaps, or remain single, helpful sisters or aunts. They will have houses to manage, marketing to do, stupid cooks to guide, babies to rear, sick children and men to nurse. Not once in a woman's life, perhaps, will she be called upon to quote from an Assyrian-Babylonic epic, or to dissect a cat. But three times every day a meal must be cooked under her supervision. At any minute, be she cook or countess, she may be called upon to make a poultice for a sick child, to change the sheets under him, to know why the bread is sodden and the meat uneatable, to give medicine intelligently to the baby in her arms. The college, be it remembered, takes the girl for four years out of family life in which this kind of training would be given to her. Its controllers, in their anxiety to develop her brain as fully as that of a man, forget the woman's life which is inexorably placed before her, and do not fit her for its inevitable work."

Miss Trude Mertens, of Holland, is a successful dentist in The Hague. She has for her patients all the women of the court, and is in such demand that her office is filled from early in the morning until evening. Her father being a firm believer in the education of women, Miss Mertens and her sisters were sent to a boys' school in Nijmegen, where they were the only girls. The fair dentist has practiced for six years, beginning at the age of twenty-one.—Zion's Herald.

"MY PAPA GETS DRUNK."

My friend was walking up State street, late one afternoon, when he encountered a short sermon on temperance. The air was keen and cold, with "symptoms of snow." He had pulled his cap down over his ears as far as possible, and buttoned up his overcoat close to keep out the stinging lake wind, and was hurrying along at a pace that might rival Weston's, when he nearly ran over a child not more than four years old, who had fallen on the sidewalk near him.

"Heigho, sis!" he exclaimed, lifting her safely to her feet again.

The little ragamuffin put up a grieved lip, and was going to cry, but stopped when he spoke to her.

"Whew! barefooted, and such a day as this!" with a low whistle, "why don't you run home, sis, and put on your shoes and stockings before you freeze your toes?"

"Don't dot any shoes and stotin's."

"Don't got any, eh? How does that happen? Don't your father buy you any shoes and stockings?"

"Oh, no," she answered, with a tone that meant "of course not," and a manner indicating that she considered the reason quite sufficient; "no, my papa dets drunk."—Exchange.

GOOD EFFECTS OF SINGING.

From the medical standpoint singing is a most important exercise, both by virtue of its influence on the emotions, on the respiratory movements, and on the development of the lungs. Nothing better shows the beneficial effect of singing in developing the chest and warding off lung diseases than the great pulmonary development and freedom from pulmonary disease among professional singers. Their general health, moreover, is exceptionally good, and this is probably in a large measure attributable to the mere exercises of their calling. Such therapeutic importance do I attach to singing that I recommend it whenever opportunity affords. It is especially useful in defective chest development and in chronic heart disease. Provided the patient can sing with comfort, I know of no condition in which singing is contraindicated, unless it be a tendency to tuberculosis or aneurismal hæmoptysis. It is scarcely necessary to say that the singer should be so clad as to allow absolute freedom of the chest movements; there should be no constriction of the neck or waist, the collar should be low and ample, and the stays, if worn, ample and loose.—Dr. Harry Campbell.

THE LOVE OF EXCELLENCE.

There is a great satisfaction in doing things just right, writes Orison S. Marden in Success, for August. It is a perpetual tonic to feel each night that you have not been slurring things during the day, that you have done everything you attempted just as well as it could be done. This sense of completeness, of things well done, has a most salutary influence in strengthening the character, and bringing all the faculties into harmony, in qualifying us for better and higher work.

I should advise a youth starting out in life to adopt the motto, "Perfection to the finish." This should be the motto of the young, for its adoption early in life may mean all the difference between success and failure.

People laughed at Stradivarius for spending months and months in making a violin. They thought he was throwing his time away. But to-day a Stradivarius, wherever found, is worth from five to ten thousand dollars, or several times its weight in gold. Everything that has immortality stamped upon it has been done in the most painstaking and careful manner.

"BITE BIGGER, BILLY."

One day a gentleman saw two boys going along the streets of a large city. They were barefooted. Their clothes were ragged and dirty, and tied together by pieces of string. One of the boys was perfectly happy over a half-withered bunch of flowers, which he had just picked up in the street.

"I say, Billy," said he to his companion, "wasn't somebody real good to drop these flowers just where I could find 'em, and they're so pretty and sweet? Look sharp, Billy; maybe you'll find somethin' by and by."

Presently the gentleman heard his merry voice again, saying: "O Billy, if there ain't half a pear, and it ain't much dirty neither! 'Cause you haven't found anything you may bite first."

Billy was just going to take a very little taste of it, when his companion said: "Bite bigger, Billy! Maybe we'll find another 'fore long."

What a noble heart that poor boy had, in spite of his rags and dirt.—Exchange.

TEACHING THE MINISTER

In Stamford, Conn., two children attended service at the church of which the late Rev. Mr. Vail was pastor. Mr. Vail repeated the words: "There is nowhere, no place, that God is not."

In an audible whisper Pauline said to her brother: "He don't know about it, does he? But I'll tell him after church."

Just as the preacher descended the pulpit steps a breathless little figure caught hold of him and said pantingly: "You don't know about God, Mr. Vail. He isn't everywhere, like you think he is, 'cause the Bible says 'God is not in the thoughts of the wicked.' That's why he don't always get into me, but I'm going to try to be very good this week, so he'll come."

And as Mr. Vail took the bright-eyed little one tenderly in his arms, she added, naively, "You don't know everything, do you, Mr. Vail?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Milk is not a beverage; it is a perfect food. Where children drink milk at meals it should take the place of nitrogenous foods—meat, of course, being omitted. It is far better when the children eat meat to give them water to drink. Where two sorts of nitrogenous food are used, like meat and milk, constipation is universal.—Ladies' Home Journal.

SLATON—Fletcher Tioner Slaton, son of H. C. and M. J. Slaton, was born in Jackson Parish, La., Jan. 30, 1864, and died in Mobile, Ala., Feb. 10, 1900. When but a few years of age he moved with his parents to Vienna, La., and while yet a youth his father died, and the care of his mother and two sisters devolved upon him, and nobly did he perform the duties of the place. He was a dutiful, loving son and affectionate brother. He moved to Jackson, La., about fifteen years ago, and there, at the age of twenty, he was converted and united with the M. E. Church, South, and continued a faithful member till his death. He was married to Miss Mittie Crawford, of Mobile, Ala., Nov. 21, 1894. An ideal marriage; truly a union of kindred souls; their home a place of conjugal felicity, so soon to be blighted by the cruel hand of the destroyer. Bro. Slaton was a most attractive young man, of fine personal appearance, the very expression of his face indicative of purity, refined and cultured in taste. In him were happily blended these fine traits of character that constitute a noble Christian manhood. There was gentleness without weakness, firmness without harshness, and that steady adherence to principle that made him the uncompromising foe of wrong and the steady friend of right; a man to be trusted and relied on in every relation of life; a good citizen, a successful merchant, honest and upright in his dealings. He commanded the respect of all who knew him. In his life there was a freedom from censoriousness or bitterness not often found. The writer was his pastor for three years, and gained to appreciate him most highly; always in his place at church; a helpful hearer; if not always intelligent, too polite to show it; and I can not remember hearing him speak unkindly of anyone. His was the charity "that thinketh no evil." He had been for some years engaged in business in Mobile, in the circle in which he was held was evidenced by the marked respect paid his memory at his funeral. A prominent man said, "We have not for a long time lost a man we so much regret." His Christian experience grew brighter to the end, but the virtues of his life were best seen in the home circle. There the wealth of his pure nature seemed to expend itself in acts of love to the loving companion and two sweet little children that gladdened their union. A bereaved sister writes, "Bro. Harper, he was all that could be desired as a son and brother." What a tribute, and what "sweet memories" they will have of the manful life so soon ended! May God bless and sustain all his dear ones, and grant them happy reunion in the sweet bye-and-bye!

I count it a privilege to have known Fletcher Slaton, and expect to meet him again in Heaven that is "fairer than day." His life was right; when the summons came it found him ready; his end was peace. He rests from his labors, and his works do follow him.

J. D. Harper.

Webb—Sampson C. Webb, Jr., son of Dr. C. and Margaret A. Webb, was born at Liberty, Miss., May 8, 1876; became a member of the M. E. Church, South, at the age of sixteen; was married to Miss Bertha Barnes, of Pike county, Oct. 21, 1896, and died at Gloster, Miss., May 2, 1900.

During his short life he was known and valued for his energy, determination, self-reliance, generosity, and friendliness. His perseverance in the midst of failures and misfortunes furnished his associates an example to be imitated. The early development of a pulmonary disease, aggravated by dangerous wounds received in a railroad wreck, weakened him, kept him from work at times, but did not break down his courage, nor turn him aside from cherished plans.

He went from his home on the Mississippi coast to Southwestern Texas in August, 1899, in search of health, but, failing of his object, and seeing the end near at hand, he returned to the neighborhood of his birthplace and first home, that he might die amidst his loved ones, and be buried near his mother and his sister. Approached by physician and pastor with regard to his hopes of salvation, he expressed readiness to die, and spoke his assurance of glorious resurrection. He had previously said repeatedly that, although not afraid to meet his God, he was ashamed not to have a better report to him of service to his fellowman; ashamed of being empty-handed.

"We will be patient, and assuage the feeling
We may not wholly stay;
By silence sanctifying, not concealing
The grief that must have way."

Brother.

Douglass—William Winans Douglass was born Dec. 7, 1852, in Wilkinson county, Miss., and died at his home near Olive Branch, Miss., May 10, 1900. He was taken with a severe chill May 8, followed by a stroke of apoplexy, from which he never rallied, dying peacefully at 3:25 P. M., May 10. He was educated at Centenary College, and for a number of years engaged in school teaching, of which he made a success. The Civil War coming on, he was among the first to enlist in defense of his native land. He served through the war, making a true and gallant soldier. December 8, 1864, he was happily married to Miss Sarah J. Packer. Of this union were born nine children—four sons and five daughters. Of these, four sons and four daughters, all grown, with their mother, are left to mourn the loss of a loving, devoted husband, and a kind, indulgent father. After the war he engaged in farming, and settled near Olive Branch, which occupation he followed up to his death. He came of Methodist stock, his father being a local preacher in that church. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South, for more than thirty years, serving as steward, Sunday-school superintendent, and trustee. He was a liberal supporter of the church, and was ever the preacher's friend. Many an itinerant's heart will be made sad when it is learned that he is no more. He will be sadly missed in the community where he lived. Although our friend left no testimony, being unconscious during his short sickness, yet we have a hope that all is well with him. A Friend.

Hanchey—On May 20, 1900, the death angel entered the home of Mr. M. E. Hanchey, of Dry Creek, La., and claimed for its own Mrs. Mary Frances Hanchey (better known as Fannie), the wife of Mr. M. E. Hanchey. She was a daughter of Mr. Jack Fairchilds. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her loss—five girls and three boys. Sister Hanchey has five sisters and one brother in Texas. She joined the M. E. Church, South, at an early age. Sister Hanchey was a congenial woman. A sweeter, purer, or nobler woman never graced this world; her life was sunshine itself. A beautiful flower that budded and bloomed on earth has been called from this earthly home to the home above. Truly a good woman has died.

About three weeks ago, when Sister Hanchey was in health, she talked of purity of life and of the love of God, and said she was ready to depart this life any time. Her illness was of only six days' duration. On the morning of May 20 God's white-winged boat came and released the patient sufferer, and bore her to the realms of eternal bliss. The only complaint that she made was about leaving her children, but when death came it was like a glorious sunset. We laid her tenderly to rest in the Dry Creek Graveyard with the distinguished dead on May 21, at 10:30. May God graciously sustain her husband and children in their sad bereavement!

Davenport—Mrs. Sue R. Davenport (nee Merlin) was born Dec. 6, 1840, and departed this life March 28, 1900. She was married to Dr. R. C. Love, of Hinds county, Miss., in 1859. The Civil War coming on, Dr. Love became a Confederate officer; was captured, imprisoned, and died. On the twenty-fifth day of July, 1871, she was united in marriage to Mr. J. D. S. Davenport, of Fayette, Jefferson county, Miss., and became the mother of five children, two of whom have preceded her to the better land.

Mrs. Davenport was ever a fond, tender, and affectionate mother and wife, and a true and constant friend. To those in need she was always ready to lend a helping hand. One of her chief pleasures was derived from attending upon the religious ordinances. When a child she was converted and became a consistent member of the Baptist Church. After her marriage to Mr. Davenport, however, she moved into a neighborhood where there was no Baptist Church, and her husband being a Methodist, she united with that denomination, and became an ardent and devoted member.

May the loving God in whom she trusted comfort, guard and guide the mourning loved ones is the earnest prayer of

One Who Loved Her.

Sweetness of character and life come out of sanctified trial. Testing softens under divine grace. God's furnace is intended to refine and purify. It is not for us to repine under his chastening and moulding operations. He knows best how to rub off the rough angles, to sweeten the temper, to sublime the wayward spirit, and to bring into meetness for heaven.—Presbyterian.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain; cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

Pianos.

If "a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches," how important, when buying a piano, that you get one with a "good name" from a reliable house; that will last an ordinary life-time, and give you no trouble or expense.

As there are so many worthless junks on the market that are dear at any price, we would advise our readers, before purchasing, to investigate the merits of the Jesse French, Starr and Richmond Pianos the two leading and most popular makes in America, made by the Jesse French Piano & Organ Co., St. Louis, Mo., one of the largest and most responsible firms in the country. Prices moderate, terms reasonable, and, best of all, you will get an instrument that will last and give satisfaction, with the privilege of seeing and testing it before any money is paid.

Divine thought and a heavenly frame of mind in man will be seen in his walk through life. "A light upon a hill can not be hid." Religion is not fictions. One can not come in contact with it without being affected by it.—Exchange.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

A Small Beginning.

A little snow ball on the summit of the Alps, rolled up by the winds, moves slowly downward. Gaining in strength and size, it grows rapidly to giant proportions, and finally becomes the frightful avalanche, destroying everything in its path. Consumption begins with a little cough, a trifling pain, a passing flush on the cheeks. This is but the beginning of the avalanche, consumption, that knows no pity, recognizes no distinction. Just at the beginning thousands commit the error of not checking and curing the disease by using MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the New Orleans Advocate we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to August, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address Rev. W. C. Black.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Russians have crossed the Amur river and captured the town of Sakhalin.

Thirty thousand Boxers are eighty miles north of Tien Tsin and a battle is imminent.

Many missionaries of different nationalities have been massacred in the province of Shang Si.

It is reported that after Li Hung Chang left Canton the imperial troops joined the Boxers.

A chapel to the memory of King Humbert is to be erected on the spot where he was assassinated.

President McKinley has appointed forty-eight enlisted men in the regular army as second lieutenants.

The Boxers are said to be murdering missionaries in South China, but are not disturbing the treaty ports.

The Chinese are said to have broken the canal bank, flooding the country between Tien Tsin and Pekin.

Two members of the Tsung Li Yamen were beheaded July 27 for urging the preservation of the foreign ministers.

The State Department at Washington has received official confirmation of the authenticity of Minister Conger's message.

Subscriptions already received at New York for the British war loan amount to about half of the entire £10,000,000 issued.

A cablegram from Admiral Remey indicates that serious resistance has developed to the advance of the Pekin relief column.

The assassin who attempted the life of the Shah of Persia at Paris has given his name as Francois Salson. He is a Frenchman.

United States Consul Fowler estimates that the losses of the American missions amount to $1,500,000. Losses through the suspension of trade are enormous.

The various funds for the relief of the widows and orphans of the dead police officers in this city, murdered by the negro Charles, has reached the $10,000 mark.

Rev. T. De Witt Talmage arrived in Berlin from St. Petersburg on Aug. 5, and preached in the American Church. While in St. Petersburg he dined with the Czar.

First Lieut Alstatter, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, with an escort of fifteen men, were attacked by Filipino insurgents and the entire party killed, wounded or captured.

What Not to Say.

Do not say, "I can't eat." Take Hood's Sarsaparilla and say, "I am hungry all the time, and food never hurts me."

Never say to your friends that you are as tired in the morning as at night. If they happen to be sharp they will tell you Hood's Sarsaparilla cures that tired feeling.

Do not say, "My face is full of pimples." You are quite likely to be told by some one, "There's no need of that, for Hood's Sarsaparilla cures pimples."

It is improper and unnecessary to say, "My health is poor and my blood is bad." Hood's Sarsaparilla will give you good blood, and good health will follow as a natural consequence.

The Chinese imperial troops will oppose the advance of the allies on Pekin.

Li Hung Chang has informed the consuls at Shanghai that the ministers left Peking Aug. 3.

The residents of the treaty ports are demanding that severe punishment be inflicted on China. Belief exists that unusual punishment, like the destruction of the kings' tombs, is necessary.

Representatives of various independent unions of textile workers of the United States met in Boston recently and formed a united organization, embracing all unions of the industry.

The United States charge d'affaires at Constantinople, on Aug. 4, renewed his demands upon the Ottoman government for compensation for losses of American citizens during the Armenian massacres.

Local colored pastors on Sunday expressed views on the race question agitated by the crimes of Robert Charles. They unanimously opposed the proffered aid of Miss Jewett in Boston, and gave warning against Liberian scheme literature.

A big battle has occurred between the Allies and the Chinese. The Celestials were defeated after over seven hours of desperate fighting. Casualties of the allied forces number 1,200 in killed and wounded. The engagement occurred at Pei-Tsang, nine miles from Tien Tsin. The Chinese soldiers fought with surprising stubbornness and desperation.

The main advance on Pekin began July 30. On Aug. 1 the Chinese attempted to retake Tien Tsin, but were driven back. An imperial edict of Aug. 2 designated Yung Lu, the friend of the foreigners, to escort the ministers to Tien Tsin as soon as they were willing to leave Pekin. Li Hung Chang has been impeached by Li Ping Hing for maintaining relations with foreigners. Russians refuse to allow Americans to string telephone wires on the poles along the railroad from Tien Tsin toward Pekin.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:

Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Vorbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowon, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

THAT DISASTROUS FIRE

At a charitable bazar in Paris where a score of bodies were burned beyond recognition, demonstrated the great value of dentistry. In many instances the identity of the victims was established beyond doubt by the dentists who had preserved a record of such fillings and crowns as had been made by them for the deceased. Naturally this fact attracted the attention of the world to the profession of dentistry, which has made remarkable progress in recent years. These observations are called forth from reading the announcement of the Atlanta Dental College, which appears in this issue. Write the dean for a catalogue.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

"The Chinese situation," said an official of the Department of State, "may be said to be waiting on the result of the attempt of the allied army to reach Pekin, and, to judge from the resistance already met with, which was only overcome by hard fighting, accompanied by an enormous percentage of casualties, that attempt is a more serious matter than many have been disposed to regard it." There is no idea among officials and diplomats in Washington that the foreign ministers will leave Pekin, as the Chinese Government is trying to get them to do, unless compelled to do so; therefore, the Chinese announcement that they are at liberty to do so at any time is not seriously considered. Those who ought to know something about it are predicting that Russia and Germany will declare war against China in the near future, and it looks as though China intended to declare war. Our officials decline to express an opinion as to what effect such action, if taken by those governments, would have upon our policy.

It can not be said that the failure of the Sultan of Turkey to keep his last promise to pay those American missionary claims within a specified time was a surprise. The Sultan has defaulted on so many promises that his keeping one is the only way he can surprise those who are familiar with his methods. The day after the expiration of the period set Mr. Griscom, who is in charge of the United States legation at Constantinople, sent a communication to the Sultan reminding him of his failure to keep his promise, and demanding, for the third time, that the money be paid. At the Department of State it is said that the Sultan will be given an opportunity to reply to the latest demand upon him before the next step in forcing the payment of these claims is decided upon.

A fund is being raised by private subscription to pay the expenses of the 1400 Cuban school teachers, now attending a Summer course of instruction at Harvard University, during their coming visit to Washington, where they will spend a day just before going back to their homes. The government looks after their transportation, but there is no public money available to pay other expenses. The living expenses of the teachers while taking the course at Harvard, which the university very generously made free to them, have been paid from a fund of $100,000 donated by citizens of Boston. As they will only spend one day and night in Washington, no very large amount will be needed to pay their expenses. The President is so much interested in the visit of these teachers that he has promised to be in Washington and hold a reception in their honor the day they are here. The effect of the experiment of bringing these teachers to the United States will be watched with the greatest interest by those who regard the education of the young as one of the most important problems connected with our new possessions. There is no doubt that these 1400 teachers have learned more of American manners and educational methods during their Summer visit to the United States than they could have acquired in five years from books studied in Cuba. It is expected that they will impart the knowledge they have gained to the pupils of the Cuban schools. Upon the realization of that expectation depends how successful the experiment will be. If it turns out as many believe it will, we shall probably have a corps of teachers from Porto Rico and the Philippines coming for similar courses of instruction.

Dr. J. Sanger, an American who has been a practicing physician in Manila for six years, during which time he had an opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with the character of the natives, is now visiting Washington. He summed up his opinion of them as follows: "The Filipinos are no more capable of self-government than the American Indians are capable of conducting the government of the United States. The Tagals are the only tribe that make any pretense to education, and only a very small portion of them can read and write. In point of numbers they are one of the weakest tribes in the Philippines, and as they are hated by the other tribes, there would be constant war should the Tagals attempt to govern the islands. The desire for self-government is confined to a few unscrupulous leaders, who would rob the country and then escape, to live in luxury in Paris or some other European capital, while the powers of the old world gobbled up the islands. No one familiar with the Philippine Islands has the faintest idea that a Filipino government is even remotely possible."

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' CONVENTION.

Chicago's counterpart of Moody's Northfield has summoned the Christian world to a gathering from which may start a great religious advance movement. To the cluster of buildings on the north side of Chicago, over which is now written the title, "Moody Bible Institute," are expected to flock in September, Christian workers from all parts of the United States and from foreign lands. They are to assemble without regard to class or creed, imbued only with zeal for revival activity, and primed with contributions to the stirring discussions planned as part of the convention. In the meeting and its results, proof will be forthcoming, it is expected, of the degree in which Mr. Moody's life, work and memory remains potent.

"Progress in revival work"—that is to be the watchword. The busy hum of student life at the all-the-year-round Bible Institute will lend stimulating environment for the meeting, and the prayerful fervor of scores of active religious workers will have effect. It is well known that even the routine class activity of the Institute has fostered the missionary spirit. The efforts of more than 200 of its alumni in foreign lands furnishes evidence. So it has been urged upon the officials of the institution: "Let us have a gathering of evangelists, pastors, church officers, Sunday-school teachers, and others, within the walls of the Institute, to talk of the Winter's work. Let us bury denominational differences, and devise compelling means for bringing souls to Christ during the coming months." The National Convention of Christian Workers in former years furnished a precedent, and the call went out. At the headquarters of the school, 80 Institute Place, the assembly will be held, from Sept. 19 to Sept. 26—eight days of prayer, Bible study, discussion of methods, and attainment of the true sort of fellowship in revival work. For the last named the great events now shaking the world will furnish an impetus.

A reunion of students of the Institute is to follow the convention, and the students will come in time for the convocation. It is hoped that some of the former students now in Europe and Asia will come, ready to describe the awakening of the nations to the situation in the Orient.

Sessions of prayer for missionaries now at the scene of massacres, and discussions of the right attitude of Christian people in the present crisis, will diversify the convention programme.

The chief aim of the Conference, however, will be a kind of gathering of energy, and interchange of suggestions. Everybody is to be welcome.

A large number of special addresses have been arranged for, and the speakers will be men like Prof. Graham Taylor, the Rev. James M. Gray, Alexander Patterson, C. N. Hunt, M. B. Williams, and the Rev. Johnstone Myers.

Special lines of effort will be discussed by C. N. Crittenton, of New York; W. E. Blackstone, and Harry Monroe, while W. R. Newell and R. A. Torrey, of the Institute, are also to take a part.

With men like these to strike keynotes and kindle fervor, and with momentous themes, clustering about that of soul-winning, scheduled for discussion, assurances of the success of the convention are coming in upon its promoters. "It will strike fire," said one minister of the proposed gathering. "Given such conditions—the time's ripe for revival, the season opening, the place, the date, and the speakers—and it can not fail of results."

It only remains to mention the meeting-places and the music. The main building of the Institute will be the rendezvous, but some of the larger meetings will be held in Chicago Avenue (Moody's) Church, while various Conferences will be held in the class-rooms.

For the music extensive preparations have been made, and a chorus, led by Prof. D. B. Towner, will sing.

"Come to the Bible Institute in September"—that is the invitation many Christians may well be taking to heart.

THE SITUATION IN INDIA.

The New York Committee of One Hundred on India Famine Relief has recently issued this statement to the public regarding the situation:

"Rains have begun in India, but they are insufficient, and are a full fortnight late. No harvest can be gathered before October. Till that time the distress and mortality from hunger must increase. The death-rate from cholera, added to famine, is appalling. The number of persons receiving official daily relief has risen above six millions—6,148,000. There are many thousands of orphans absolutely destitute. In the meantime the need for clothing for the shelterless, emaciated, enfeebled people has become almost as cruelly urgent as that for food. The native blanket, costing one dollar for three, is the most useful article. The impoverished, wasted peasant farmers are without seed. Two or three dollars per farmer now, for this purpose, mean a harvest and a competency. Particularly pitiful is the condition of thousands of orphaned children. Especially appealing is this feature of the work when we know what fine men and women have been made from boys and girls rescued from former famines, and educated in American schools in India.

"The British Government has already expended on this famine more than fifty millions of dollars, to which must be added many millions of private charity contributed by Great Britain and her colonies, and the splendid gifts of America and other countries. Above six millions of persons (one and a half millions being children) are in daily receipt of government relief. The aged, the young, the infirm are fed gratuitously. The able-bodied are employed on cash wages, building reservoirs and irrigation works, digging wells, building roads, etc., extending the splendid system of similar works constructed in the past decades, with a view to mitigating future droughts. Vast as is the relief machinery in operation, it is painfully inadequate to the dreadful need. Nothing less than the co-operating benevolence of the nations will suffice. There can be no diminution of America's bounty for months to come. Your gift of to-day may, by the cable, save life to-morrow in India. In such work as this the nickel, the dime and the quarter are not to be despised."

CONVERSION OF A PRESIDENT.

BY JNO. T. SAWYER, D. D.

One day last week, while looking through an old book—"Tefft's Methodism Successful"—I found an account of the conversion of the first Gen. Harrison, who, with fond familiarity, was styled Tippecanoe by the Whigs, who, after a warm campaign, landed him in the White House at Washington. Instances of the self-surrender of illustrious Americans to the claims of Christianity have not been wanting in the history of American Methodism. While our church has vindicated her mission to the lowly by her wonderful work among the masses of the people, she has also, with success, reached after those occupying the high places of the land. In her operations she has ever been proof of the fact that "the poor have the gospel preached to them;" nevertheless, she has been faithful in the delivery of her message to the rich and powerful, preaching also unto them the same 'glorious gospel of the blessed God." Pressing every whither, on fire of the Holy Ghost, her flaming messengers have, like Paul, preached "not with excellency of speech or of wisdom," but, "declaring the testimony of God," and "not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power," they have stood not "in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." Their triumphs have been had among all classes and conditions, every human environment yielding its trophies to their ministry of love and power. At the time of his conversion Gen. Harrison was President-elect of the United States. It occurred at Wesley Chapel, Cincinnati, during the Winter of 1840-41. Rev. John Newland Maffitt was helping the pastor, Rev. M. P. Gaddis, in a protracted meeting. The account given by Mr. Gaddis of Gen. Harrison's conversion is as follows: "In the midst of the mourners at Wesley Chapel, I had the pleasure of meeting every night, for more than a week, the lamented President of the United States, the late Gen. William H. Harrison. I was struck with the deep interest he manifested in our altar exercises. He generally stayed till a late hour, standing up during the singing, and in a lowly, kneeling posture in time of prayer for the penitents. On one occasion he spoke to me in the following deeply affecting and interesting manner: 'Bro. Gaddis, I know there are some of my political opponents that will be ready to impugn my motives in attending this revival meeting at this particular time, but I care not for the frowns or smiles of my fellow-men. God knows my heart and understands my motives;' and then, laying his hand upon his heart, he exclaimed with much emotion, and with a fervor that I shall never forget, 'A deep and abiding sense of my inward spiritual necessities brings me to this place night after night.' At the close of one of our meetings, while the Rev. J. N. Maffitt was singing his favorite song, concluding with the chorus,

> "'To die on the field of battle
> With glory in my soul,'

"General Harrison walked to the foot of the pulpit steps and reached out his hand, which was immediately grasped by Bro. Maffitt, while he continued to sing:

> "'Old soldier, travel on;
> I'll meet you in bright glory,
> To die on the field of battle
> With glory in my soul.'

"The effect was electrical. The audience simultaneously rose to their feet, while every eye was moistened with tears."

Though many improved methods have been introduced into our Zion in these later times, it is, nevertheless, true that we need, as of old, the straight and loving gospel of the fathers, their glorious songs and effective altar work. We have not improved so much that we can hope to "spread scriptural holiness over these lands" without the old-time power.

Shreveport, La., Aug. 2, 1900.

The 20th Century Movement.

THE SACRED HONOR ROLL.

At the Twentieth Century Rally in Carrollton, in April, Mrs. Ella H. Garner was an interested and sympathetic hearer and a cheerful giver. When the Roll Book was opened she subscribed an amount that was liberal for a woman, who, with her husband, was making daily bread "in the sweat of her face" on rented land. She was a faithful member of our church and Sunday-school, walking in from the country to attend the services. Two weeks ago she was taken sick with slow fever. At this season, when farmers have little or no spare money, she had not forgotten her thank-offering. Skillful medical attention, and tender nursing by the elect women of the church, failed to drive off the grim monster. Just before she passed away she handed her thank-offering to her sister, saying: "I have laid this by to meet my subscription to the Century Fund. See that it is so used." And so she passed peacefully away to be 'ever with the Lord;" her name upon the sacred century honor roll here, and in the "Lamb's Book of Life" there. The twentieth century will find her about the Father's business in another sphere, her generous gift doing good here. Will not every pastor give each member committed to his care the opportunity of making a like record? Will not every Sunday-school superintendent do the same for his pupils? J. R. BINGHAM.

THE POSITION OF THE CHURCH.

It is not the position of the church that salvation is by education, and we most earnestly affirm that God's grace is even equal to the task of saving an educated gentleman as well as the outcast in the slums. Let those who fear the power of education and its dangers therefore magnify the power of the grace which we preach to "save to the uttermost," and find comfort. Now, the church proposes to see to it that the grace mentioned be magnified in her schools and colleges to the intent that the power of culture and thought be brought into obedience to the law of Christ. We will fight fire with fire; we will meet polished and well-armed doubt with cultured and erudite Christianity. And we can not hope to have this done by the public schools, since they are the children of the State, and hence much influenced by changing social conditions and by the politics of the day. With institutions of her own the church can have ever before the State a living epistle on this subject which can be known and read of all men. Her own institutions will lead the way and illustrate the doctrine for which we contend if we so equip them that they will not disgrace us and prejudice men against the doctrine of Christian education. And to do this, we are marching in an army (perhaps too much like an army of bushwhackers) to a conquest against wealth in false application that we may rescue some of it for the treasury of the church and the enlightenment of the world. The time is short. Some have done nothing as yet. Many preachers have been idlers, while others have struggled, and we have been compassed about by a crowd of witnesses on earth and in heaven. Let us awake to the duty of the hour, and press this cause while the waters are troubled, and let us see to it that our own work is well done, whatever others may do. And that thou doest do quickly, remembering that the night cometh when no man can work, and the end draweth nigh.—V. A. Godbey, in Texas Christian Advocate.

The methods adopted in some districts of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist Church for swelling the Twentieth Century Fund are curious, and indicate the enthusiasm with which the fund is being adopted. In country districts many cottagers set apart each a hen or two, the eggs of which are to be sold for the benefit of the 'caegilad" for the next two years, and probably there are now some thousands of these "hens with a mission" to be found in Wales. At Festiniog a well-known cyclist and his wife are under a promise to contribute a halfpenny for every mile they will ride for the next twenty months, and they estimate they will cover 3,000 miles in that period, thus realizing a total of $30.—Northwestern Advocate.

We learn that in the Virginia Conference up to this time more than $60,000 have been pledged to this fund.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

THE OUTLOOK FOR THE NEXT SESSION IS MOST FLATTERING.

President Murrah reports that the indications for a large attendance of students at Millsaps College next session are highly encouraging. This will be gratifying to the friends of this popular institution.

It is a matter of pride to every Mississippian that this college has, in the few years of its history, attained so high a place in the educational world. The peer of any institution in the State, the excellence of the work done in Millsaps College is recognized throughout the South. The college has taken strong hold on public confidence. The progressive and thorough methods which are adopted in the management of its affairs are receiving general and appreciative recognition. It stands for all that is best in an educational institution of high grade.

The faculty of instruction is composed of teachers distinguished in their several departments. They are eminently fitted for their positions, not only on account of general and varied culture, but because they have received special training in the greatest universities of the country.

The Law School of Millsaps College is attracting attention beyond the borders of the State. By recent action of the Board of Trustees the law faculty has been much enlarged, and the college now offers to the young men of the State a corps of active instructors which has never been equalled by any Mississippi institution. The work of the school will be distributed between the following eminent jurists, who compose the faculty: Judge Edward Mayes, Chief-Justice A. H. Whitfield, and Judge Wm. R. Harper. All of these distinguished lawyers have had large experience in teaching law, and the young men who are to have the opportunity of receiving instruction at their hands are to be congratulated.

Millsaps College is peculiarly fortunate in its location. It is situated just north of the city, on a commanding elevation, with perfect drainage, and in a beautiful campus of seventy-five, or more, acres. A healthier spot it would be difficult to find within the limits of the State. The location secures all the advantages of the town, and yet supplies all the healthful conditions and immunities of the country.

The next session will begin the third of October, and the Clarion-Ledger hopes to see a large number of students present on the opening day.—Jackson Clarion-Ledger.

I have no doubt that much sorrow might be prevented if words of encouragement were more frequently spoken, fitly and in season; and therefore to withhold them is sin.—C. H. Spurgeon.

WHO OF US KNOW?

BY S. C. ALLEN.

Who of us know
The heartaches of the men we meet
Each day in passing on the busy street,
The woes and cares that press them,
Forebodings that distress them—
Who of us know?

Who of us think
Of how hot tears have chased the smiling cheek
Of some we meet who would not dare to speak
The pangs they feel, the burdens that they bear,
Each hour that passes through the solemn year
Who of us think?

Who of us care
To try and think and know their pain and grief,
And help to bring to breaking hearts relief,
To help to bear the burdens of their care
By tender word and loving look and prayer—
Who of us care?

THROUGH THE DELTA.

BY M. I. HOSKINS.

After continuous rains for over twenty-three days one needed the bow of promise to span the sky as a token of the covenant that the waters would become no more a flood. Trusting in this token, and receiving a message from the president of our Conference college that some work was needed in the Delta, we—now, this is not used in an editorial sense, but as a plurality, for I traveled in behalf of the W. F. M. Society and Grenada College—left the hills and was off to the lowlands. Reaching Durant, we dined with Mrs. Geo. Beall, whom we remembered as the charming Miss Lonies Murphy, whose rare beauty was once the theme of all the admiring swains of Holmes county. Leaving the treasure of our heart, viz.: the only girl of the household, in her loving care, we hurried away. Pausing for awhile at the quiet little village of Pickens, we were a guest at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sister Wilburn, around whose home there lingers a spell; the old-time, ante-bellum courtesy permeates every nook, and the assurance of welcome is felt everywhere.

Bro. Gladney, the preacher in charge, has rendered incalculable aid to Grenada College in the past, and by his kindness to its representative announced his fealty anew. He was standing on the threshold of a wonderful purpose, which has culminated in a trip to the Chicago University, where he hopes to be greatly benefited by a six weeks' course of hard study. We found a live missionary society, and were handsomely entertained at a tea given by the society at the church parsonage. Our heart could but acknowledge the goodness of a special Providence that led us to this point, where we came in touch once more with old pupils and friends, who, after years of separation, were ready to give our institution the right hand of fellowship, and work for its advancement for the sake of "ye olden days." Friendship is truly the golden clasp that links earth to heaven.

Winona claimed us for one night. After a brief conversation with Mrs. Aycock, of the Crescent Hotel, who was an old-time school-mate, we felt that we were indeed off for the Delta.

When the stop at Indianola was made we were warmly greeted by Bro. W. H. Saunders, of whom the bachelor preacher of the North Mississippi Conference had remarked the day previous, "Saunders is the hungriest-minded man I ever knew." This statement is true. His loyalty to the church will never be questioned as long as he stands by her institutions of learning with such undaunted faith. Special courtesies were tendered to us by Mrs. R. B. Faison, who still holds our W. F. M. S. together, as was evidenced by the meeting that night. Our college will register a bevy of fair girls from this point.

We had the pleasure of meeting the gifted young preacher from Morehead, who has thrown his soul into his work. He is trying to build a place of worship in that thriving town. If any of our ladies know of an honest way to make money for this purpose, please communicate with Bro. Harbin. No communications from girls under twenty-five will be answered.

Greenville, the Queen City of the Delta, gave to us a new-found relative, Miss Mollie Inge, whose loving and gracious hospitality will long be remembered. Bro. J. E. Thomas was on the eve of departure to his old home. He was home-sick for mother. Ah, these precious mothers! How they bless our lives and hallow the past, present and future with holy and protecting memories! A most spiritual missionary meeting was held that night. The kind words and helpful prayers will long be remembered. We are indebted to Mrs. Archer for many kindnesses in our college work, and hope to have a coterie of girls from Greenville.

Our next stop was at Hollandale. Here, for the first time, we received no assistance from the minister of our church, but Bro. Dorman, the big, whole-souled presiding elder of the Greenville district, had given us the names of some young ladies; so we started out to work alone. We had been so badly spoiled by the assistance from our preachers that this crossing of the Rubicon was no easy task. However, good was done for our college home. We reorganized the W. F. M. S. in the afternoon. With its new president we are hoping great things from this faithful band of Christian workers.

Down the loop, up the river-side division, through wide fields of struggling cotton and weary-looking grain. At one point a large field of yellow-bladed corn, with crisp, curling tassels, gave no promise of the full ear. For the first time in many years bumble-bee cotton graced the rich black land of this beautiful country. Some of the planters were very blue, while others recall the words that stand as a witness of God's fidelity, "While the earth remaineth, seed-time and harvest shall not cease," and rejoice accordingly.

At Gunnison, Bro. J. R. Countiss gave us the preacher's hand-clasp, and introduced us to that princely host, Bro. Wren, and we were driven in magnificent style to a palatial home not far from the great tawny river that flows lazily on to the sea. Here we were greeted by Sister Wren with such a genuine welcome that we felt as if we had missed something by not knowing her before we turned the downward slope of life. The next morning was a calm, peaceful Sabbath—one of God's perfect days, shot to the core with sunshine. We enjoyed the Sunday-school service, but especially the morning sermon by the earnest, consecrated young preacher, on the 'Bride of Christ, the church adorned for her husband." While dwelling upon the attentiveness of earthly brides, he was so engrossed in his subject he failed to notice the fair, sweet face of a newly-made bride as she bent her ear to catch every word of this rapturous theme. A missionary service was held that night, and the congregation, some of whom had driven fourteen miles to hear the message, seemed to feel that China would soon be redeemed, and that the present war would level every barrier, and that the church of God must be ready to go up and possess the land. Bro. Mitchell, a recent graduate from Millsaps College, led in the song service, and gave us every assistance in his power. The next morning we shifted our theme to education, and Grenada College now lays claim to several leading girls from Gunnison. The hour for departure drew nigh. With a sad heart we bade our new friends farewell, and saw the last tower of beautiful Valhalla, the elysian home of Bro. Wren, fade in the distance.

FOREST DISTRICT.

To the Preachers in Charge and Their Assistants in the Forest District, Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: Your attention is called to our District High School at Montrose, Jasper county, Miss., and you are respectfully asked to urge its claims on "the people called Methodists" in your respective charges. The faculty is competent, efficient, and sufficient. Board is cheap; so is tuition. The locality is healthy; the community is religious. Montrose is 18 miles south of Newton, 25 north of Vossburg, and 27 west of Enterprise. It is the property of our church in the Forest district, and is, therefore, an "institution" of the church. Let us work together and secure the co-operation of our laymen in supporting and building up this high school.

Pardon my calling public attention to the fact that only one preacher in the district, the Rev. Thos. J. O'Neil, undertook to carry out the suggestions contained in the Bishops' Pastoral Address on the Twentieth Century Movement. Sickness prevented his reading the address to two of the six congregations on his circuit, and sickness prevented his meeting with his Hillsboro congregation every night of the week of prayer. He is the only preacher in the district who took up a collection for the Twentieth Century Fund the eighth day of July, according to the request of the Bishops and of your presiding elder. And this was not the only district in our Conference, or in other Conferences, marked by such failure to regard the suggestions of our chosen leaders. The Bishops had no right to command, but their advice ought to have been followed. An army in which everybody is a general or a colonel is no army at all, unless each man lays aside his dignity and shoulders a rifle to follow those chosen by the suffrage of the others to be the leaders. If there be any failure in the Twentieth Century Movement, it will be because "we have turned every man to his own way." Did the preachers in our church cordially cooperate with the Board of Education and follow the lead of Bishop Galloway, Southern Methodism would easily raise $15,000,000 instead of $1,500,000 for educational purposes at home and abroad. If we fail to raise the pittance called for, the blame must rest on the preachers who have neglected golden opportunities, as well as on the covetous who do not believe in "eddication."

My heart rejoices with yours over the conversions and accessions which are being reported from almost every pastoral charge in the district, and with those who are being established in the most holy faith. New congregations are being organized and committees appointed to build houses of worship. With few exceptions our Sunday-schools have been organized into missionary societies, and the children and young people are being taught to contribute to the holy mission cause. The exceptions are due to the indifference of pastors and the want of religion in the superintendents. Peace prevails throughout the district except at one point where "a wandering star" has invaded the community and disturbed our Zion, having "a fuller gospel" to preach than the pastor and the presiding elder preach. Some misguided ones may follow him out of the pales of our communion and build an altar against our altar; but our church will survive and "be preserved to the end of time" if we abide faithful and hold fast the form of sound words and the faith once committed unto the saints.

The Decatur circuit, Rev. L. J. Jones, P. C., bids fair to be the first in the district to pay all assessments in full. Vossburg and Heidelberg, Shiloh, Morton, Newton and Hickory, Montrose, Lake, and others had better look to their laurels.

Don't forget the Missionary Institute at Jackson, Aug. 14 and 15.

The God of peace be with you all.

Yours faithfully,

T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

SPIRITUAL INTERESTS OF THE CHURCH.

(Report on the Spiritual Interests of the Church, Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, adopted at its recent session in Booneville, Miss., and requested to be published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.)

The spiritual interest is the great interest. All other interests are secondary and subservient. As the body is dead without the spirit, so is the church dead without spirituality. Our church has always from its very inception given prominence to spiritual interests. Our God in his Word and Gospel places the spiritual interest above everything else, and we are glad that our presiding elder and this District Conference have given such prominence to this all-important interest.

Your committee realize in some measure the importance of the work committed to them, and have prayerfully considered the reports of the pastors, and have also gathered information from various other sources, and in the fear of God endeavored to give an honest report, trying to steer clear of optimism on the one hand and of pessimism on the other. We appreciate the disposition of our pastors and laymen to put the best construction on the situation, and to be hopeful. We are truly glad to note the favorable indications mentioned in the reports; such as raising the assessments, providing more liberally for the pastor, and increased liberality on the part of some, a better attendance upon the public services of the church, etc.

Now, while we are hopeful, and determined to do our best, at the same time we must not close our eyes, and be blind to the existing facts that confront us everywhere, both in our towns and rural districts.

In bringing out the following facts we want it borne in mind that they are not peculiar to the Corinth district. No, we are sorry to say, they exist more or less everywhere. The question before us to-day is, "What is the spiritual condition or state of our church in the Corinth district?" Is it really good or not good? We naturally shrink from saying it is at a low ebb, even when the actual facts compel us to do so. The following things are prominent hindrances to the spiritual prosperity of the church:

1. The disregard of the plain teaching of God's Word. God's Word reveals all that is necessary for the salvation of the world. But there is not more stated than God requires of us. To affirm that would be to accuse him of throwing around us that he did not intend for us to obey. If we admit that he intends for his people to measure up to his recorded standard, then we dare not believe that any man can be saved who willfully violates any commandment. To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin. If ye are guilty of one violation, ye are guilty of all, says Holy Writ. Your committee believes that one of the most destructive tendencies is a self-constituted standard instead of recognizing the one already created by God in his revealed Word.

2. The lack of interest manifested in the general services. Many of our Sunday-schools are struggling for existence. The teachers are not prompt, and but few conversions are reported from them. Your committee believes that if there were such burning zeal for the salvation of our children and young people as there should be, that we would have hundreds of conversions every year from our Sunday-school. Our prayer meetings are poorly attended. It is a growing problem in many places to know how the interest can be stimulated, so that these important meetings can be continued. Many reasons are given why the people do not attend. Your committee has observed, with some degree of wonder, that the pastors are being condemned for their methods conducting them, and this is assigned as a reason why so many prayer meetings are dragging. Your committee asks the privilege to differ from this view. We believe that there is but one reason why our people are not prompt in their attendance upon these devotional meetings, and that is because their minds are so occupied with secular things that a prayer meeting is not congenial to their feelings. There are other important meetings of the church that are not attended as they should be.

3. Decay of family piety. Your committee wishes it could report many family altars and a deep interest in our blessed religion. But we are sorry we can not. To a great degree family worship seems to be almost extinct. Where once the home altars were adorned by sacred services the thorns and thistles of neglect and indifference grow. This, with a general falling off in the circulation of religious literature, are ominous signs of spiritual decay, that, in the judgment of your committee, ought to be brought to the attention of our people.

There are many signs, however, of a general revival, the most prominent of which is a universal recognition of its need. Ministers and thoughtful laymen are thinking, and thinking deeply. Many are the prayers that are ascending to God for a deeper conviction of sin and its awful results. Hungering souls are waiting anxiously for the life-giving manna to fall; and your committee believes that before the Annual Conference convenes many precious revivals will be held, and that the spiritual interests of our district will be elevated. The heart of all should be, "Lord, revive thy work."

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Bro. W. W. Hopper need not be at all surprised at the unfortunate state of affairs existing among some of the "second-blessing" people. It is the natural, legitimate and necessary result of their reasoning. When any man or woman once gets the idea fixed in the mind that we need other revelations from God, or that we need and have revealed interpretations of God's Holy Word, they are far gone towards Mormonism and Second Adventism. They have admitted the fundamental tenet of these two "isms." I mean no offense, but state a fact of personal observation, when I say that Mormon elders and Second Advent preachers follow in the wake of "second-blessing" teachers, and they find, in many, a congenial soil ready for the seed they sow. They come with a new revelation from God and with inspired interpretations of the Holy Word. They bring, or profess to bring, what the people have been taught they need and have a right to expect.

In making this statement I mean not the slighest reflection on the scriptural doctrine of sanctification, nor on those who are seeking, striving and groaning to be made perfect in love in this life. I believe in this with all my heart and soul, and have done so from early childhood. I single out from the great mass that single class who claim to be wiser and better than the rest by reason of a superior gift of the Holy Ghost that constitutes them infallible interpreters of the Word of God. More, their experience is the only experience, and any experience that does not come up to their standard is defective and below the "sky-blue" mark. They also claim to "carry everything"—great and small—"to God in prayer," and get revelations from him about what to say and do in all things. I think this is a dangerous delusion—in fact, a delusion of the devil. This leads to bigotry, self-assertion and to domineering. They part with the church because the church will not yield to them, and, then, they part among themselves and each faction claims the right to rule. They do this because "they are yet carnal" as were the Corinthians when they split up over Paul, Apollos and Cephas—about who baptized them. All such petty divisions and puerile disputes are proof positive of carnality instead of spirituality. This I think is a delusion of the devil.

Any man or woman who constantly strives after an excitement of the emotional nature will ultimately wear the emotional nature out. This will end in the use of emotion, phrase, ejaculations, Amens, hallelujahs, and the like, without one particle of emotion. When it comes to this the whole thing will be meaningless cant, disgusting to all sensible, pious people, and offensive to the God of purity, honesty and truth.

I am not at all surprised at the condition of affairs as set forth by Bro. Hopper. It is exactly the condition that may be looked for among many where this teaching obtains. Those who sow these seeds of error need not wonder when they gather a pretty full crop of the apples of Sodom. GILDEROY.

BAPTIZO, EBAPTISANTO, ETC., IN BAPTISM.

FIRST PAPER.

Baptist preachers never consider a sermon well delivered unless they bring in something on the subject of baptism. In these papers the writer will show that the original Greek is very much against the immersion theory of baptism as the only exclusive mode of baptism. While we, as Methodists, are willing to concede that immersion is baptism, yet they are not willing to accept sprinkling, or pouring, as baptism.

I. Let us examine some passages in the classic Greek to see if the word "baptizo" and its derivatives "always mean to immerse." To immerse means, of course, to be put entirely under. We shall see that it does not mean in every instance entire submergence, and is often used without any connection with water.

(1) Polybius (Vol. III., page 311) used the word "baptizomenoi" as describing "soldiers passing through a river were wet to their breasts." Is this dipping or submerging?

(2) The sinner is represented by Porphyry (page 282) as up to his head in Styx, a celebrated river in hell. The word here is "baptizetai." Here are two passages which show partial submersion, but not entire.

(3) Homer, the Greek poet, in his poem, The Battle of Frogs and Mice, says, "He breathless fell, and the lake was (ebapteto) tinged with blood." Just as a person drops a little bluing in a tub of water and tinges the whole, so was the lake tinged with blood. Is this immersion?

(4) Plutarch speaks of a Roman general, who was wounded, "dipped his hand in his own blood and wrote on a banner." In this case anyone will see he only applied his finger to the flowing blood, and that he did not submerge his entire hand; yet the word is as strong here as elsewhere (baptisas).

(5) Hippocrates directs concerning a blister plaster that if it be too painful, "baptize, moisten it with breast-milk or Egyptian ointment." It would not be too much to say the original word here, pure and simple, "baptize," can be rendered sprinkle or pour just as well as baptize. No one could, by any possible stretch of fancy, get a case of immersion here; yet they say it always means to immerse.

(6) Plato: "I myself am one of those who were drenched [bebaptismenon] yesterday with wine." Here is a case of pouring wine down his throat. I can not suppose he jumped in a barrel to get his fill.

Here are six clear passages; in neither case is there a perfect immersion. The word was never used in the classic Greek in a religious sense, but was used to describe people drowning, ship sinking, etc.; but we see from these six citations that the word "baptizo," and its variations, never carried the meaning of immersing, submersing, as its exclusive meaning. There is not a standard Greek lexicon on earth that confines the word "baptizo" to immerse.

In the next paper we will take the word in the New Testament Greek.

The Christian Life.

MARTYRS.

The days of the martyrs are not past. We are accustomed to look back to the ages of Diocletian and Nero as the periods of persecution, the age of martyrs, and ignore the fact that wherever and whenever the powers of evil are in authority, persecution prevails and martyrdom is possible. Fortunately, not many foreign missionaries have as yet fallen victims to the savage fanaticism of the Chinese, but it is likely that when the truth is known, many whose fate is now in doubt will be found on the roll of honor of those whose blood was shed in the cause of the religion they professed. In Pekin alone, there are or were 700 missionaries, teachers and students. Their fate is at present unknown, but there is scarcely a doubt that they have perished. These people are martyrs, as much so as the Christians who were dragged from the catacombs to die in the Coliseum. Their faith is the same in the nineteenth as in the first century; the spirit which actuated them was the spirit of Polycarp, of the maid who went to the lions rather than drop one grain of incense on the sacred fire of Diana. Their fate is the best assurance that can possibly be given that Christianity will ultimately become the prevailing religion of the millions of China.—St. Louis Advocate.

In every heart there are little Jebusite hills, which it long seems impossible for good to conquer. Sometimes it is a secret sin which lives on amid the general holiness of a life, refusing to submit to the sway of the grace of God. Sometimes it is a remnant of the old nature—pride, willfulness, weakness, selfishness, or bitterness. "We all have our faults," we confess with penitence, and under this veil we manage to tuck away a large number of dear idols that we do not want to give up. We ought to give attention to these unsubdued parts of our life, that every thought, feeling and temper may be brought into subjection to Christ. It is perilous to leave even one such unconquered stronghold in our heart. It may cost us dearly in the end.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Every day is a little life, and our whole life is but a day repeated. Those, therefore, that dare lose a day are dangerously prodigal; those that dare misspend it, desperate.—Bishop Hall.

FROM DALEVILLE, MISS.

We will, according to promise, send you a concise report of our meeting. Notwithstanding the rain and backward condition of the farms, our congregations were good. The full results can not be expressed in words. The church was in a fearful condition. Old feuds of long standing, and that were fast stamping the spiritual life out of the church, were settled. The offender and the offended are now praising God for saving grace. Whole families were brought together in Christian love. The whole church was quickened, hearts were set free. Tongues were loosened, and God is now being praised by men and women as never before.

I have never heard better preaching by any man than was done by Bro. Bass. His preaching is plain, practical and powerful. He relies upon nothing but the Word, accompanied by the Holy Ghost, to do the work. Brother, if you want a good, safe, Holy-Ghost man to assist you, get Bro. Bass. He will do you good work. We are expecting great things of God this year.

FROM COLUMBIA CHARGE.

We think it will encourage our people, in these times of floods, failures, sickness, and other disasters, to know how well they are succeeding in the Master's vineyard.

Our third Quarterly Conference was held at Hopevllie the fourth and fifth instant. We had two services each day. Our faithful and much-loved presiding elder, Bro. W. W. Simmons, who was once pastor of this church, was at his best. We had fine congregations. Sunday the people could not all get in the house. All the services were manifestly spiritual. That old church is taking on new life. Many penitents came forward, and two applied for membership on profession of faith. We baptized four infants Sunday, at 3 P. M. The reports show a decided increase over last year. Our financial report shows $374 paid this quarter, and $912.62 paid up to date this year, against $697.06 paid for all purposes last year, as shown in the Minutes. We have had sixty-three accessions to the church, most of which have been on profession of faith. We have two protracted meetings to hold yet. Have baptized twenty-one infants. God has been with us and these good people, and notwithstanding the adverse floods he has sent upon us, we know that he loves us.

I write this to show the people what they can do when they try, and to encourage them to increase their efforts.

We have quite a number of new subscribers to the ADVOCATE.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

LEAKSVILLE, MISS.

We have just closed our third Quarterly Conference with good reports along some lines, and very poor ones along others. We have a hard work at this place, the rivers have been swollen with water all the year; consequently we have failed to get to some of our appointments. We have held several protracted meetings with good results. About 29 members have been received on profession of faith during the year. Have had some 15 or 20 conversions. A number have been reclaimed, and many new resolutions have been made. We have organized one new church, with 19 new members. Several others expect to join soon by letter.

Bro. Elbert Breland assisted us in two of our meetings. He was accompanied by several faithful Christian workers, namely: Misses Aquilla and Allie Walker, who rendered valuable assistance in the singing, and helping to win souls for Christ.

We need some well-equipped and consecrated men and women to work in this country. One or two little fellows, like your humble scribe, can't do much where the people have been fed on such preaching as we have had in some sections of this country.

We need preachers that are full of knowledge, capable of teaching, and that are full of the Holy Ghost, wielding the sword of the spirit. Can't you brethren who are on better works come and help the itinerants that have to labor all the time, riding through the heat anywhere from 25 to 50 miles to meet their different appointments: and all for the small amount of, perhaps, $150 for the whole year?

We've held our third Quarterly Conference with the following results, viz.: first Quarterly Conference reported $6 00; second Quarterly Conference, $53; third Quarterly Conference, $26, making a total of $85. Has any brother received less than this during the year?

Praise the Lord, we are still living, and getting along fairly well. Have nearly two-thirds of the Conference assessments in hand. Think we will get about all. Brethren, pray for us; we need your prayers and sympathy.

OBITUARIES.

MOORE—Mrs. MATTIE L. MOORE (nee Ming) was born in Yallabusha county, Miss., May 14, 1845. Having married at an early age, she moved to Arkansas, where she lost her husband. She then returned to Mississippi, and soon after united with the Presbyterian Church, in which she held her membership until her death, which occurred May 9, 1900, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. A. B. Randle, near Maryland, Miss.

Such is a brief summary of a noble, godly Christian life, whose perfect consistency and transparent beauty won the respect and confidence of all who came within the radius of its influence. In all the relations of life she was faithful to duty. In the sunshine and in the shadow she kept the even tenor of her way, trusting God where she could not trace him, confident that somehow good would be the final result of all the seeming ill that came into her life. Not a cloud obscured her sky as she passed into the dark valley, whispering to her weeping children, "Don't grieve for me; I am going up yonder," motioning her arms as in flight, and she fell asleep. She lives in unselfish deeds, which will not be forgotten. Her remains were laid by the side of a favorite grandson, who had preceded her a few years. The burial service was conducted by Bro. Ritchey, pastor of the Methodist Church.

May our heavenly Father graciously comfort and sustain the bereaved children, and may they all be gathered at last into that heavenly home to which she has gone!

A FRIEND.

Maryland, Miss.

MYERS—Mrs. JENNIE WESSON MYERS, wife of P. B. Myers, and mother of Rev. S. B. Myers, of the North Mississippi Conference, was born May 23, 1841; professed faith in Christ as her Savior, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at fifteen years of age; was married to P. B. Myers in 1865, and departed this life in great peace at Myrtle, Miss., on Sunday evening, May 27, 1900, after eight long, weary years of patient suffering from that most dreaded and wasting disease, consumption. She was the first of a large family to embrace the religion of the Bible, and through her godly example and deep devotion she was soon enabled to bring her father, mother and oldest sister to Christ.

Sister Myers was no ordinary woman, either in her personal appearance or in her gifts of mind and heart. She always possessed that grace and lady-like dignity that commanded respect at home and abroad. Though much weighed down by bodily pain, yet her mind continued vigorous, and lived on a high plane of thought. She was of a bright and hopeful spirit, and always dispensed words of cheer and comfort to all with whom she came in contact. In marrying, Sister Myers became the step-mother of a large family of motherless children, whom she loved and cared for, as if they had been her own. She was the mother of three children, two boys and one girl, the latter dying in infancy. The oldest son is the Rev. S. B. Myers, the popular pastor and gifted preacher of our church at Tupelo, Miss. The youngest son, Jesse, is somewhere in Texas. May the memory of a mother's undying love and the influence of her importunate prayers bring him safely to Christ!

Sister Myers was truly unselfish in her devotion to the church, to her family, and to her neighbors. She often over-taxed her strength for others. She sympathized with her husband, and helped him to bear the burdens of a busy life. She nursed her mother, three sisters, and the wife of one of her step-sons, through a long, protracted illness of consumption, till each of them died. In all this she complained not, but acted the part of an affectionate daughter, sister, and mother. It was, doubtless, this long and heavy strain on her nervous system that helped to bring on her sickness and hasten her death. She was in every way loyal to the church, and a true friend to her pastor and his family. This I know from experience.

Sister Myers was a devout Christian, an affectionate wife, a tender and loving mother. In her death her aged and crippled husband, who has spared neither money nor time to minister to her every want, has, with his children, the church and the community, sustained an incalculable loss; but she has gained great riches. May God bless and comfort the bereaved husband and children, and bring them to meet their sainted loved one in the realm of eternal life!

Beef Steak in a Bottle.
That fresh, juicy beef, ready for digestion, can be made into a delicious cordial is a marvel, but chemistry has accomplished it. Sick people at a distance from markets and needing the nourishment afforded by beef tea can procure Dicks' NUTRITIVE ELIXIR and find it the best liquid food and stimulant known. For loss of appetite, weak digestion, debility, typhoid fever, and consumption it is invaluable.

GIVE THE PEOPLE A CHANCE.

It is a profound maxim of philosophy that the consensus of honest public opinion, if we can find out what it is, is apt to be right. We have always believed that the average man would do right if he had a fair chance, and that the highest duty of those better circumstanced in life is to give him that chance.

This applies to the rank and file of Southern Methodism now, when she is seeking to realize a great connectional success in her Century Thankoffering for education. The only thing that will meet the requirement is a concerted, church-wide movement—every member taking a part. And yet of our million and a half members, perhaps not one in twenty has been moved as yet to take part in the movement. Are the remaining 1,425,000 too poor? or too devoid of church pride? or too irreligious? We do not believe that either of the suggested reasons will explain their case. Give them a chance, and they will astonish you. They lack the necessary encouragement. They have church pride and some degree of religion. They need to understand the nature of this great movement, and to know that it needs them; that it can not do without them. Once put this on their minds, cause them to realize that this, the most splendid and Christ-like conception of the century, is dependent on their loyalty, and they will put it through.—New Century Education.

FANATICAL FOLLY.

Shortly after the occurrence of the recent riot in this city an indignation meeting was held by some misguided citizens in Boston, at which utterances of the most rabid nature were indulged in, and it was proposed to raise $3 000 for the purpose of arming the negroes here for self-protection. The negrophiles of Boston could hardly have made a more unfortunate proposition, or one more calculated to stir up bad blood between the negroes and the whites. The vast majority of the Southern people are thoroughly friendly to the negro, and stand ready to protect him so long as he is law-abiding, even at the risk of their own safety, but any attempt at outside interference or assistance, such as the more rabid Bostonians suggest, would unquestionably precipitate a bloody race war.

Isn't it queer how some professing Christians slander and abuse those to whom they owe small bills for which payment is asked? Something is radically wrong with the religious experience of the church member who entertains a grudge against his neighbor or fellow Christian mainly because he happens to be in debt to the latter. We have heard more than one man acknowledge that his worst enemy was some person who had gotten more or less deeply into his debt.

Mr. Charles N. Crittenton is trying to raise an endowment fund of half a million dollars for the sixty Florence Rescue Missions which he has established.

THE CONDITION OF THE NEGRO.

Notwithstanding the ravings of some Northerners of the Miss Jewett type, there is hardly any question of the fact that the negro is far better befriended and better circumstanced in the South than he would be in the North. In this section nearly every occupation in which he shows capability is open to him, and instead of being discriminated against as a laborer on account of his color, he is in great demand everywhere.

The moment he crosses Mason and Dixon's line, however, he finds himself no longer favored as a workman, nearly every occupation to which he is accustomed being closed against him, and he is often hard beset to know what to do to earn a livelihood. Most astonishing of all, when in certain instances, by no means belonging to the remote past, he has attempted to go North in considerable numbers in search of work, he has even been met with Gatling guns and mobs, and driven back to the States where, as some in the North would have the public believe, he is perpetually and mercilessly maltreated. Infuriated by the horrible crimes of negro murderers and rapists, Southerners have, on many occasions, committed lawless deeds in retaliation, for which there is no excuse, and which the better element all over the South deplore most deeply. To the North, however, belongs the unspeakable shame of making war upon peaceful, law-abiding negroes, who had left Dixie land in pursuit of honest employment. The records show that negroes guilty of outrages against virtue are in as much danger of being lynched in the North as in the South.

We unhesitatingly affirm that so long as the colored man conducts himself well, so longs as he is industrious and peaceful, there is no place in the world where he has a better chance, or where he is safer, than in the South. We rejoice to note that the better class of colored men are beginning to recognize this more and more, and are putting themselves on record to that effect. Although thirty-five years ago the negro, as one writer puts it, "started out at one end of the cotton row, while the master at the other claimed the very clothes on his back," he is now paying taxes on twenty-five million dollars worth of property in the State of Louisiana, and on three hundred million in the entire South.

In order to show how sensible and intelligent colored men view the condition of their own race in the South, we quote in this connection some extracts from a letter published in the Times-Democrat, of Aug. 5, written by Rev. D. A. Graham, pastor of the St. James A. M. E. Church, of this city. The writer was born and raised in the North, spent eighteen years in the ministry in Indiana, Michigan, Minneapolis and Chicago, and since his arrival in this city, three months ago, has been a close student of racial conditions. He says:

"The promptness with which the mob was crushed in this city by the best element of citizens exceeded anything in the history of riots. I lived in Chicago when she was in the throes of a riot for nearly a week, and, in fact, it was nearly three weeks before order was restored. Here perfect order was restored in forty-eight hours.

"From my experience in the North, I am satisfied that there is not one city in the North where so large a number of colored people could get along nearly so well as they do here. As for prejudice, that is everywhere, and merely differs with education.

"In the North they open their hotels, restaurants, soda fonnts and theatres to us, that we may spend our money, but if we went into a wall to lay brick, every white mason would quit. Every carpenter lays down his tools if a black carpenter appears, and so in all the trades and shops, with few exceptions. I never saw a black brick mason building a wall, nor a black carpenter erecting a house, until I came South. Go down to the docks of Chicago and see the ships loading and unloading, and you will not find a single negro. Look at the thousands of men cleaning the streets, or making repairs on street car lines; not a negro can be seen. What would 80 000 negroes do in Chicago, with all the avenues of labor thus closed against them? These same things are true in Minneapolis and St. Paul. Yes, born and reared in the North as I have been, I get disgusted at their lectures to the South about prejudice against the negro."

A SENSIBLE SUGGESTION.

In a recent interview with a Picayune reporter, a lengthy account of which was published in that enterprising daily a few days ago, Mrs. Sylvania F. Williams, principal of the Thomy Lafon School, which was burned down during the late riot, expressed sentiments that are likely to excite considerable surprise in the North, where the condition of the negro is not properly understood, and makes a suggestion to the Bostonians that ought by all means to be acted upon, if their sympathy for the negro is real and not feigned. Mrs. Williams is the wife of Prof. J. Williams, superintendent of the Fisk Public School. She is also president of the Phyllis Wheatley Club, a literary club of colored women in this city, and president of the Phyllis Wheatley Sanitarium and Training School for colored nurses. She and her husband have taught in this city for nearly twenty years, and are among the most intelligent and influential colored people in this section. Hence her views are in every way worthy of attention. We give below some extracts from the interview mentioned:

"It is impossible for Miss Jewett, or any Northern person, to understand conditions in the South, or to pass judgment upon the condition and treatment of the Southern negro. One must live in the South for years and study conditions as they are. I do not hesitate to say that the white people of the South are our best friends. The educated, sensible negro knows this, and the poor cornfield hand and plantation hand, who must go to the white man for the bread that he puts into his mouth and the mouths of his little children, knows it, too. It is wrong for the people of the North to listen to the incendiary talk of a few lawless negroes. Such negroes are as bad as and worse than the mob, for it is their actions and seditious talk and insolence and lack of morality that provoke these outrageous uprisings.

"With all honest people, black and white, I must condemn the action of the mob: the shooting down of defenseless and innocent negroes for the action of a notorious criminal. My heart bleeds for the families of these helpless ones, and I have been thinking of asking the members of the Phyllis Wheatley Club to assist me in doing something for them. But we must remember, and we bid the North remember, that the great protest rose from the white people of New Orleans against these outrages, and the splendid army of men who rallied to the call of our gallant mayor is the answer of the negroes of New Orleans to Miss Jewett and her stalwart Congoes. We declare that the white people of the South are the true friends of the negroes, and we are not afraid to trust ourselves to them, Miss Jewett and Boston to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Now, if the big heart of Boston is so ready to help and to respond to the woes of the negroes, let it send that $3,000 for the relief of the families of these helpless ones. It will do more good in buying bread for the negroes than in purchasing muskets to enable us to turn them against our best friends. I am certain that the good citizens of New Orleans who helped to quell the mob will think as I do, and will help to swell the fund. So let Miss Jewett hand it over, and I and others of my race, who will be judged competent, will act as a committee, under representative citizens, to see that it is applied to far better purposes than Miss Jewett ever dreamed of in her wild ravings for the elevation of the negro.

"The colored question is a great problem in the South, but it can not be helped by Northern agitators. The less we have of them, the better. The able, intelligent men of our race, like Booker T. Washington and others, are striving to solve the problem with a view to the moral and physical betterment of the negro. These men have the support of the best white people of the South."

We learn with deep regret of the death, which occurred on the tenth instant, at Tate Springs, Tenn., in the forty-first year of his age, of Prof. A. H. Merrill, a member of the faculty of Vanderbilt University. Prof. Merrill has for a number of years occupied the chair of elocution in the University, and was widely known and beloved. He was an elegant and highly useful Christian gentleman.

THE SUNDAY LAW ENFORCED.

For the first time in months the Sunday law was rigidly enforced in this city last Sabbath. Not a saloon was allowed to open, no exceptions being made in the case of the hotel bars. Cigar and grocery stores were also forced to keep closed, and, in consequence, the Crescent City had more of a Sabbath appearance than it has had for many a day. Several bar-keepers who attempted to sell liquor in defiance of the orders of the chief of police were promptly arrested.

The flagrant disregard of the Sunday law which has long characterized this city has been a standing disgrace to its citizens and a deep reproach to those in authority, it having been pretended that the law could not be enforced. The candid truth is, that in but few instances previous to this has there been an honest, earnest effort to enforce the Sunday law. The police have amply demonstrated that the law can be enforced, and we sincerely hope that they mean to do their whole duty in this matter, not semi-occasionally, but all the time. Why not? Why should a few thousand saloon keepers be allowed to set the laws of a great Commonwealth at defiance, and disturb the peace of the Sabbath, because of their conscienceless greed of gain? No class of tradesmen are more persistent violaters of the Sabbath than the saloon men. Why should liquor shops have more privileges on the Sabbath than other shops? Is their influence over the city authorities so powerful, in fact, that they are above law, and superior to all authority?

Of course, the saloonists and their drinking friends are going to make a big howl about this abridgment of their lawless privileges, but what of that? Does not duty, as well as the honor and well-being of the city, demand of the police authorities the strict and impartial enforcement of the law? The church people of the city, almost without exception, are in hearty sympathy with this movement to suppress Sabbath violation. The police will merit the lasting thanks of all good people if they will continue the good work they have begun.

Let all law-abiding citizens rally to the support of the authorities in this commendable effort to put a stop to liquor selling and other illegal business on the Sabbath. Let the friends of the Sabbath make it evident that there is a powerful sentiment here in favor of the proper enforcement of the Sunday law.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Two of our professors having resigned to go into school-work in Georgia, their places have been filled by Prof. C. N. Lynch, A. M., of Virginia, and Prof. Jno. E. Northcutt, A. B., of Alabama. Prof. Lynch will teach Latin, Greek, French and German, and Prof. Northcutt fills the chair of Mathematics. Prof. Lynch graduated at Randolph-Macon, and has pursued advanced studies at Chicago University. Prof. Northcutt is a graduate of the Southern University, and has had seven years' experience. We have a faculty that will compare favorably with that of any school. The prospects were never better for a large attendance. We have ceiled our large chapel, and have a fine Preparatory Department. The two dormitories have been greatly improved. Prof. Upton will room in east dormitory and Prof. Lynch in west. Let the friends of Centenary help us by their patronage.

NEW BOOKS.

TO PAY THE PRICE. By Silas K. Hocking. Cloth, gilt top, 75 cents; linen cloth, 40 cents; paper, 25 cents. Sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Advance Publishing Co., 215 Madison St., Chicago.

The story deals effectively with the puzzle as old as Job, of the seeming prosperity of the wicked, and the evil which befalls the righteous.

The leading figure is a speculator of the Hooley or Barney Barnato type, who wins wealth as suddenly, and falls as swiftly as they did. Thus no fancy picture is drawn. English and American readers know him. Perhaps they have been dazzled by him. The lesson of his life is pointed in this book with thrilling interest.

True love has its traditionally troubled course in the story, but its worth is established by the outcome, and the evil of the match of convenience is effectively portrayed.

NEW TESTAMENT STUDIES IN MISSIONS. By Harlan P. Beach, Educational Secretary of the Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions. 40 pages. Paper, 15 cents. Published by Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions, 3 West Twenty-ninth street, New York.

This little pamphlet contains a series of most excellent outline studies in missions, based upon the teachings and facts given in the New Testament. Part I. deals with the missionary material contained in the four Gospels. Part II. treats of "St. Paul and the Gentile World," it being the author's opinion that there is no other book which deals so entirely and in such detail as is here attempted with the biblical data bearing on the missionary work of the great apostle to the Gentiles. Every other page is left blank for the convenience of the student in recording notes. Though intended primarily for co-operative class study, it will be found a very helpful manual for private study, and will be eagerly welcomed by Y. M. C. A. workers, Sunday-school teachers, college students, and others who are interested in the subject of missions.

THE SOUTHERN METHODIST REVIEW.

The July-August number of the Bi-monthly Review contains matter of great interest and of remarkable excellence. Dr. Tigert evidently keeps abreast of the best thought of the times. The opening article by Bishop Granbery, on "Conflict and Growth," is the fifth of his Cole lecture series, and is a magnificent contribution. The paper by W. G. M. Thomas, Esq., "A Legal View of the Evidences of the Resurrection," is highly meritorious and instructive. The writer views the subject out of the ordinary line. "Gladstone's Categories of Religious Thought" is the title of a brief, but thoughtful, paper by Dr. J. W. Hinton. Rev. Robt. T. Kerlin, of the Missouri Conference, has an admirable article on "William Cowper." The contribution by Edwin W. Bowen, Ph.D., on "Ecclesiastical Latin Poetry," is both scholarly and instructive. C. T. Carroll, D. D., has an able and appropriate critique of John Fiske's recent book, "Through Nature to God." Rev. J. E. Wray's article, "Another View of Carlyle," is, perhaps, the brightest and most enjoyable in this number. Dr. Tigert has an able and valuable article on "The Issues of the History of Dogma." The editorial departments, embracing "Topics of the Day," "The World of Missions," "Book Reviews," etc., are replete with interesting and helpful matter.

The political campaign and the Chinese problem are the two most prominent topics in the August Review of Reviews. In The Progress of the World, the editor analyzes the platform adopted by the Democrats at Kansas City. Among the contributed articles there is a brief review of the work of the Kansas City Convention by Walter Wellman, followed by personal sketches of Mr. Bryan at Home, Theodore Roosevelt, by Jacob A. Riis, and Roosevelt's Work as Governor. The Chinese Revolution is the subject of a well-informed and timely paper by Stephen Bonsal. Important phases of the situation in China are also set forth editorially. Two articles in this number have to do with phases of municipal art. Mr. Ernest Knaufft describes the new Appellate Court Building in New York City—an imposing architectural creation; and Mr. Archibald Hadden tells how a half-million has been expended, in recent years, by Mr. Charles H. Hackley in beautifying and otherwise improving the lumber town of Muskegon, Mich.

LIFE A TESTIMONY.

The sun never need send a herald to tell men that he is shining. It is the unlit lamp that requires advertisement. The true life of a Christian will be sure to manifest itself; it is like a fire; it can not burn and give off no heat. We need more of what the world does not see or hear. —Epworth Herald.

NOTES.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens has accepted a fine position as traveling agent for the Daily Picayune.

Dr. Jesse Bowman Young, recently editor of the Central Christian Advocate, has accepted the invitation to the pastorate of the Walnut Hill Church, Cincinnati.

Rev. C. M. Sheldon says: "During the three weeks I have been in Great Britain I have seen more drunken men than I had seen in twelve years in Topeka, where prohibition is well enforced."

Rev. F. M. Keen, the popular pastor at Magnolia, Miss., passed through the city one day last week en route home from the Tri-State League Conference, and made the ADVOCATE office an appreciated call.

Rev. M. L. White, the pastor at Carthage, Miss., writes that he has just closed a successful meeting at Pleasant Hill. There were ten accessions to the church. He was assisted by Rev. H. P. Moore.

***

In connection with the Paris Exhibition special services are being held on Sundays and throughout the week in the Wesleyan Church, which is centrally situated. The services are attended by English-speaking people from all parts of the world.

***

We had the pleasure, a few days ago, of forming the acquaintance of Miss Sallie Wynn White, of Alexandria, La., the bright and accomplished daughter of Rev. B. F. White. She is spending a short while in the city on a visit to her father.

***

The many friends of Rev. B. F. White, pastor of Dryades Street Church, will regret to learn that he has been quite unwell for ten days, or more. Although not confined to his bed, he has not been able to do pulpit work. His pulpit last Sabbath was acceptably filled by Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, of this city, a Centenary student.

Mr. T. Wynn Holloman, of Satartia, Miss., spent a few days in the city recently on a visit to his grandfather, Rev. B. F. White. Bro. Holloman was graduated with the A. B. degree at Millsaps College last June, and was the fortunate winner of the medal in the recent State oratorical contest which took place at the Crystal Springs Chautauqua.

Following are the names of the lay delegates to the Annual Conference elected by the Natchez District Conference: T. W. Sullivan, H. C. Flowers, E. A. Enochs, and W. O. Watkins; alternates: D. F. Ashford and T. M. Griffin. Secretary Crisler regrets that by an oversight the list was omitted in his report of the Conference published in last week's ADVOCATE.

Rev. J. R. Randolph, the pastor at New Albany, Miss., writes the following encouraging tidings: "We held our first protracted meeting on the New Albany circuit this week. We had no ministerial help, but the Lord blessed us greatly. The church at Union Hill was revived. We had six conversions and four accessions to the church. We hope to have good meetings at all five of our churches."

***

Rev. J. M. Davenport, the pastor at Enleville, Miss., sends us the following cheering news: "We have just closed a meeting of great power, Bro. W. D. Bass was with us. He tells the story of the cross earnestly and in demonstration of the Spirit. Sinners were converted, backsliders reclaimed, and all Christians helped. Thirty joined our church, and some the Baptist Church. The Lord is with us. Our charge is in fine shape."

***

We see it announced that on the seventh instant Mr. R. E. Hines, of Gloster, Miss., and Miss Helen Robinson, daughter of Mr. L. B. Robinson, of Centreville, Miss., were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. The happy event took place at Gloster at the home of the bride's brother-in-law, Dr. H. U. Street, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Mr. Shaw, of the Presbyterian Church. The groom is a worthy grandson of the beloved Rev. W. B. Hiner, of the Mississippi Conference, and is a young man of noble character and fine prospects. His bride is a most lovable and highly accomplished young lady, and will undoubtedly make him a splendid helpmeet. Our best wishes go with the happy pair.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

LOUISIANA.

REV. H. R. SINGLETON, Ruston, La.
ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

The Shreveport District Epworth League Conference, held at Kenefick, Aug. 1-3, was a great success in the estimation of those who attended. A glance through the program shows an array of talent and subjects fit for a State or International Conference. The idea was to make the Conference a school of methods, with enough inspiration and enthusiasm to assure the putting of those methods into operation.

One of the delegates, in writing of it, says: "The whole Conference was very helpful. Dr. Sawyer's sermon on Christian education was a masterpiece. All the addresses and sermons were good. The Minutes will be published."

We suggest that anyone interested write Bro. W. G. Evans, Haughton, La., for a copy of the Minutes, incidentally enclosing postage. A resolution was passed requesting the presiding elder to call the young people together at his Quarterly Conferences, and, where possible, organize them into Epworth Leagues. They are going to push the Holston Plan over there. We hope they will bring their district out ahead.

The Conference was royally entertained, the church handsomely entertained, carriages provided for the delegates, and all done that could be done to make their visit pleasant and profitable. The District League Conference will meet next year at Mansfield.

The district officers elected are: Rev. W. G. Evans, president; H. P. Dance, of Zwolle, first vice-president; A. W. Jackson, of Mansfield, second vice-president; Miss Lena Hughes, of Shreveport, third vice-president; Mrs. J. P. Ratcliff, of Stonewall, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sadie Woodruff, of Shreveport, treasurer. We predict that under these officers Shreveport district will move rapidly to the very front in League work.

Will some one from every League in Louisiana send the editor the list of new officers elected in July? Do send some local news, won't you?

We are all anxious to hear what is going on in Opelousas, Delhi, and Alexandria districts. We hope they are organizing. If the chairmen of those districts desire any help from the State officers, we are sure any one of them will be glad to help in any way they can.

The editor visited Shreveport League on Sunday evening, Aug. 5. While those present were not many in numbers, they seem in dead earnest. We hope to record good things of them this Fall and Winter.

We also addressed Calhoun League on the tenth. Bro. Ledbetter has a fine lot of young people at Calhoun, and we sincerely trust they are going to take the position among the Leagues of the State that they are capable of taking—in the very front rank.

REVIVAL AT ROCKY SPRINGS, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed a meeting at Center Grove Shed, near Rocky Springs, with blessed results. Bros. Will O. Newman, from Meridian; L. S. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference, and Homer Benton, of the Louisiana Conference, did the preaching. The meeting lasted eleven days. Such a meeting has not been witnessed in this section in twenty-five years (so many told me who were in position to know). Sin was uncovered, and many were made to see its odiousness, and to claim their privileges in Christ. A full salvation was preached, and a perfect Savior held up before the people from day to day. Fully forty were converted, many reclaimed, and some found the pearl of great price. Glory to God for the victory. There is such conviction for sin upon the people that some are being saved at their homes since the meeting closed.

THE DENTIST.

The dentist of fifty years ago had a hard road to travel when he was compelled to manufacture his own instruments, teeth, gold, etc. But the wonderful improvements wrought in this line of recent years, have revolutionized all this.

The modern dentist has also the advantage of a collegiate education, such, for example, as can be obtained at the Atlanta Dental College, where 200 students are in annual attendance. Note the announcement of this leading college of the South in this issue.

In California.

The Golden State is seriously considering the necessity of quarantining against consumptives. This means that God's fresh air and sunshine, nowhere more entrancing and beautiful than on the Pacific slope, may be denied to the unfortunate sufferers. Thousands have been greatly benefited and many cured by the delicious atmosphere of California, and it appears a most cruel measure, even though sanctioned by medical

Many persons now in the advanced stages of consumption, and surely doomed, could have been cured by early resort to that most gracious healing remedy, MARSDEN'S PECTORAL BALM.

Attention!
"Pharr Hall," Centenary College, will furnish pupils board—mess and room cleaning—at $8.75 per scholastic month. Terms will be cash in advance each month. The above cheap rates can not be offered on any other basis. The food will be wholesome and well prepared. Every effort will be made to give satisfaction, and to make both the "Hall" and dormitories home-like.

MISSIONARY PROGRAMME

TO BE USED IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOLS THE FOURTH SUNDAY IN AUGUST.

Let the superintendent ask the following question, and have the scholars answer individually, and then ask the questions and have the entire school answer in concert:

1. Why do we send missionaries into the foreign field? Because our Lord commands it.

2. What is that command? "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations." (Matt. xxviii, 19.)

3 What are these missionaries to teach? "Teach them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." (Matt. xxviii, 20.)

4 What is the promise to the missionary that goes and to the church that sends? "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." (Matt. xxviii, 20.)

5. What are the last words our Savior uttered? "But ye shall receive power, after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me, both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." (Acts i, 8.)

6. How much of the world does God mean to rule over? "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river to the ends of the earth." (Ps. lxxii, 8.)

7. Who receives the greater benefit from this work: We who send the gospel, or the heathen who receive it? "It is more blessed to give than to receive." (Acts xx, 35.)

Let the superintendent or one of the teachers have a bright boy or girl recite No. 669 in our Standard Hymn Book. If your pupils are too indifferent to commit that poem, have the entire school to read it in concert.

Will the superintendent use this or some better programme, and take up a collection for missions, and turn the amount over to his pastor to be applied on the regular collections? Write to me and let me know if these suggestions are of any service.

Yours for the Sunday-school for Christ. R. H. B. GLADNEY.

DAYBREAK ON THE FARM.

There are songs for those who listen
Just at daybreak, on a farm,
While the dewdrops glow and glisten
And the dawn-clouds add their charm.

Gentle lowings from the stable,
While the patient cattle wait
For the filling of their table:
Plaintive bleatings from the gate,
Where the sheep have flocked together;
Merry cackling from the pens,
Where, in spite of wind and weather,
Music fills the throats of hens.
There are neighings low and tender,
There are whinnies of delight,
And the pigs their tribute render
For another peaceful night.

There are songs for those who love them,
Potent both to cheer and charm
All about, below, above them,
Just at daybreak on the farm.

—Farm Journal.

BEST LESSONS.

"Oh, there's that Ruth Knolls and her brother again!

"Do you know, Miss Merton, she is just awfully dull in school, and we girls laugh at her so much. She hasn't a particle of brilliancy."

Viva chattered this speech out as she walked along the street beside Miss Merton.

"She has something far better than brilliancy," said Miss Merton.

"What?" said Viva, her cheeks flushing uncomfortably; for she felt that she had made a mistake, and she was very anxious to stand well in Miss Merton's opinion.

"She has a courteous manner. That is a grace that is very great, but far too rare. I know Ruth quite well, and her kindness and courtesy are unfailing in company or at home. She is going to grow into a lovely womanhood."

"I am sorry I spoke so," said Viva. "I really don't know anything about her except that she stumbles so dreadfully in her lessons."

"No doubt she is very sorry about it, and I am sure she works faithfully. It is a fine gift to be quick and bright in understanding things. But you know, my dear, that it is far more important to be kind-hearted and gentle. When you girls go out in the world, no one will ever ask or know whether you got good grades in algebra and Latin. If you have done your best, it is wrought into you whether your best is very good or only mediocre. But be sure of this: everyone who meets you will know, without putting you through an examination, whether you are a gentle woman or not. It is not practical to quote Greek or discuss psychology or read Shakespeare with everyone you meet; but you can always speak kindly and listen courteously, and quietly look out for the opportunity to do the little deeds of kindness that make our lives so much more worth living."—Union Signal.

THE PASTOR'S WIFE NOT A PASTOR.

The pastor's wife is not a female pastor. She is the helpmeet of her husband, but not an associate or assistant pastor. On this point we commend the following:

"'Rev.—— and his wife are doing excellent work in the —— charge'; 'Rev.—— and his wife have had unusual success in their new work'; such and similar phrases one reads very frequently in the religious journals nowadays. This idea that the pastor's wife is a sort of an 'assistant pastor' has become quite prevalent of late. She must be the president of half a dozen societies in the congregation, a teacher in the Sunday-school, must make 'pastoral' visits to the members of the congregation, must do mission work, etc. Just as though she had not, or was not expected to have, a family and a household of her own to take care of! As a matter of fact, however, she has, and it is her own family that has the first claim upon her. She is first wife, just as every other wife is, or, at least, ought to be. It is unreasonable, therefore, to expect of her to be her husband's assistant in his professional duties."—Lutheran Witness.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other

T. T. Osby, of Tula Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; but Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

CHILD THRIFT IN FRANCE.

Thrift is a habit which requires to be formed early. The boy or girl who does not realize the value of money is not likely to be prudent in later life. Like other habits, good or bad, thrift is contagious. The child who saves pennies instead of spending them, and is able to show a bank-book, arouses emulation in others. Whatever encourages children to save small sums of money does good, not only by preventing immediate waste of money, but by creating among children a public sentiment favorable to thrift.

What is done in this country by voluntary organizations is done on a larger scale in France by the savings banks. The children of the common schools deposit with their teachers any sum of money they save, from a sou, which is about the equal to an American cent, upward. Once a month agents of the savings banks go the rounds of the schools and collect the children's savings. He who deposits but a single sou receives a small bank-book; and when he has deposited a franc he receives a large bank-book.

During the last seventeen years French boys and girls have opened more than half a million accounts in the savings banks. Many children, or their parents for them, deposit an endowment fund, which is meant to give them a capital of from one to two thousand dollars when they become of age.

It is worth considering whether, in this country, some modification of the French plan is practicable, by which savings banks should co-operate with school teachers in promoting the habit of saving among children.—Youth's Companion.

THE EARMARKS OF AN EXQUISITE GIRL.

An exquisite young woman is she whose dress and hair and skin indicate the most scrupulous attention to the daily toilette. We have learned that bathing and rubbing and care for personal cleanliness, the nicety which distinguishes the lady, and adorns her for her station, are the handmaids not of health alone, but of beauty, and where is the young girl who despises beauty? For the business girl, for the girl whose daily employment is close and confining, nothing can be better than that she emulate the dainty girl in her every-day care of her dress and appearance, and in frequent cleansing of the skin by thorough bathing and vigorous friction, and by keeping herself and all her belongings as dainty as she possibly can.—Margaret E. Sangster, in the August Ladies' Home Journal.

THE FOLLY OF YOUNG WOMANHOOD.

We have witnessed many alliances which celebrated amid music and flowers, the compliments of friends and the kisses of enthusiastic relatives, where we suspect the presence of a specter that would follow the hapless twain from the altar to the grave—a specter of ominous mien, portending sorrow and heartache and disaster. Arm in arm they walk to the altar—she pure, innocent, unsuspecting, flushed with excitement and ingenuous affection; he soiled by sin, habituated to evil, yielding to strong drink, and perhaps governed by selfishness, a stranger to genuine love; they make the solemn promise to love, honor and cherish each other, and the apparition smiles at the charming delusion.

A few months have passed away, the spell is broken, the poor bride wakes to the crushing fact that her husband is not the man her fancy pictured. She thought love would conquer all things, including his selfishness, bad habits and sinful indulgences. Now that no remedy offers, now that her chains can not be broken, she wakes up to her delusion and her inexpressible sorrow—broken heart, blasted hopes, ruined life, perhaps eternal death. Yet how many foolish girls rush into just such a condition! They fancy that it will be a fairy palace, and, alas! it is only a prison. They expect it to be a delightful home which is to be built, when, in fact, it is only a limbo, a place of "durance vile," from which there is no door of escape except that which leads to the grave.—Methodist Protestant.

CHILDREN RUST IN SUMMER.

"That children do rust out during the long Summer vacation is unquestionably a fact," writes Edward B. Rawson, in the July Ladies' Home Journal. "That several weeks of the already too short school year must be spent in rubbing off the rust before the advance can be resumed, all teachers know. But that is not the worst of it. When the rust is removed the former lustre is not restored. The child's brain is not in a receptive condition: it has been allowed to rust. Children prefer regular employment, provided it be interesting. However glad they are when the last day of school comes they are quite as glad to resume their work in the Fall, even if its interest is not great. A boy—or more frequently a girl—will sometimes overwork, not because he is pushed, but because he is permitted. Very seldom will either a boy or a girl choose to do nothing. One may choose to do things other than those we require, and so be called idle or lazy; but to be doing something is the natural condition, and the condition that is preferred. So strong is the instinct to be active in both mind and body that when left to themselves our children will find something to do in spite of us, and too frequently it is something that might better not be done."

PREPARATION AND POWER.

As we study the great, ever-open book of the world's biographies, we find little trace of "luck" upon its page. Gladstone worked eleven hours a day even in youth; Pasteur, the great French scientist, spent whole days and nights in the laboratory; Agassiz copied book after book that he needed, but could not buy, and learned them in the copying; Prescott, the historian, almost wholly blind, traced out his notes with incredible care and labor, and spent ten years on one book, toiling ceaselessly every day; Lincoln worked all day at the hardest manual labor, and studied by the firelight hour after hour. Greatness is no sudden or unearned affair; it is the victory of a powerful nature, developed by thorough preparation. Of the two elements of greatness, the world and the individual are the better off for preparation without unusual power than for unusual power without preparation.—Forward.

THE PENNILESS GIRL AT COLLEGE.

Enumerating upward of fifty methods by which a girl can work her way through college, a Cornell graduate writes in the August Ladies' Home Journal: "A college education is possible for any one who is determined to have it. It may happen that the prospective student is obliged to stay at home and work several years before entering, but intensified desire brings compensation. It is not advisable, however, to defer entering until every cent necessary for a four years' course has been earned. Many girls perhaps give up the idea of going at all because they can not go soon after leaving the high school, but nowadays it is not unusual to find in attendance at universities open during the Summer quarter, teachers, well along in the fifties, who in their youth were denied a college education."

WANTED—AN EASY PLACE.

The late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher once received a letter from a young man who recommended himself very highly as being honest, and closed with the request: "Get me an easy situation that honesty may be rewarded." To which Mr. Beecher replied: "Don't be an editor, if you would be 'easy.' Do not try law. Avoid school keeping. Keep out of the pulpit. Let alone all ships, stores, shops, and merchandise. Be not a farmer nor a mechanic; neither a soldier nor a sailor. Don't study, don't think, don't work. None of them are easy. Oh, my honest friend, you are in a very hard world! I know of but one easy place in it. That is the grave."—Exchange.

Amelia E. Barr, says the Woman's Journal, is a woman who has been the mother of fourteen children, has written thirty-two books, prepared a professor for Princeton College, and at three-score years of age is a superb picture of vitality—as fresh and sweet of heart as a young girl.—Exchange.

OBITUARIES.

PULLIN—JOHN THOMAS PULLIN was born Limestone county, Ala., June 2, 1822, and ed Dec. 15, 1899, aged seventy-seven years months and thirteen days.

Bro. Pullin was twice married; first to Miss sabeth Hite Childs, April 19, 1842, who died ec. 30, 1883. By this marriage six children re born to him. All but one preceded him the home above. On April 19, 1883, he was rried, a second time, to Mrs. J. M. Daniels, o children being the fruit of this marriage, th of whom died before their father.

Bro. Pullin had been a Mason in good standg since 1852, but it was in the church that greatest worth was felt and seen. He ned the Methodist Church at the tender of twelve years, and remained steadfast the end, always abounding in the work the Lord. His mantle, I trust, has fallen our beloved Bro. W. L. Anderson, of our th Mississippi Conference, who, in his ason.

h Pullin was as salt that never lost its e. The county of DeSoto has lost one of lest men, the church one of its best members his family a model husband and father. leaves a wife and one daughter, besides sev grandchildren and numerous relatives, to rn his loss. He had been a faithful member of the church for over sixty-five years, d was ever as true as a needle to the pole. hank God for such a character.

His pastor, R. P. GOAR.

TAYLOR—Mrs. E. M. P. TAYLOR departed life May 23, 1900, was born Sept. 20, 1846; t one daughter and two sons to mourn, but ey mourn not as those who have no hope. s a girl she joined the M. E. Church, outh and lived a very consistent Christian fe. Now she has gone to the better land.

Sister Taylor suffered long, and was kind. ll was done for her that a kind physician nd loving friends could do to stay the hand f death; all efforts failed. God loosed the ords that bound her to earth, and has taken er to her everlasting reward. We will not y she's dead; she only sleepeth till Christ om s to make up his jewels; then we will see er at she joins in the new song with God's reeemed; as she enters the gates of pearl to ng and soon; as she walks the gold-paved reets, up the shining way in the city of light, ith its glittering towers and burnished alls, with the blood-washed throng, waving r palms of victory won in sin-battles on arth, as angels wonder, gaze, and shout, Heinian; as she sings the song they can not ng, Christ will crown her with everlasting fe.

I've gained my heavenly home at last,
My spirit lonely sings;
The Holy One behold their task
Is but to shout and sing.

WILKINSON—Whereas, It has pleased the Almighty to remove from our midst our worthy and much-beloved friend and Sunday-school teacher, Bro. JOHN C. WILKINSON, who, for years, has been teacher of our Bible class, and ever manifested a deep interest in all departments of the Sunday-school, attending regularly and instructing his class in the precious truths as taught in God's Word; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the scholars of Nebo Sunday-school, have heard with the deepest regret the announcement of his death, and that while we bow in reverent submission to the will of Him "who doeth all things well," we can not refrain from this manifestation of our deep sorrow for our great loss.

Resolved, That we ever cherish a fond recollection of his virtues, and hold in just regard the efficient manner in which he ever discharged his duties toward us, and that we will ever aim to emulate his Christian example.

Resolved, That we tender the family of the deceased our heartfelt sympathy in this, their great bereavement, and that this tribute of our love for our departed friend be published in the Fayette Chronicle and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and a copy of the same be furnished the family of the deceased. EDGAR GARRETT, for Com.

Nebo Sunday-school, May 6, 1900.

VAUGHAN—The subject of this sketch, Sister C. M. J. VAUGHAN (nee Benson), was born in Alabama, Jan. 6, 1839, and died at her home near Shannon, Miss., Jan. 21, 1900. She gave her heart to God in early life, and joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she ever lived an honored member. While yet young she was married to M. D. Vaughan. To this union were given seven sons and two daughters. The husband and two of the sons preceded her to the better land.

Sister Vaughan was a great sufferer. For more than eight years she was confined to her bed, and it would be hard to tell whether she or her dear children exhibited the more patience; not a word of complaint from any. sonrce. God has honored her in her family. For all things noble and true they are not to be excelled. The Rev. Will Vaughan, pastor of the First M. E. Church, South, Sacramento, Cal., is an honored son. He and his family came over, arriving soon after the funeral services, which were conducted by the Revs. J. T. Cunningham and H. P. Crowe, of Verona, Miss., in the absence of the pastor.

Sweet-spirited soul,
Thou art at rest;
Sweet peace, the gift of God's love.

A more extended notice may appear.

HEN PASTON.

DEATON—Bro. SPENCER DEATON was born May 1, 1818, in North Carolina. He moved to Alabama about 1838. Here he was married to Miss Mary Hearn. He afterwards moved to Tennessee, and from there to Union county, Miss., where he raised a large family, and spent the greater part of his life. He died April 30, 1900, and was buried on his birthday, May 1, which would have made him 82 years old. He left a wife, aged 84, eight children, and a host of relatives and friends, to mourn his loss. He was converted in 1850, and joined the church where he has lived since, and where his body now finds its last resting-place. He enjoyed the service of God, and died in the full assurance of heaven—his home. He was a pioneer in this country, a man of wide acquaintance, and a highly respected citizen. He was a remarkably healthy man until his last illness, which lasted four months, during which time his suffering was intense, but without a murmur against the mercies of God. He welcomed the messenger from God, and passed out of this life as in a gentle sleep.

To the bereaved ones we can only say: Be faithful; he is just over there, not with wrinkled brow, but with renewed youth of paradise, never more to grow old.

J. H. HOLDEN.

HAMMOND—EFFIE A. HAMMOND was born Jan. 2, 1828, and fell asleep in Jesus at her home, ten miles above Columbia, on Pearl river, April 30, 1900. She was converted in early life at an old-time class meeting, held at China Grove Church, Pike county, Miss., and soon after joined Lenoir's Church, Marion county, Miss.

Sister Hammond lived a Christian life from the time she joined the church until the day of her death. During her brief illness she was often heard to pray for herself and children, and frequently expressed herself as willing and prepared to meet her God, and prayed that she might die easily, and when the end came her soul took its flight so quietly that it was hard to perceive when death claimed her as his victim.

Sister Hammond was twice happily married; first to Mr. Samuel McDonald, by whom she had three children. Her second marriage was to Walter N. Hammond, by whom she had two girls, who have given themselves to God, and are raising their children in the way they should go. Keep on, dear friends, in the way you are going, and you will be sure to meet your precious mama and papa in the sweet bye-and-bye. J. D. MAY.

Pearl Charge, Brookhaven District.

GIBBS—In memory of the Rev. H. P. Gibbs, aged 34; a preacher of the M. E. Church, South; born in England, born again in America; by the first a child of genius, by the second a child of God; called to preach the gospel at the age of 23, in the State of Mississippi; himself the spiritual father of a numerous and happy family; at his tomb genius, eloquence and religion mingle their tears. Holy in life, ardent in love, and incessant in labor, he was to the church a pattern, to sinful men an angel of mercy, to the world a blessing. In him were rarely combined gentleness and energy of character; by the one attracting universal love, by the other diffusing happiness around him. Singular sweetness and simplicity of manners, inimitable eloquence in the pulpit, natural, graceful, and fervent, rendered him the idol of those who knew his inner life. Upon the lips that moulder beneath the sod thousands hung in silent wonder. His element was not the breath of fame, but the communion and favor of God. He closed a scene of patient suffering, and slept in Jesus, in the city of Water Valley, on the twenty-third day of April, 1899. By faith he lived on earth; in hope he died; by love he lives in heaven.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to August, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

10,000 AGENTS WANTED.
FOR LIFE & SPEECHES OF BRYAN
The "Life" is written by Mrs. Bryan. The Speeches revised by Mr. Bryan, but he is not pecuniarily interested in its publication. A golden opportunity for agents. Don't miss it. NOTICE—We also desire to employ agents for selling our book on the "Paris Exposition", beautifully illustrated. We also publish "Life of McKinley" and other campaign books.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The Anstro-Hungarian legation at Pekin has been burned.

Five priests have been killed in the southeast province of Chi Li.

Large numbers of Indian troops are being sent from Simla to China.

Cossacks have captured a Chinese general, five officers and fifty-eight soldiers.

The body of King Humbert of Italy was placed in the Pantheon at Rome on Aug. 9.

The local Sunday law was strictly enforced on Aug. 12 for the first time in many months.

The Pei Ho river has risen and flooded the country, making the advance of the allies extremely difficult.

The jetty at Sabine, Texas, has been completed. There is now a mean depth of thirty feet over the bar.

It is reported that the situation at Tien Tsin is again perilous owing to the reassembling of the Chinese.

A messenger from Pekin reports that the Empress Dowager sent four cartloads of food to the legations on July 28.

Secretary of War Root regards the Chinese situation, both from a military and diplomatic view point, as much improved.

A cartridge company at Bridgeport, Conn., is working night and day to fill orders from several governments for ammunition.

Two hundred men, women and children have been massacred in the Armenian village of Spakhank by Turkish troops and Kurds.

Major Henry has withdrawn from the congressional race in the Seventh Mississippi District. General Hooker will be nominated.

William Jennings Bryan will make no such extended speech-making tour of the country this campaign as he did four years ago.

Gen. Teranchi, second in command on the Japanese staff, says the international army will total 50,000 men on Aug. 15, at which time the real advance on Pekin will begin.

Yang Tsun, the first objective point of the international forces, has been captured after a stubborn resistance. There were sixty casualties among the American troops.

A returned Cape Nome miner says from 5000 to 10,000 people there are facing absolute destitution, and the only possible relief is through the United State sGovernment.

The Chicago building trades strike, which has been in progress for several months, is nearing an end. The men are leaving their unions and are returning to work at the old hours and wages.

The demand made by the United States on the Chinese Government, which has been transmitted to Minister Wu, calls for the immediate cessation of hostile attacks by imperial troops upon the legations.

During the maneuvers of the French fleet off Cape Vincent a collision occurred between a first-class battleship and a torpedo boat destroyer. The torpedo boat destroyer sank immediately. Most of the crew were drowned.

It is authoritatively stated that the United States Government will accept Count Waldersee as the commander of the international forces in China if the necessity exists at the time of his arrival in that country for an international army to begin a campaign.

A dispatch has been forwarded through Minister Wu to the Chinese Government in reply to the edict appointing Li Hung Chang as envoy to negotiate for a cessation of hostilities, reiterating the demands previously made as to the safe conduct of the foreign ministers to Tien Tsin.

Gen. Chaffee is within striking distance of Pekin's walls. The American commander has announced his safe arrival at Ho-Si-Wu. That place, thirty-three miles from Pekin, was reached three days ago. Allies are probably now at the gates of the Chinese capital. There is a thrill of exultation and expectancy at Washington over the news.

YOU NEVER READ of so many great cures elsewhere, as those effected by Hood's Sarsaparilla, did you? It is America's Greatest Medicine and possesses merit unknown to any other preparation. It is a wonderful invigorator.

Sick headache is cured by Hood's Pills. 25c.

England is preparing the medals for the South African War. They will be of silver.

Eugene V. Debs and Job Harriman, the Socialist-Democratic party's candidates for President and Vice-President, have formally accepted the nominations.

Minister Conger, cabling the State Department, says the legationers will not leave Pekin until ordered to do so by their respective governments, and that, in order to secure their safe departure, foreign troops sufficient to guard 800 foreigners, including 200 women and children, as well as 3,000 native Christians, who can not be abandoned to certain massacre, must be sent.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:

Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. F. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever by using two bottles.

Two Verdicts.

"After a fair and impartial trial you are judged guilty by this court, and you are sentenced to be hung by the neck until you are dead." The solemn tones of the judge, the despairing face of the prisoner, and the painful stillness of the court-room, makes it a scene of awful impress. Now turn to a brighter scene at the home circle. A mother radiant with joy over the recovery of a child snatched from the clutches of Malaria. An entire family rejoicing, and praising the merits of Dicks' Chillifuge, and giving their verdict that Chillifuge is without an equal for swiftness to cure.

BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

A. F. WATKINS, D. D., President. REV. M. L. BURTON, V. Pres. and Bus. Mgr.

The session will open Sept. 12, 1900. Unusual advantages are offered by this historic institution. Campus large and beautiful. Buildings commodious, being thoroughly repaired.
Hot and cold water in the dormitories. Electric lights in every room.
Healthfulness unsurpassed. Course of study comprehensive and thorough.
Faculty carefully selected. Our facilities for doing work in the Departments of Music, Painting, and the Industrial Arts are very fine.

Our Motto: "Do Right."

Our Charges are moderate. Write for a Catalogue.

A card addressed to WHITWORTH FEMALE COLLEGE, Brookhaven, Miss., will receive prompt attention.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE (For Young Ladies), JACKSON, MISS.

One of the most thoroughly equipped High Grade Schools in the South. Buildings new and modern, heated by steam and lighted with electricity. Bath rooms for hot and cold water on all floors. Beautiful campus of twelve acres of native forest trees. No school for girls in the South can show such a health record. During the past Winter, noted for the idemics of pneumonia, la grippe, measles and small-pox all over the State, there was not a single case of any of the above diseases, or any serious case of sickness of any kind, in the college. The Faculty is composed of specialists in all departments. In Music, Elocution and Art the College offers exceptionally fine advantages. The authorities of the New England Conservatory of Music and Elocution say: "Of all our pupils from the South those from Belhaven College stand not only in the highest rank in their classes, but are regarded, without exception, as possessing those womanly traits of character and that degree of intellectual development which command instant respect and admiration." Next session begins October 1st, 1900. For our beautiful catalogue, address

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

The attitnde of this government in refnsing to open negotiations of any sort with the government of China nntil the ministers and other foreigners in Pekin are safe nnder the protection of the allied army, now on its way to Pekin, is approved by pnblic sentiment, and, what is, perhaps, more important, has been endorsed by several of the Enropean governments most interested. The news that the allied army was making rapid progress toward Pekin without fighting was received with mnch gratification, and aronsed the hope that the rescne of the foreigners in Pekin might be accomplished without fnrther bloodshed. A long message from Minister Conger, forwarded by Chinese officials through the Chinese minister in Washington, was received this week, bnt it contained matter which caused onr officials to decide not to make it public.

A phase of the Chinese news that is really alarming, because it increases the danger of a great international war, is that relating to the gathering of English and German warships and troops at Shanghai, where there has been no ontbreak of Boxers, or any other serious tronble. Members of the diplomatic corps regard these movements as very serious, and as indicating the approach of a crisis which will determine whether China will continue to be governed by the Chinese, or be dismembered and divided among several European nations. While this government has no desire to acquire Chinese territory, it has enormous commercial interests in China, which make it an interested party.

It was rather disappointing to those who are in the habit of seeing Washington make a leading showing in all movements for charity to read the report of the Executive Committee of the New York Committee of One Hundred on India Famine. The report shows the total receipts to have exceeded $200,000, in amonnts from 1 cent npward, and from all classes of onr people and all sections of onr country. Of that amonnt, only $2,-621 46 was contribnted through the Washington committee. This seems ridiculously small sum when compared with some of Washington's contribntions for other charities, bnt inasmnch as the committee reports the famine distress as unabated, there is a chance yet to bring the contributions of the national capital np to a total more creditable to the generosity of its people.

Secretary Wilson is anxious that the farmers of the conntry should co-operate with the Department of Agriculture in the preservation of our native birds, and under authority given the Department of Agriculture by the Lacey act, he has sent out the following circular letter: "Farmers and land owners are directly interested in the enforcement of bird protective measnres. Too often they fail to realize that game birds, like song birds, are nsefnl insect and weed destroyers, and they, in this and other ways, have a money value apart from that brought in the market. Those who, by carefnl protection, preserve a few coveys of quail or other game birds on their lands, will receive a retnrn through increased crops, resulting from a decrease in insect pests, and in some instances can derive additional profit by letting the privilege of shooting during the open season, for which sportsmen are often willing to pay if birds have been properly protected. Farmers should familiarize themselves with their local game laws, concerning which they can nsually obtain information throngh State game wardens or State game associations. Circular 28 of the Biological Survey gives a list of the State officials and associations concerned with the protection of game, and circular 29 the fnll text of the Lacey act, with regulations for the protection and importation of birds." Copies of those circulars may be obtained by writing to the Biological Snrvey, Department of Agriculture.

The Florence Crittenden Hope and Help Mission, of which the anditor of the District of Colnmbia, Mr. James T. Petty, is president, has made an appeal for contribntions amonnting to $5 000, with which to extend and maintain its work. This institution is a worthy one. It receives any woman or girl who desires admission without charge, and assists them to lead a moral life. It is non-sectarian. Daring the past year it has provided for more than three hundred women and children, four-fifths of whom it placed in positions to earn an honest livelihood, besides furnishing 65,000 free meals to the friendless. It teaches girls who become mothers to care and provide for their offspring, thus preventing the children from becoming pnblic charges, and, when possible, provides them with homes, with new surronndings, where they are given an opportunity to lead honest lives. This is one of those practical charities which should never appeal in vain to those who are able to give.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

Bro. T. W. Lewis asks: "Is it the observation of the brethren that the church seems cold and dead? What is the matter? What is the remedy? Is this great educational movement bringing spiritnal life to the people? Is the church spending as much energy trying to convert souls as she is in doing other things?"

Where I travel the brethren, preachers—Methodist, Baptist, and Presbyterian—and leading laymen in all the churches agree that the church, all the churches, seem cold and dead. I have heard this question talked over privately, in company and in preachers' meetings. It seems to weigh heavily on the hearts and minds of all the preachers and all earnest, godly laymen. I regard this as a favorable indication and as a prime condition for a better state of things.

"What is the matter?" I have heard this question largely discnssed, bnt there has been no general agreement among the brethren as to the real difficnlty. Some think that this is a material age, when the great mass of the people have their minds and hearts set on material things, on making money. Some say the spiritnal life of the church has been seriously and permanently damaged by the adoption and nse of sensational preaching and methods in evangelistic work. The people and the preachers have come to depend more on the method than on the power and grace of God. Salvation is more a question of manipnlation, of management, than of regeneration and holy living. None but professional, real artists, can bring souls to Christ. There is a lack of deep, pnngent, powerfnl conviction for sin; few, if any, cry ont in agony for salvation from sin.

"What is the remedy?" It is generally agreed that we ought to retnrn to God wherein we have departed from him. The preachers ought to depend more on the Holy Ghost and less on the bnild, logic, learning and finish of their sermons. They ought to exhort more and reason less. They need to pray more and to be men of one book—the Holy Bible. The members of the church need to feel their personal responsibility in the matter of soul-saving. They need more faith in God, in the power of the Spirit, in their pastors as evangelists, and in the regular and ordinary means of grace. They ought to support their pastors in evangelistic work instead of imploring him to send off for a professional of sensational and doubtfnl methods. A long talk with a devont old Presbyterian preacher this week along this line convinced me that this trouble was common to his church and ours. He said: "I have not witnessed a pungent conviction for sin in near twenty years. We seem to have lost the sense of sin. The need of the hour is greater reliance on the Holy Ghost as the divine agent of conviction and of regeneration."

"Is the great educational movement bringing spiritnal life to the people?" It is not; not within the range of my observation, or of the observation of those with whom I come into contact. This movement has not been preceded, and there are, as yet, no indications of its being followed by a deepening of the spiritual life of the people. A great revival of religion is the prime condition for large collections, and liberal and generous contributions are often the condition for a gracious outpouring of the divine blessing. So far we have not had any great increase of spiritnal life, and up to date the contributions have not been liberal, generous, or cheerfnl, except in a few and widely separated places.

"Is the church spending as mnch energy trying to convert souls as in doing other things?" It is not. Converting souls, bringing men to Christ and to full salvation from all sin, is a secondary and less important matter. The preachers and leading laymen in all of the churches, so far as I have heard them express themselves, are agreed on this. In all of the churches money-getting for worthy causes seems to be the first thing. I do not know a single Methodist preacher, from our Bishops down to the humblest circnit rider, whose time and energy is not expended more in raising money than in saving souls. The great body of onr preachers with whom I come into contact cry ont nnder this burden as did the Jews under the task-masters in Egypt. In many instances onr reports at Conference are limited to matters of finance. Money-getting and money-reporting are, or they appear to be, the great things. Full collections are, or they seem to be, more important than great revivals and large ingatherings. It strikes me, and many others, that we magnify the material at the expense of the spiritnal. I sometimes wish that for the next twenty-five years the emphasis wonld be laid on the number converted and added to the church. Then the minds of the preachers and of the people wonld be fixed on the main thing, the prime object of a call to the ministry and of the organization of the church. This wonld tend to magnify the spiritnal above the material. The causes are all good, and fnll collections are greatly to be desired, bnt soul-saving is the first and great work of the church. This ought to stand in the forefront of all onr reports. The increase in conversions and in additions to the church has not kept pace with the increase in collections. We gain more dollars than we win souls. The preacher ought to take collections, or have others to lift them; he ought to develop the finances of the church; bnt this is not his first nor most important work. He is called of God to save souls, to lead men to Christ, to edify the church, and to nrge men to holiness of heart and life. All else is of secondary consideration.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

As yonr Washington correspondent, in his letter of this week, is kind enongh to give the readers an argnment in favor of expansion, and against the possible self-government of the Filipinos, I thought a short sketch of their history would not be ont of place.

Spain's first effort to reach and snbdne these islands was in 1519. At this time Portngal claimed all that part of the earth and sea, and, to meet and defeat that claim, Spain sent five ships and a fnll complement of men nnder the command of one Magellan, who was a deserter from the flag and interest of Portngal. Landing on the Islas de las Pintados, he was killed in a battle with the natives, and of the two hnndred and eighty men who sailed with him, only a small remnant ever reached home again. Some time after this another squadron of six ships was dispatched nnder the command of Garcia Yofre de Loaisa, bnt he found the Portnguese in possession of the strong points, and the battles that followed were not hopefnl in their results to the ambitions of Spain. A third expedition was sent from the Pacific coast of Mexico in 1542. It was composed of two ships, two transports, and one galley, well manned and armed, and nnder the command of Ruy Lopez de Villalobos. Bnt the Portuguese overcame them. Villalobos died of a broken heart, and the snrvivors reached Lisbon in 1549. It was about this time that these islands were called the Philippines, in honor of Philip, prince of Asturias, the son of Charles I., and who became king of Spain in 1555. In November, 1564, another expedition of four ships and one frigate, well armed with four hundred soldiers and sailors, left the Mexican port of Navidad for the Philippines, nnder the command of Miguel Lopez de Legaspi, who, at the time, was mayor of the City of Mexico. He reached the islands in 1565, and to him belongs whatever honor there was in bringing them into snbjection to Spain.

And now, for more than three hnndred years, these people have been engaged in perpetual war for freedom, nntil to-day every grain of sand on those islands represent a drop of human blood shed for that liberty God created every man to have and to enjoy. If the voice of Abel's blood cried from the ground nnto God for revenge against Cain, these islands are bnt the incarnation of a cry to God against the wrongs of Spain and of these United States. And will God hear and avenge that cry? Go ask Spain, and her answer will be in the langnage of Cain, "My punishment is greater than I can bear." And shall we escape pnnishment? Not so long as the omnipotence of God is seated on a throne ont of reach of the powers of darkness. The historian closes the chapter with these words: "Since then, and, in fact, since the very beginning np to the present time, the natives have only yielded to a force which they have repeatedly tried to overthrow." And yet yonr correspondent tells ns that, "No one familiar with the Philippine Islands has the faintest idea that a Filipino government is even remotely possible." Will he tell us whether or not the total extermination of the men, women and children of these islands by this government, for their wealth, is remotely possible?

"SOME PLAIN FACTS" TESTED.

In the ADVOCATE, of July 19, appears an article from Mrs. Mathis nnder the title, "The League—Some Plain Facts."

Sister Mathis, in her zeal for her idea of League work, has failed to test her supposed "facts" by the records and by other clearly known facts.

1. She sneers at the "Holston-Cobb plan." There is no snch plan. The Holston plan was not originated by Bro. Cobb, bnt in the Holston Conference, and has been adopted by a large majority of the Annual Conferences (24), including the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences. It is endorsed by the General Secretary of Epworth League and by the General Board of Missions. This plan was not adopted by the Mississippi State League Conference because of Mr. Cobb's presence, nor nnder his influence.

2. She alludes to that "big missionary debt." This is startling. There is no snch debt, and the "Wilmington Resolntion" provides that there shall never be another.

3. She says: "By the Constitntion all study classes are nnder the Literary Department. This new plan places a larger study-work under the Devotional Department, and provides, not for the regular authorized work, bnt substitutes another on foreign missions—sixteen volnmes—and also claims the mission books in the reading course." By reference to Constitution, Article I., Section 1, it will be seen that the whole matter of missions is under the Devotional Department. The sixteen volnmes mentioned is in no sense a League course, bnt simply recommended as good books for League library.

4. She says that "the Missionary Committee appoints district secretaries in onr State," etc. Nothing of the kind has ever occnrred, nor is proposed. According to our State Constitution, the district secretaries are appointed by the State president (no district secretaries have yet been appointed for this year).

5. Sister Mathis says, "The disgnst was so manifest that no League wonld offer to entertain the next State Conference." Leaguers were present at Vicksburg with earnest desire and formal invitations to the League Conference (indeed, an active canvass was begun by some), bnt these were not considered in open Conference, because it was deemed wiser to leave the matter with the Executive Committee, that better rates might be secured.

6. Mrs. Mathis declares that "hnndreds of this State and other States share her views." Some of the nndersigned have traveled largely over Mississippi and some in other States, and, with the exception of Sister Mathis and a few of her neighbors, we know of none who hold the view with her.

7. She speaks of the matter of "withdrawal from State work being freely discnssed during the Conference and more since." If there are snch disloyal Leagnes, in justice to the innocent ones, their names ought to be given.

8. She says, "The Mission Board pays Mr. Cobb and his expenses to go to State Conferences and monopolize the whole thing for missions." Bro. Cobb has never been to our State Conference without an official invitation from the State management, and has never monopolized anything, only taking the part assigned him on the programme.

We need to nnderstand, fnrthermore, that "missions" is not a phase or aspect of Christianity, bnt Christianity itself. We have bnt one work, and that is to "missionize the world." Everything else is secondary and incidental.

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING.

The fonrteenth annnal camp meeting at the Sam Jones Camp Grounds, near Gloster, Miss., has just closed. It was one of the best ever held there. The order was perfect. Most of the preaching was done by Rev. B. F. Haynes, of Nashville, some of whose sermons were delivered with great nnction and power. Bro. Haynes' manner of delivery is rather quiet, but he seems never to be at a loss for words. He often clinches the truth with some text of the Word or some forcible illnstration.

One of the most effective and forceful sermons delivered during the meeting was preached by Rev. J. W. McLanrin. It was accompanied by the power of the Holy Ghost, the result being that the altar was filled to overflowing with penitents. There were forty, or more, conversions; some fifteen or twenty joined the church.

I am of the opinion that the M. E. Church, South, has a fine piece of property in the Sam Jones Camp Grounds, and I am also impressed with the fact that it is a fixtnre.

The crowd on the last Sunday was the largest, with one exception, ever assembled on the grounds. The wonder is that such crowds will continue to come when the accommodations are so poor.

The association, at a meeting held just after the close of the camp meeting, appointed a committee on improvements, and it is to be hoped that this committee will act wisely, and spare no pains or expense in improving the grounds and in providing for the better accommodation of visitors.

There were present, first and last, only six itinerant preachers, and bnt one of them was permitted to preach twice.

THE TRI-STATE EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE,

SEASHORE CAMP GROUNDS, AUG. 1-9.

I.—PURPOSE.

The making of intelligent, inspired and consecrated leadership is the pnrpose of the Tri-State League Conference.

1. Intelligent Leadership. There is no royal road to knowledge; the only road is that of hard study. So this Conference provided the right means to intelligent leadership. Study classes and a school of methods were conducted every day by snch teachers as Prof. Tom Carter, of Tulane University, and Rev. P. L. Cobb, of Nashville, Tenn.

2. Inspired Leadership. The sources of inspiration were many. The platform addresses in the evenings were as springs of inspiration. The delightful climate of the Seashore, beautiful scenery, and fellowship with nature and kindred spirits, all tended to inspire.

3. Consecrated Leadership. No idea so permeated the whole Conference like that of total consecration. Every Leaguer realized, ere the Conference closed, the great necessity of an absolute surrender to Christ and of a spirit-filled life.

II.—PERSONNEL OF THE CONFERENCE.

The attendance was from Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana; the last leading in numbers. The most noted and gifted leaders of thought from the platform were Rev. F. N. Parker, of New Orleans, who gave us Browning's Message for This Age; Rev. H. W. Featherstun, D. D., of Mississippi, who spoke on "Methodism, the Mightiest Moral Movement of the Millenniums," and the gospel according to Tennyson, Rev. W. P. Hurt and Rev. Mr. Parks, of Mississippi. Among the most prominent as instructors were Prof. Tom Carter, of New Orleans; Rev. P. L. Cobb and wife, of Nashville; Miss Vic Thompson, of Mississippi; Miss Julia Butler, of Nashville, and Miss Jennie Armstrong, of Atlanta, Ga.

III.—SOME RESULTS.

1. Several persons were brightly converted.

2. Many resolved to live a purer and more consecrated life.

3. The Conference is to be continued on larger plans.

4. Every Leaguer was rendered more intelligent, enthusiastic, and consecrated.

IV.—SOME OBSERVATIONS.

1. A Conference conducted like the Tri-State Conference meets the greatest need of the young life of Methodism.

2. Many souls can be saved during a League Conference.

3. The social life of the young people at a Summer resort may be easily given a religious turn by skillful tact and consecration of a few leaders.

THE JOY OF LIVING.

BY REV. JULIAN J. CUTTER.

O give me the joy of living.
And some glorious work to do!
A spirit of thanksgiving,
With loyal heart and true;
Some pathway to make brighter,
Where tired feet now stray;
Some burden to make lighter
While 'tis day.

O give me the joy of living
In the world where God lives, too;
And the blessed power of giving,
Where men have so much to do;
Let me strive where men are striving,
And help them up the steep;
May the trees I plant be thriving
While I sleep.

On the fields of the Master g'eaning,
May my heart and hands be strong;
Let me know life's deepest meaning,
Let me sing life's sweetest song;
With some faithful hearts to love me,
Let me nobly do my best;
And, at last, with heaven above me,
Let me rest!

DISTRICT DOTS.

If "Gilderoy's" prognostications are of any value, I judge that the Conference year has passed the center and is drawing toward the annual convocation at Jerusalem. On this "round" I notice many little attentions being shown by preachers and their wives. The heads of the "yellow legs" can be seen lying around the back yards of the parsonages after each quarterly meeting, and there are jellies and preserves galore. The presiding elder seems suddenly to have leaped into a high favor. He is a "beloved" indeed; a "man of mark;" a "shining light;" the "coming man;" a "strong pulpit man;" a "wise administrator;" "would give additional grace to the college itself"! One brother, in the effusiveness of his attentions, forgot his own dignity, and actually grabbed my "scrip" and carried it to the parsonage. According to "Gilderoy," these symptoms indicate that the preachers and their wives desire to be remembered by the presiding elder when in that secret conclave, called the Bishops' council. Having made a pleasant impression on the mind of the presiding elder, they infer that he will have pleasant memories of them, and "govern himself accordingly." I know "Gilderoy" to be a prudent and sagacious man, but he is treading on unsafe ground in this matter. It is in this as it is in interpreting our Lord's parables: it won't do to go too far. Carry it too far, and some ignoramus or goose would come to the conclusion that preachers were a class of fawning sycophants. As a class, they are gentlemen in the broadest sense of that great word, and their enjoyment of the pen-strokes of fun, finding their way into the ADVOCATE occasionally, show that it is still true,

"A little nonsense now and then
Is relished by the best of men."

Of one thing I can assure the preachers. If you want to be in high favor with the presiding elders and the Bishops at Conference, be sure and come up handsomely on the Twentieth Century collection. That will insure each preacher the best appointment that can be given him.

I would advise the preachers to make special preparations for the fourth quarterly meeting. This is the most important meeting of the year, on several accounts; the chief of which is the election of stewards for the coming year. It being the first year of a new century, the church ought to begin it officered by earnest and loyal men. The progress of the cause of God depends largely upon the broad-mindedness of the men who are to direct affairs and provide ways and means. Every presiding elder will agree with me when I say there are many in the steward's office who are absolutely hinderers. They "lock the wheels of the chariot of God." By all means get rid of these no-accounts. If you can find no one answering the disciplinery requirement, leave the place vacant! Better have nobody than somebody that hinders. I don't know a better preparation for the fourth Quarterly Conference than for the preachers to read carefully "Post Oak Circuit," and carry out the lessons of that great little book! On the Board of Stewards you don't want any "Brother Badger" with his "ha'pennies" and "widow's mite," nor any "Squire Wallet" with his ingnbrious face and sepulchral groanings, but you went men like robust "John Bear" and broad-hearted "Jim Hunniont." If you can't find such, do without the "Badgers" and "Wallets." We have carried them too long already. Remember what Bishop McTyeire said years ago: "A careless or inefficient steward may, without positive opposition, starve out the ministry in the midst of plenty and a willing people." If you want to have a good year in 1901, be sure you put the right sort of men in the steward's office. P. E.

THROUGH THE DELTA.

BY M. I. HOSKINS.

(Concluded.)

Sister Oats met this tired wanderer at the depot, and as we drove through the streets of Friar's Point our mind reverted to the little parsonage home on the banks of the Yazoo, over a decade ago, when our paths in life first touched. A sweet, spiritual service on "Our Missions" was opened in the church that night by Bro. Oats. Through the assistance of his accomplished wife, we hope to have a closer walk down the Winter month with some of these girls, and leave the approving stamp of Grenada College upon their young lives.

At Clarksdale, Bro. J. H. Johnstone gave us so much help, for which we tender our thanks.

Belen was our next point of interest. Leaving Coahoma at the uncomfortable hour of three o'clock, under a fierce, blazing July sun, we crossed a country known as the Hobson Bayou section. Here the alluvial soil could easily be dipped up and sold by the spoonful. Industrious farmers were industriously struggling with tired mules and muddy plowshares; some had given up the fight and were disconsolately leaning against fence posts with that tired expression characteristic of the Delta people and all the world at this season. Rudyard Kipling rushed to our brain, "Some day we will all lay down for a good long rest, and faith we'll need it, too." Soon we came to the home of Bro. G. C. Jones, where his wife was waiting our arrival with the cheery greeting always extended to a missionary woman. After refreshing ourself we started out to increase our list of students. Sister Jones had given our college such a good send off that we found an open sesame at each home. That night we held a missionary meeting, and without any preacher being present. (This was a novel experience to us, as the brethren are usually so helpful; but the pastor was not a resident of this point) As "Gilderoy" would express it, "we fear we were quite lame in the ankle of our thought."

The next morning we were en route to Jonestown. We found Bro. Brooks very busy doing good works and thoughtful deeds. His helpful wife is ready to encourage him on all lines, and they live in the hearts of those good people. Jonestown will not be represented at Grenada next term. Three o'clock found us again under the hot sky. Before we had gone far clouds began to gather, the air stifling, the close oppression presaged the coming of a thunder storm.

"Never was fox chase half so hard,
Never was steed so little spared."

The rain behind, Coahoma before; on we sped. Like John Gilpin, we had no time to exchange civilities. Like an arrow we shot past open cabin doors, where the half-clothed pickaninnies caught at the flying leaves and downy lint that swirled from the cottonwood trees; past lowing herds, that were not winding slowly o'er the lea, but bravely breasting the wind; the plowman didn't plod, but urged his animal with a rod that telegraphed the same message to the mule that the crippled teacher did to Samuel Morse years agone. A few big splashing drops warned us that Coahoma was still in front, and the rain bringing up the rear with strong reinforcements. Suddenly the clouds swung apart, showing rifts of true turquoise blue, lances of sunshine pierced the ambient air, and the race was to the swift. We could see a wall of nebulous mist, that closed the view behind us, shutting away the toil, bony cypress trees that swayed with each turn of the wind, hiding the pecan trees that shook their feathery fronds and hastily discarded all imperfect fruitage. So, often in life a storm may be raging in some heart close beside us; yet those who stand in the peaceful quiet of God's love know nothing of the storm. Oh, these bloodless battles that are fought alone with the tempter, of which the world knows nothing, especially if we are victorious; but if vanquished—ah, me, how weak we are! We can but cry out in our helplessness, "Peccavi! peccavi!" Pardon this digression; but you know it is a woman's prerogative to wander frequently from the subject in hand, like MacLaren's old Domine of Drumtochy; she may leave one part of the subject and pick up another, and carpers must not criticise.

Leaving Coahoma, we came down the main line that afternoon to Cleveland, and were the guest of Bro. W. C. Harris. Long will we remember that sweet family of girls they are raising for an education under the careful supervision of our beloved president. Under the influence of the swamp Bro. Harris has grown positively gallant, and escorted this dusty traveler all over Cleveland, and even four miles beyond. When the gray dawn was pencilling the eastern sky, after a hurried breakfast, we kissed four sleepy faces, and waved adieu to the inmates of this happy home as far as the white flag of friendship could be seen.

"HOW TO CONDUCT THE LITERARY DEPARTMENT OF THE LEAGUE."

(Read before the League District Conference at Meridian, Miss., and published by request of that body.)

No feature of church work shows the marvelous adaptability of Christianity to the needs of the times more strikingly than the Literary Department of the Epworth League. The church has had young people's prayer meetings and societies for Christian work throughout its whole existence, but not until a few years ago do we find such work undertaken as that intended to be done by the Literary Department of the League. This is the distinctive mark that makes the League modern.

Is it saying too much to assert that the success of the League in meeting the demands that God makes of it depends upon this, the Third Department? Unless the Literary Department meets its obligations, it is impossible for the League or church to produce a character capable of withstanding the temptations the world presents, nor can it expect to develop men and women capable of filling the positions of responsibility in its many branches of work for the Master. These facts make the Third Department necessary to our present Christian life and for the great issues of the twentieth century.

Upon nothing is the success of this department so dependent as the mode in which its meetings are conducted. How to conduct this department would be easily answered if class distinction were recognized. But the League has endeavored to instil the spirit of the Master into its very life. So it would include as its members the college-bred man and woman and that one who has had least opportunity for mental culture; the rich, the poor, the refined and unrefined, the sad, the joyful, the despondent, the hopeful; in fact, all God's young life is expected to find help here. Not only these, however, but the worldly, the light-hearted, those who have scarcely had a serious thought in all their lives, are expected to be won from sinful amusements to God by it.

Other difficulties confront it. Many communities have not even one individual capable, at the organization of the League, of properly conducting the Literary Department. If wise, capable leaders, who were fully in sympathy with the young, who understood their needs and how to direct their social life, the difficulties would be greatly lessened. The great question with those who have the League at heart is: "Where can we find one full of religion and common sense, in touch with our young people, who can properly conduct this Literary Department? Where can we find him?" If such a leader can be found, many years' work is saved; if not, this department must struggle against great difficulties with its victories and defeats, with much to encourage, but possibly more to discourage, till it makes its leader. It must go into the business of manufacturing with little, and that crude machinery, but fine material, and by perseverance will, in the course of time, succeed. This department must often be a failure seemingly, because it has no capable leader. When it has had to make its leader it usually has, in its struggles, so advanced all its membership that its greatest trials are past.

But sometimes the League is blessed with a good leader for its Third Department when organized; then the great question, "How can we best succeed?" "Shall the course of study prescribed by the General Board be fully undertaken, and pressed to the exclusion of all else?" I think not, or the leader will kill his department. The average Leaguer when he enlists under the "Banner of the Cross" does not like that kind of literature found in the Reading Course, nor would a strictly literary meeting of any kind be interesting to him. The meetings must be made interesting and attractive. At first they have only the suggestion of literary meetings but let them always have a tendency to higher, nobler, and deeper thought than those present are accustomed to. Have music, recitations, filled with elevating thought; in fact, almost make your meetings social evenings, but never lose sight of the intimate aim—a strictly Literary Department. When the taste has been purified and the ability increases, some popular author may be studied, with quotations, recitations, readings, a discussion of the writer's life and works, and before one realizes it a real love for good solid literature will take the place of the prevalent taste for the sentimental stories of the "patent outside" of the newspaper. If these methods are properly advanced, step by step, unconsciously the desire for heavier will take the place of fiction; then naturally you will turn to the Course of Study prescribed, and the proper benefit will be derived from it.

A remarkable fact, and one that shows how necessarily slow the development of this department is, so that its meetings may be strictly literary, was revealed at our second State Conference held at Crystal Springs. When, after a thorough canvass of the Leagues represented, not one was studying or felt prepared to study the fully prescribed course, to-day many Leagues, I dare say, within our own district have flourishing strictly Literary Departments. When this department has fully prepared itself to do the work prescribed, how shall it proceed? Let all work that is done be thorough. Take only a part of the course at a time. Have many of the same books, if possible; let each member have his own book; the reading courses are good enough to put into any library. Let different ones prepare papers upon the subject. Find every thought in which you agree with the author and every one in which you disagree. Let each person express himself freely. Ask questions. Notice the style of the author. Does he let his characters reveal themselves? What use does he make of natural scenery? See what lesson the book, as a whole, would teach, and find out, not only all about the writer you can, but what led to the production of the volume in hand. If there is a pretty expression, memorize it. If there is a noble sentiment, enthrone it in your heart and be benefited. Let the element of utility pervade the study of any book, that our life may be made better and more useful. Do not hesitate to have lively, always pleasant and kindly discussions; agree and disagree that your characters may be enlarged. Do not eliminate the God-side from your meetings. Always have scriptural reading with progressive scriptural study, as the Holy Word will form the perfect character.

If these methods are properly carried out, the Literary Department, will never be a reproach, but always a help to the Leaguer, a feeder to the other departments, and the place where all will find their most pleasant and refreshing recreation.

BAPTIZO, ETC., IN BAPTISM.

NUMBER TWO.

In the last paper we saw that 'baptizo," in the classic Greek, did not always mean to immerse, by the production of several passages, where immersion was preposterous. Now, let us look at the Greek in the New Testament, following the text by Westcott and Hort. The word "baptizo" in Hellenistic Greek denotes washing or purification, by whatever mode it is effected. It is worthy of note that the same word is used in reference to both water and spirit baptism. Thus, in Matt. iii, 16, the root word, "beptizo," is used twice—once with reference to the baptism which John was then administering, and, next, with reference to the baptism on the day of Pentecost. (See also Acts i, 5, and Acts xi, 16.) The use of the word "beptizo" in the New Testament expresses the thing performed without any reference to mode whatever.

1. Mark vii, 4, "baptismous." The word is here used with reference to the washing of cups, pots, and brazen vessels and tables. Anyone can see at a glance this refers to the temple service. Is it to be presumed that the tables were immersed? Yet a word was used which our Baptist friends say always meant to immerse.

2. Luke xi, 38, "ebeptisthe." "And when the Pharisee saw it he marveled that he had not first washed before dinner." Nowhere in the Bible is it said men were in the habit of immersing themselves before dinner.

3. Mark x, 38, 39. The word "baptizo," with its variations, is used six times here in reference to Christ's death, and also to the death of James and John, who should suffer for Jesus' sake. No reference at all to water.

4. I. Cor. x, 1, 2, "ebeptisanto," referring to the passage of the Red Sea by the children of Israel under Moses. By looking up Ex. xiv, 22, we see the Israelites crossed over on dry land; yet they say "the word always means to dip."

5. Heb. ix, 10, "baptismois," "divers washings." The word here embraces all the washings of the Mosaic dispensation, of which there is not a plain case of immersion on record in all the five books by Moses. But sprinkling and pouring are often found.

6. Acts i, 5, "beptistheesthe" (latter clause). The word is used here with reference to the Holy Ghost, which was to be poured out on the day of Pentecost (Acts ii, 16, 17). How can any person say it was the Holy Ghost that filled the house on the day of Pentecost when the Book says it was only sound that filled the house? The Holy Ghost fell on Cornelius (Acts x, 44), and is called by Peter a baptism (Acts xi, 16, 17).

These passages, with others which can be presented, show conclusively that "beptizo," with its variations, seldom, or never, in New Testament Greek means to immerse. That is why the bulk of the world's learning is against immersion as the exclusive mode of baptism. H. S. JOHNS.

NOTES FROM THE CORINTH DISTRICT.

The Corinth district is moving on nicely. The finances on the third round hold up well, notwithstanding the floods of rain. There has been great improvement in crop prospects since the rains held up. Some of the preachers are doing remarkably well. Bradley, at Booneville, had the best third Quarterly Conference in the history of the charge; his mission moneys all paid—both home and foreign; Bishops' fund and salary for third quarter all paid. Some others almost as good. The meetings so far have been real revivals in the church, but most meetings have closed too soon to get great ingatherings. How are we to avoid this waste of work in closing meetings too soon, when each pastor has so many to hold, and they to be held in the Summer months, especially on these large circuits?

We have had a time with sickness among the preachers. Bro. Bradley and family have gone to Ruke for his health. W. F. Rogers, of the Corinth circuit, is down with fever. I left Bro. Robt. A. Clark sick at Baldwyn. He has taken the Gun Town (Baldwyn) charge for the Summer months, while Bro. Burroughs is off at Greenwood Springs for his health. I had a telephone message last Friday from Bro. J. D. Simpson, of the Burnt Mills charge, giving the sad intelligence of the death of their baby child. Bro. W. G. Burks and family have been sick most all the time for the past three months, but all better again.

The preachers are waging war on sin and unbelief now. The indications are that every interest of the church will be pressed till Conference. The most lamentable condition to me is that but few people take any religious paper. They seem wholly uninterested. I believe that many of our people would not read a religious paper if given to them.

DEAR SISTERS: Since our annual meeting at Durant several changes have necessarily been made in the officers of our North Mississippi W. F. M. S. As you know, Mrs. Sue Barcroft, of Holly Springs, was elected Conference treasurer, but, owing to feeble health, she declined to accept the office. Mrs. G. C. Jones, of Belen, secretary of Greenville district, has been appointed treasurer in her stead. Mrs. Davenport, of Gunnison, will succeed Mrs. Jones as secretary of Greenville district. Mrs. Bessie Lipscomb was elected editor, but can not accept, as she will not be within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference this coming year. Mrs. J. F. Evans, of Eupora, has kindly consented to serve again.

You will notice, in referring to the Minutes, that a number of new officers were elected at the last annual meeting. We sincerely hope that in this instance the old adage, "A new broom sweeps clean," may prove true. I am quite sure all the officers realize fully a need of the sympathy, prayers and assistance of the entire Conference, and especially is this true with those who have recently been elected to succeed our faithful and efficient retiring officers. Let us draw very close to Christ, and day by day receive grace, strength, and wisdom, that we may be able to do the work acceptably to him.

The Twentieth Century Thank-offering is now before us—the opportunity that we will never again have. I hope every district secretary will urge the matter immediately, and that every auxiliary will make an earnest effort to raise the one dollar per member above the regular pledges. A letter just received from Mrs. Trueheart states that all of the Twentieth Century Offering already in hand, $10,000, has been expended in buying a building site in the City of Mexico. She urges that all members pay their Twentieth Century Offering at once, as the treasury of this fund is now empty; yet Havana, Juis de Fora, Sung-Kiang and Songdo have received nothing. Let no member restrict her Twentieth Century Offering to one dollar, unless compelled to do so, for $100,000 is the amount of our need, and the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, only numbers 75,000 members, and of these certainly one-third are in our juvenile societies.

The Christian Life.

STUBBLE.

A man who never pays his dues to the church because he knows the church will not sue him.

A man who never attends church, but expects the preacher to attend all the funerals in the family and is mad if he is not willing to ride ten miles to the grave.

A young woman who is too delicate to go to prayer meeting on a rainy night, but not too delicate to dance in a heated, ill-ventilated room all the previous night.

A man who is asleep to the moral interests of his community, and then raises a big hullabaloo because the enemy sowe tares in his front yard.

A church that seeks external prosperity and neglects the inexpressible needs of a dying world.—The Christian Intelligencer.

WHY THERE IS A HELL.

There must be a hell so long as there is sin. For sin is enmity against God, and would find its deepest hell in the presence of God. Sin seeks its hell. Sin makes its own choice. Man knows that. Conscience testifies that this is so. Conscience does not blame God. Conscience needs no other answer than its own voice. Heaven is open to all. But sin seeks it not, for sin will not have the heavenly life. Sin chooses—and makes its own hell. It is a tragedy; but it is the tragedy of a free choice. —Central Advocate.

Whatever good there is in us, or is done by us, at any time, it must be ascribed to the grace of God. If the heart bend at any time the right way, it is because he has touched it. One touch is enough when it is divine.—Matthew Henry.

PINEVILLE CIRCUIT.

We have just closed an excellent meeting at Nugent, a small town on the Iron Mountain R. R. I had my neighbor pastor, Rev. A. W. Turner, of Boyce, with me. Bro. Turner did fine work; his preaching was clear and plain, and of the heart-searching kind. Christians were inspired and strengthened, and sinners made to tremble and turn from their evil ways. Truly the Lord was good to us, and the whole town was made to feel the presence of the Holy Spirit. I feel under obligations to Bro. Turner for the efficient work he did for me, and I can recommend him to any of the brethren who may have a hard place to be dug up. Our work is moving on nicely, though we are having a hard struggle rebuilding our church in Pineville that was burned in the Spring. We ask the prayers of all the readers of your good paper.

MEETING AT LAKE PROVIDENCE.

We have just closed a meeting here of 12 days, conducted the last 10 days by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss. The visible results are as follows: The church, which was in a deplorable condition, has been very much revived. The dance evil has received a blow that will be remembered for a long time. Many who danced have vowed to do so no more. This was the sin of our town and church. Eighteen have been received into the church, and, best of all, they claim to be regenerated. Fourteen have joined the Epworth League. A Mothers' League of 15 or 16 members has been organized, whose object is to co-operate with each other and the church to look after their children and young people and help them to be religious. The town is stirred on the subject of religion as taught by Methodists. Finances are somewhat improved, and this pastor is happy and very much encouraged. Many pray in the congregation; as usual, most of these being ladies. Bro. Bass did all the preaching after the second day. It was earnest, logical, searching and persuasive. I can heartily recommend him to any one who wants effective help. We had shouts in the camp as well as genuine conversions, such as there were in old times.

REVIVAL ON THE RIPLEY CIRCUIT.

I am glad to be able to report another successful meeting. It was held on Bro. Fullilove's work, Ripley circuit, at a point which has been "left off" for two years or more. I heard many expressions of "regret" from those people in regard to "not having done their duty in supporting the church" as a reason for being left off," and they promised faithfully to do better in the future. We enrolled twelve of the old members and three new ones, and several more to be received into the church later.

These "left-off" places ought to be looked after more. But when a pastor with a large family, such as Bro. Fullilove has, is sent to a large circuit that pays only a small salary, which, however, is not always paid in full, how can he look after "left-off" points? Bro. Fullilove is confident that his people will pay the assessment for ministerial support in full.

God speed the day when people will open their pocket-books to the circuit preachers as they should. It will never be gotten into my head that a man who won't support his pastor will, without repentance, get to heaven. I go back to Bro. Fullilove next Sunday.

I have preached the gospel to the rich and to the poor, to learned and unlearned, and, thank the Lord, he has honored it wherever I have gone. May the Lord bless you all!

Truly, SAM Q. BASS.

OBITUARIES.

BRUMFIELD—Bro. WILLIE BRUMFIELD, son of Bro. Thomas and Sister Brumfield, was born in Washington parish, six miles northeast of Franklinton, March 30, 1859, and grew up in that neighborhood, where he joined the M. E. Church, South, during August of 1890, of which he lived a member until his death, though he gave very little serious attention to his spiritual life until the past two years, during which time he has grown in grace all of the time. He was a man of tender heart, and kind to all, and devoted to his brothers and sisters. He was not very strong of mind, but did what he could with the one talent. He left us May 27, 1900, and went to dwell with the blessed of God. May God bless the bereaved brothers and sisters with the comforts of divine grace!

ROBERT RANDLE.

DONAHOO—WM. P. DONAHOO, son of Wm. M. and Mrs. S. A. Donahoo, was born near Simsboro, La., June 20, 1878, and was killed by a railroad train at Lincecum, La., June 3, 1900, aged twenty-two years and seventeen days.

The grandest eulogy that can be paid him is, that he was a good boy—kind, loving and devoted to parents, brother, and sisters. William joined the M. E. Church, South, at Douglass, La., in 1892, and afterwards attached himself to Siloam Church, Gansville charge, Louisiana Conference, in 1897. His mangled body was interred in the Siloam Cemetery on June 4, amid deep sorrow for the loving son and affectionate brother. May the grief-stricken and lacerated hearts of father, mother, brother and sisters find consolation in the grace of God, and at last join him in the "sweet by-and-by!"

H. M. BANKS, P. C.

WALL—Bro. JOHN WALL was born in Kemper county, Miss., June 3, 1854. He was happily married to Miss Odel M. Moore, daughter of Bro. J. A. Moore, and sister of Revs. J. A. and J. H. Moore, of the Mississippi Conference, December 19, 1888. He moved to Neshoba county, Miss., and joined the M. E. Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. J. C. Long, at Pine Grove, in the year 1889, and lived a consistent member until he passed from the church militant into the glories of the church triumphant. Sad were loved ones and friends when the eventful occasion came, but serene and glorious was his liberated spirit as it launched out on the ocean of eternity's love.

Bro. Wall was loved and respected as a Christian gentleman. He was a quiet, unassumed man, loving and patient in afflictions as well as in health. His neighbors said of him that too much could not be said in his favor. It was my privilege to be with him several times during his last illness, and I always found him perfectly resigned to God's will, and in his last moments, in perfect consciousness, he said to me, "I can see my way clear; I am all right." And he passed into the city of light without a struggle.

So passed his gentle soul away
To the realm of endless day,
There with God and the redeemed to be
Throughout the age of eternity.
Perhaps he's waiting at the door
To see his loved ones reach the shore;
There from sin and sorrow free,
No more parting e'er shall be.

His pastor, H. P. HOWSE.

NORRELL—Mrs. FRANCES NORRELL (nee Parker) was born in King and Queen county, Va., Nov. 7, 1814, and in early life became a Christian, probably under the ministry of Dr. Broadus, and united with the Baptist Church. About the year 1840 she and a sister (afterwards Mrs. Sarah Hodges) came to Mississippi and lived in Brandon with their brother, Wiley R. Parker. She was married to Thomas N. Norrell, Feb. 25, 1845, and made her home in Rankin and Yazoo counties with her husband until about one year before her death, when they moved to their daughter's, Mrs. W. C. Ellis, at Terry, Miss.

Sister Norrell's religious faith was like her life—not demonstrative, but very quiet, but none the less strong and enduring. She loved her church, and seldom missed a service when it was so she could be present. She loved all of God's children, it mattered not to what church they belonged. It was in her home that her life was most beautiful. Right well did she act her part. She was a devoted wife and an affectionate mother. She was a kind neighbor. In her Christian life was manifested all the Christian graces that made up a perfect Christian character.

Sister Norrell was a typical housekeeper, making her home cheery and happy. Her place in the old home, near Pearson, Miss., where she lived forty years, can never be filled. She suffered a stroke of paralysis nearly two years before her death, which rendered her helpless. Of this great affliction she did not complain or murmur, but simply said: "I will never be any better than I am now. I have feared for years that I would be paralyzed before I died; and if it is the Lord's will, I would rather die now. I dread nothing so much as being entirely helpless." How beautiful the language of that daughter who attended her through her affliction: "Dear mother, she seemed not to think her highest usefulness might consist in the example of patient endurance she was setting before her children and friends." Later some realization of this fact came to her, and she expressed her belief that it was as much her duty to suffer God's will as it had been to do God's will. As life drew near the end, she seemed to grow more forgetful of self and thoughtful of others. She was anxious lest her daughters should suffer injury, lifting her and caring for her. But her deepest solicitude centered around him who had walked by her side for fifty-four years. Once, when taken very ill, and it seemed each struggling breath was her last, she said to her children, "You must take care of your father." The last two years of her life were comparatively without pain, until she was seized with an attack of la grippe, which caused her to suffer very much. At first medicine relieved her to some extent, but she was too weak to rally, and in about ten days she passed peacefully away, perfectly conscious to the end. She died Feb. 2, 1900. Thus ended a most beautiful and useful life. May the Lord comfort the bereaved children!

The First Baby.
When baby comes to the home it will bind the wife closer to the husband, or it will gradually tend to cut her off from his companship. A sickly mother loses in physical charm, and often in temper and disposition. A fretful child is a trial, even to loving parents. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription prepares the wife for motherhood. It strengthens the body, and induces a healthy condition of mind, free from anxiety or fear. It makes the baby's advent practically painless. The mother being healthy her child is healthy, and a healthy child is a happy child, a joy to the parents, linking them together with a new bond of affection.
There is no opium, cocaine or other narcotic in "Favorite Prescription."
"I read what your medicine has done for other people," writes Mrs. Edwin H. Gardner, of Beechwood, Norfolk Co., Mass., Box 70, "so thought I would try it, and I found it a blessing to me and family. I took your medicine a year when I had a ten pound girl. I had the easiest time I ever had with any of my three children, and I have been very well ever since. I took three bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' three of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and three vials of 'Pellets.' Before I took your medicine I only weighed 135 pounds, and now I weigh 175 pounds."

MAMMONISM AND MISSIONARY ENTERPRISE.

The opponents of missionary enterprise are given to prating about the supposed great cost of gaining converts in foreign lands. To hear them talk, one would fancy that mission work is almost a failure, and that in no other line of endeavor is there so great waste of money and effort. Such representations contain hardly a scintilla of truth. In fact, the persons who talk thus are not anxious to learn the truth; indeed, they rather prefer darkness to light.

No man can claim to be well-informed who does not know that Christianity is gaining converts with far more rapidity in most mission fields than it is at home. The economy with which our foreign mission work, as well as the mission work of other churches, is administered, is such as to excite no little admiration.

But even if converts among the heathen should cost a million dollars apiece, would not the church still be under sacred obligation to do her utmost for the evangelization of the world? Can the value of human souls be estimated in dollars and cents? Is gold more precious than an immortal spirit that bears the image of God? Since we have been redeemed, not with corruptible things, as silver and gold, but with the "precious blood of Christ," since our Lord himself teaches that one soul outweighs a world, shall we deem any outlay or sacrifice too great to be made for the sake of rescuing our fellow-men from the jaws of sin and death? Shall we deem any treasure too dear to be used in winning lost souls to the Master? What are a few paltry dollars as compared with the destiny of a soul for whom Christ died, and which shall live in misery or in bliss through eternal years?

Men do not scruple about expense when there is a prospect of great gain, when life and health are at stake, or where pleasure is involved, but when it comes to religious work, how quick they are to raise the cry that it costs too much to convert the heathen; that it is too expensive to support the church in her various benevolent undertakings!

But is the church an expensive institution? Are churchmen anywhere becoming pauperized by reason of response to the calls of Zion for gifts for the Lord's work? Nay, verily. In this enlightened land, for every dollar that is spent in the cause of religion, at least a hundred dollars are spent for whisky and tobacco. What a vast river of treasure is wasted on costly luxuries and on vice! Is it not saddening that so many church members seem to care much more for fine clothing and sumptuous fare than they do for the welfare of Zion, or for the physical and spiritual welfare of their fellowmen?

THE ANTI-NEGRO RIOT IN NEW YORK.

On Wednesday night, of last week, New York City witnessed an exhibition of mobism and race prejudice similar to that which brought New Orleans into such bad notoriety a few weeks ago. Remarkably enough, the origin of the trouble in New York was of the same nature as that which occasioned the outbreak of mobism here. A policeman, while trying to arrest a negro criminal, was beaten to death. A mob, composed of the rougher element, then quickly collected, and began to attack negroes right and left. Despite the fact that New York City has a large and splendidly organized police force, pandemonium reigned on the West Side until about five o'clock A. M. During the disturbance upwards of one hundred negroes were severely beaten, some of whom may die from the effects of their wounds.

This unfortunate incident reveals most startlingly and plainly the fact that the North has nothing to boast of over the South when it comes to freedom from race prejudice and humane treatment of the negro, and it is to be hoped that after this the Northern press will be more charitable in tone toward the South when speaking upon the negro question. No matter where they occur, however, all such outbreaks of savagery are deeply disgraceful and deplorable, and the most strenuous effort should be made to bring the ringleaders to justice. The severe punishment of the chief actors in such disturbances would have a most wholesome effect in preventing their occurrence in the future. We are glad to see that in this city a number of persons who took a prominent part in the recent riot have been indicted, and there is strong probability that they will get their just deserts. Both justice and the honor of the South demand that we, as a people, shall do our utmost to protect from mob violence the life and property of innocent negroes as well as of innocent white men.

The Times-Democrat, of the seventeenth instant, contained the following very sensible comment upon the disturbance under discussion:

"The New York affair does not alter the negro question in any way. It simply shows it is not changed by going a few hundred miles North or South, but that it is the same in one part of the Union as in another. The trouble in Manhattan, as here, is in that criminal class of negroes who have settled in our larger cities, and are the source of constant danger and crime. How to treat them and how to get rid of them is a most perplexing problem.

"Equally difficult is the protection of the innocent negroes from mob violence by the rougher and lower classes. This is necessary, and only right and proper, because the very weakness of the negro makes it our duty to assure him protection. In New York the trouble was finally quieted by the police, not, however, until considerable damage had been done. New Orleans was able to give this protection through its citizen police, but it, of course, took a little longer to organize and mobilize them. The best protection that can be given, however, is the punishment of all rioters and law-breakers, those who assault innocent negroes for the crimes and offenses of the guilty members of their race. It will be interesting to see which of the two cities, New Orleans or New York, is most prompt and energetic in punishing the anti-negro rioters."

THE SALOONS CLOSED.

On last Sabbath the Sunday law was again strictly enforced in this city, greatly to the consternation of the liquor-drinking element and the saloonists, but much to the delight of all true Christians and Sabbath-respecting citizens. The enemies of the Sunday law are, however, endeavoring to make it appear that it is a Puritanical enactment, unduly restrictive of liberty, and fanatical in its design. Such an attempt bears the mark of absurdity on its very face, for the object aimed at through the Sunday law is not to compel men to be religious, but to secure the preservation of the Sabbath as a day of rest and worship. A law compelling the closing of saloons and other shops on the Sabbath in order to protect church people and working people in their rights is a far different matter from a law compelling attendance upon public worship. No sensible Christian in this day would be in favor of any such blue law as the latter, but there is not the slightest Puritanism in an enactment, the principal design of which is to prevent the Sabbath from being converted into a day of debauchery, traffic and disorder. Have the God-fearing and the Sabbath-respecting no rights that liquor sellers and liquor drinkers are bound to respect? Who does not know that the open saloon and the open shop are a most serious menace to the peace and integrity of the Sabbath?

If we were a nation of degraded heathen, there might be some show of reason in this contention of Sabbath despisers; but since we claim to be a Christian nation, and since the Sabbath is an integral part of our civilization, the resignation of the first day of the week into the hands of the dissolute and the mammon-worshiping is not for a moment to be thought of. How much better are we than the Chinese or the savages of Africa if we allow the Sabbath to be converted into a day of rioting, dissipation, and money-making?

The police authorities, in their faithful discharge of duty in this matter, have the unqualified approval of all good people in this city. The friends of the Sabbath ought, by all means, to express their hearty appreciation of the good work being done by the police, and lend them every possible encouragement. Unless this is done, it is hardly to be expected that they will continue to enforce the Sunday law faithfully.

It is a great outrage that the authorities of Jefferson parish, meanwhile, are not making the slightest attempt at enforcing the Sunday law, and by their disgraceful and criminal dereliction in duty are making that pariah the favorite resort on Sunday of gamblers, topers, and toughs. If they are not wholly lost to shame and sense of duty, we trust that they will make some effort toward putting a stop to present Sabbath and other abuses.

A MISSIONARY INSTITUTE.

According to previous announcement, a Missionary Institute was held in First Church, Jackson, Miss., Aug. 14 and 15, with Rev. T. L. Melieu in the chair, and Dr. A. F. Watkins at the secretary's table. The presiding elders present gave detailed accounts of the various plans used in their respective districts for raising missionary money. Various phases of the many-sided subject of missions were discussed, including such as, "The Sunday-school and Missions," "The Epworth League and Missions," "The Pastor and Missions," "Missionary Needs and Methods." Plans were adopted looking to an enlargement of our missionary resources. Rev. P. L. Cobb, of Nashville, took a leading part in the exercises. A resolution in appreciation of his services was unanimously adopted, as follows:

Resolved, That, as representatives of the several districts of the Mississippi Conference, we hereby express our appreciation of the presence of Bro. P. L. Cobb, and extend to him our thanks, and we assure him that we will always cordially welcome him to our Conference in any of its work in the great cause of missions.

Although the attendance was not large, we are sure that this Institute will be prolific of good results.

Indifference to the claims of religion has in every age been the damning sin of multitudes. "As it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of man. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and the flood came, and destroyed them all." The fact that a man is not a great sinner or a gross criminal will not furnish him a passport to heaven. For the poison of sin which has tainted all, and threatens eternal death to all, there is no antidote save the precious blood of Him who died upon Calvary. Nothing can take the place of a personal acceptance of Christ. "Whosoever shall deny me before men," says the Master, "him will I also deny before my Father in heaven." "Awake thou that sleepest, and arise from the dead, and Christ shall give thee light."

NEW BOOKS.

EXPERIENCE: THE CROWNING EVIDENCE OF THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION. Lectures delivered before the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University. By John C. Granbery, D. D., one of the Bishops of the M. E. Church, South. 12 mo. 191 pages. Cloth. Price, $1. 1900. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas.

The lectures herein contained are a masterly and valuable presentation of the teachings and evidence furnished by Christian experience, and on account of their marked excellence and the philosophic insight they evince, are sure to increase Bishop Granbery's already great reputation as a thinker and theologian. The facts connected with Christian experience have long been the subject of controversy, and variously indeed have they been interpreted. In this book the writer covers the whole ground with remarkable skill and thoroughness, and reaches deductions that are trustworthy, convincing, and of the highest importance. As the author advances in this interesting study of the various phases of experimental religion, he clears up many a difficulty, presents the certitude of spiritual life, and indicates what is true progress therein.

We join with Book Editor Tigert in saying that this volume is "one of the richest and ripest works on Christian experience that has come under our notice." It will form a noteworthy contribution to apologetic literature. Preachers, thoughtful Christians, and inquirers after truth, ought, by all means, to get a copy. Following are the captions of the six lectures herein given: I. External and Internal Evidence; II. Comparison of Heathen and Christian Experience; III. Comparison of Israelite and Christian Experience; IV. The Crisis of Conversion, and Religion as a Continuous State; V. Conflict and Growth; VI. The Transcendent Value of This Evidence.

—FOOD FOR THE SICK, AND HOW TO PREPARE IT. With a chapter on Food for the Baby. By Edwin Charles Fronch, M. D. 12 mo. 171 pages. Cloth. Price, $1. Louisville, Ky.: John P. Morton & Co.

This volume is an arrangement of diets for use in treatment of diseases in general medicine, nervous diseases, and after surgical operations. The lists are made up of the foods suggested by the best authors on the subject, with some additions which have been found by test to be valuable. Each diet list gives a general idea of the condition, a general rule for feeding, all foods allowed, and a list of those not allowed, thus making it very plain and easily understood.

Throughout the diets will be found a number of foods, the preparation of which is not generally known. For this reason a portion of the book has been devoted to receipts telling how to prepare these foods for administration, each taken under its separate head, as soups, fish, meats, bread, farinaceous foods, drinks, wine, and farinaceous jellies, eggs, raw and cooked, etc., making it complete.

Each receipt has been thoroughly tried by a competent cook. The receipts have been gotten together at a great expense of time and money, they having been collected from the head nurses of hospitals all over this country, many having been contributed by well-known physicians. None of the receipts are to be found in the ordinary cook book.

The work is arranged on a scientific basis, each food being treated from that standpoint as applied in each particular case.

The chapter on Food for the Baby tells its own story, and is easily understood.

In a nutshell, we can say the book is a hand-book, concise, to the point, on a subject of great importance, and so far little discussed. Valuable in the hands of the doctor or nurse, and is so plainly written that it may be understood by the laity.

PRESBYTERIAN ENTERPRISE.

The Presbyterians of Philadelphia have very wisely organized an Evangelistic Committee and planned a Summer campaign in a systematic effort to reach every class of the unchurched masses in every part of the great city. About a half-dozen large tents have been stretched at different points, in which every evening and afternoon the most efficient preachers, laymen and ladies labor to reach and save the parents and children of the great multitudes who never go to church. When about all in the neighborhood have been reached, the tent is then moved to some other quarter of the city, and a new field is harvested.

Princeton students who are helping in this work, have followed up all those who have signified in any way their purpose to lead a better life, and have visited in the homes. As a result, many lukewarm Christians have been reached and have decided to take a stronger hold on Christ. Some who have been believers, but have not united with any church, have decided to connect themselves with the church.

The Princeton students have set a good example to all religious students. And the Philadelphia Presbyterians have led off in a work, worthy of all Protestants.—St. Louis Advocate.

OUR GREATEST WORK AT THIS TIME.

Our own church came out of the war with 429,000. She enters the new century with about 1,500,000. If worldliness increases, it will be as much due to a failure to use our possessions for the glory of God as to any other cause. With the great mission work and educational work and charity work confronting Christian people to-day, it is not a time for the largest family of Protestants to spend their time in rejoicing or mourning over the past. It is a time for action. Lip service will not endow our colleges and build homes for the needy sufferers and feed the starving of earth. The church that refuses to provide well for the proper training of the youth of the land and for the support of the men who devote their lives to their instruction, is not the church to bear the standard of Christ into the twentieth century. As great a work as it is to have revivals and increase our numbers, it is not the greatest work at this time. Unless we fortify what we have and develop our present resources, we will grow weaker in proportion to our enlargement. The growth of the century makes us dizzy to behold it, yet it is only the prophecy of what is in store for the church for the future, and the call of our Lord to go in and possess the land.—Rev. B. D. Sipple, in St. Louis Christian Advocate.

NOTICE.

Mr. Ethelbert Galloway will travel for awhile in South Mississippi in the interest of Millsaps College. He is prepared to give full information relative to advantages offered here. Any aid our preachers and other friends can give him, in the way of putting him in communication with young men who think of going to college, will be greatly appreciated.

The prospects of our coming session are highly encouraging. We are making attractive improvements on our college grounds, and confidently expect a large attendance of students. W. B. MURRAH.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 15, 1900.

LET THE PEOPLE SAY, AMEN!

MR. EDITOR: In the ADVOCATE, of July 26, I find the following paragraph by Bro. Bachman:

"In the advertisement of a celebrated college for boys, it is specifically stated, 'Intercollegiate games prohibited.' May the day be not far distant when a similar declaration shall be made for every church institution of learning, from the greatest to the least!"

To this I say, Amen!

Now, let me add: May the day be not far distant when presidents of Methodists schools will cease to advertise for Baptist teachers! And let all Methodists say, Amen!

Respectfully submitted,

JNO. W. BOSWELL

LETTER FROM BRO. SHEPPARD.

I am here under the treatment of Dr. John R. Dale, a very skillful physician and surgeon. My condition, though precarious, is somewhat better than when I arrived. I will have to submit to a very painful and dangerous operation this evening. My trust is in God, and I have peace with him through our Lord Jesus Christ. It is barely possible that I may be able to resume work by the middle of September.

Fraternally,

J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

AN ERROR.

In my reports of amounts of Children's Day money (sent in by some mistake of my own) $7 sent in by the Raleigh charge, Mississippi Conference—Rev. R. S. Gale, pastor—were not reported to the ADVOCATE, nor does the amount appear in the Year Book. Bro. Gale reported to me July 7, and I hasten to correct my mistake and beg pardon of the brother. JOHN W. CRISLER,

Treas. Miss. Conf. S. S. B'd.

Woodville, Miss., Aug. 20, 1900.

NOTES.

We desire to call the special attention of recent college graduates to a splendid article, on our sixth page, headed, "After Graduation, What?"

Rev. V. D. Skipper has been transferred from the Louisiana to the Mississippi Conference, and stationed at Edwards, to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. C. A. Powell who recently gave up his work on account of ill health. Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan has been appointed to New Iberia to succeed Bro. Skipper.

A conceited preacher is a stumbling-block to men, and an object of pity to the angels.

Until further notice Rev. C. McDonald requests that correspondents address him at Rockport, Miss.

The devil would rather start a church fuss any time than to sell a barrel of whisky.—Ram's Horn.

Our mission school at Juiz de Fora, Brazil, is to be named after Bishop Hendrix's mother, Isabella Hendrix.

Sanford B. Dole, the first president of Hawaii, is a son of Rev. Daniel Dole, who was a missionary there from 1840 to 1878.

We are just in receipt of a copy of a pamphlet entitled, "Lost Doctrines, Lost Power, Lost Congregations," by H. N. Harrison, of New Orleans.

We had a pleasant call a few days ago from our esteemed friend, Prof. H. D. Roberts, formerly of Greensburg, La., but now of Crowley, La.

The Methodists have 142 missionaries in China; the Presbyterians, 209, and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, 110.

***

The Nashville correspondent of the St. Louis Advocate states that Dr. John Mathews holds a meeting for newsboys at McKendree Church every Sunday afternoon at four o'clock.

Mrs. R. K. Hargrove, secretary, has kindly favored us with a copy of the Fourteenth Annual Report of the Woman's Board of Home Missions of our church. It is full of interesting statistics and valuable information regarding the work of this noble society.

***

Rev. J. S. Sanders, the pastor at Many, La., writes that he is in the midst of a fine meeting at Rocky Mount Church. He is being assisted by Bro. J. F. Patterson. He says: "God is with us in great power. We are witnessing deep conviction and bright conversions, and a number are being sanctified wholly."

***

One of our exchanges calls attention to the fact that the meetings for promulgating anarchy are usually the back rooms or upper rooms of saloons. August Spies, hanged after the Haymarket riot, was accustomed to deliver his talk in such quarters, and Malatesta, the protagonist of anarchy, uses like quarters.

The venerable Rev. A. P. McFerrin, a distinguished superannuate of the Tennessee Conference, died July 29, 1900. He was born in 1818, and his father was a preacher before him. He was a brother to the sainted Dr. John B. McFerrin, and the father of Dr. J. P. McFerrin, of Birmingham, Ala., and of Rev. A. P. McFerrin, of the Tennessee Conference.

A card from "Gilderoy," dated Water Valley, Miss., Aug. 17, says: "Rev. W. S. Shipman and wife were called upon to part with their infant child, George Pierce, four months old, at 1 o'clock P. M., Aug. 17, 1900. They are assured that the child can not return to them, but they can go to it."

The bereaved parents have our sincere sympathy in this dark hour.

Rev. S. B. Meyers, of the North Mississippi Conference, sends us the sad intelligence that on the seventeenth Rev. M. L. Ward, of the Quincy circuit, had the misfortune to lose his wife and second daughter, both dying of typhoid fever. Bro. Ward has four other children quite ill with the same disease—two of them critically so. He is almost heart-broken, and requests the prayers of the church in behalf of himself and his afflicted ones.

Rev. M. L. White, the pastor at Carthage, Miss., sends the following encouraging report: "I closed a splendid meeting at Conway last night. Eleven accessions to the church. Community stirred as never before. Our Sunday-school raised $106 toward building a beautiful church at that place. Services were held in an old store where wickedness prevailed in other days, and God's name was praised where formerly it had been profaned."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. THOS. H. DORSEY, Arcola, Miss.
EDITOR.

The editor is dne the readers of this department an apology for not furnishing something for publication during the past two or three issnes, but we have been kept very busy every day in revival work, and this is our reason.

We are glad to report some good revivals. Pastors everywhere are hard at work, preaching, praying and visiting, doing what they can to lead souls to Christ. The Lord permit them to see the frnits of their labors.

A few weeks ago, at Colnmbns, Miss., it was onr privilege and pleasure to hear Prof. Stott, of Birmingham, Ala., who is the originator of the Epworth Leagne Chantanqna, which seems to be the best plan yet suggested for the interest of the League. He opened his address by explaining the necessity of the League. The church is in great need of trained workers, and the Leagne is a training-school to eqnip onr young people for skiiifnl service in the church. He offered an explanation of the three departments, bnt said that the Literary Department had never been a snccess, as a rnle, and it has not been satisfactory. The Chautanqua comes to relieve the sitnation. In the next issne we will give an ontline of Prof. Stott's address on the Epworth League Chantanqua. It was a most practical and interesting address, and the plan can be worked with great profit to the League. Personally, Prof. Stott is a most thorongh, practical, and earnest worker, with a burning zeal for the equipment of onr young people for service in onr Zion.

Notice.

To the Pastors and Members of the M. E. Church, South, in the Opelousas District, Louisiana Conference:

The first Epworth Leagne Rally for the Opelousas district will be held (D. V.) at Lafayette, La., Sept. 4-6, 1900; commencing Tnesday night, the fourth, and concluding Thnrsday night, the sixth. The programmes, now in the hands of the printer, will be sent out in a few days. The snbjects have been carefnlly assigned and readily accepted. The people of Lafayette extend a cordial welcome. Let those who expect to attend send names at once to Rev. C. C. Wier Lafayette, La.

MONITRESS OF E. M. F. COLLEGE.

It will be gratifying to the friends of the E. M. F. College to know that we have secnred the services of Miss Elizabeth Streater as monitress of the boarding department of the college, who will have charge of the health and propriety of the boarders, as has been formerly done by the matron. She also acts as Bible teacher, and helps to look after the spiritnal as well as the physical needs of the stndents.

Miss Streater is from one of the most prominent families of Mississippi. She is a danghter of F. R. Streater, sister of J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, Miss., and sister of Mrs. L. P. Brown, of Meridian, Miss.

Miss Streater is a gradnate of the Peabody Normal at Nashville, and was a teacher in the E. M. F. College; also in the city schools of Meridian. She then felt her call to the mission field, and went to the Scarritt Bible and Training-school, where she graduated, and was then made assistant Bible teacher and city missionary in Kansas City. She then went to Chicago as city missionary, where she also stndied in the famous Moody Bible Institnte. From there she was called to Lonisville by the Walnnt Street Church as city missionary. In all of the positions her work was of the highest order. She is one of the most devont, sweetest-spirited, active, yet modest Christian workers to be fonnd in all the land. She is full of the Holy Ghost and power from on high. God has nsed her to lead many sonls to the Master, and to bring sunshine into many a benighted heart.

Miss Streater is one of the finest Bible scholars and teachers of it that can be fonnd in the South, as can be attested by the Scarritt Training-school and the Moody Bible Institnte; so the Bible classes will be in the hands of a specially trained teacher. At the training-school she had the benefit of the medical lectnres so necessary to missionaries, who are prepared to minister to the needs of the body as well as the sonl. Thus she is eminently fitted for the dnties of monitress. Having naturally a sweet disposition and kind and tender heart, she is peculiarly adapted to the position of mother to a large nnmber of home-sick girls. The parents may rest assnred that the health and spiritnal welfare of the girls at the E. M. F. College will be carefnlly and conscientiously gnarded by a most capable, kind-hearted and Christian woman; dnties most important to perform in a college for girls, next to that of president. We feel that the Lord has sent Miss Streater to ns to fill this important position, and help ns train the girls entrusted to ns, for God, soni, mind, and body.

May the Lord lead ns in all things!

FOREST DISTRICT.

To the Preachers in Charge in the Forest District, Mississippi Conference, M. E. Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: By mail to-day, Aug. 16, I have sent to each one of yon five blank forms for reports to be made by yon to Rev. H. G. Hawkins, secretary Board of Education, Mississippi Conference, Madison, Miss. If the forms do not reach yon in time for yon to prepare Form A for mailing by Aug. 20 prepare it and mail it as soon thereafter as possible; bnt be snre to fill ont and mail Form B by Sept. 20, Form C by Oct. 20, Form D by Nov. 20, and Form E by Dec. 20. If yon shonld be moved from yonr present charge, leave Form E for your successor, and yon will find another waiting for yon in yonr new pastorate.

TRUE PATRIOTISM.

Trne patriotism does not wholly consist in fighting for one's country. To sustain and nphold home institntions is a virtue closely akin to, if not synonymous with, patriotism. Among the worthy institntions of the South deserving onr fostering care none appeals to ns more strongly than does the Atlanta Dental College, where 200 stndents are in attendance. Free to Inventors.
The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inventors has enabled them to helpfully answer many questions relating to the protection of intellectual property. This they have done in a pamphlet treating briefly of United States and foreign patents, with cost of same, and how to procure them; trade marks, designs, caveats, infringements, decisions in leading patent cases, etc., etc.
This pamphlet will be sent free to anyone writing to C. A. Snow & Co., Washington, D. C.

NOTICE.

To the Pastors of the Opelousas District:

Please write me at once how many delegates yon will send to District Leagne Conference, in order that I may provide homes for them.

Resolntions adopted by the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Lonisiana Conference npon the death of their corresponding secretary:

Whereas, God, in his wisdom and love, has taken onr much-loved Conference secretary, Mrs. J. F. Foster, from a life of great nsefnlness here to companionship with himself; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the women of the Lonisiana Conference Foreign Missionary Society, are greatly grieved by this mysterious providence, and that we pledge onrselves to more earnest endeavor to carry on the work so dear to her, praying always for the direction and blessing of the Christ whom she loved and whom she served.

Resolved, That onr deep sympathy goes ont to the bereaved hnsband and infant son, and we commend them to God, asking him to sustain them according to the word of his promise.

Resolved, That we sympathize with the parents and other loved ones so tenderly attached to her, and pray that they may be all rennited in that 'beantifnl brightness' to which she has gone.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolntions be spread upon our Minntes, and pnblished in onr Woman's Missionary Advocate and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and a copy be sent to the family of onr dear sister.

AFTER GRADUATION, WHAT?

The first requirement of the college gradnate is power. It does not matter how much you know or how much talent you have; if yon can not transmute yonr acqnirements into practical power, you will be a failnre. This is a very hard, practical, common-sense century. Theories do not avail. The world does not ask what you know, bnt, "What can yon do?" "Can yon make use of what you know?" It wants men who can do things, not dream of them or theorize about them.

If you have learned to think in practical terms; if yon have used your college as a grindstone to give edge to your facnlties and sharpen your mental powers; if you have nsed it as a gymnasinm, not that you may carry away the weights and pulleys and other apparatus, but to develop your native force; if your edncation has been a calling out, an expansion of the forces within yon, and not a mere stnffing and cramming process, the world will not long keep you waiting for a place. If your college has increased your power to do, and not merely polished yon up a little, you will have no difficulty in winning your way. The world wants leaders, thinkers, doers, men of power and action, men who can step out from the crowd and lead instead of following.

The first years after gradnation mark the dangerons period in a young man's life. In the majority of cases, the gradnate is openhearted, generous, and susceptible. He has faith in men and institutions; he is optimistic, and does not realize how qnickly contact with hard facts and actual conditions will tend to harden him, to lower his standard, to dwarf his ideal. He does not appreciate the demoralizing, brutalizing influence of a mere money-making career, which strangles all the finer instincts for the good, the beantifnl and the trne, dries up the sympathies and dwarfs the growth of the higher self, marbleizes the affections, and crushes out all that makes life strong, serene, sweet and noble. He does not realize that the highest character can not be developed under a low, sordid aim.

The young man leaving college feels that he has spent a great deal of time in preparation, that his edncation has been expensive, and he is anxious to get into something as quickly as possible that will give him the best return in money. And so, nnconsciously, he often chooses an occupation which calls into play his inferior qnalities, which develops cunning, shrewdness, deception, and, for want of activity, permits his finer instinets to shrivel and die.

One of the greatest qnestions a human being is ever called upon to decide is the choice of a career. It affects one's entire character and destiny. No graduate can afford to choose an occupation merely because there is money in it, and he must learn that to look npon a vocation as only a means of getting a living is contemptible. He must learn that the highest success is not living-making, money-making, or fame making, but man-making, woman-making, character-making. Manhood and womanhood overtop position, wealth, vocations and titles, and are grander than any career.

Don't go out in life with false standards of success; but, whatever yon decide to do, choose upward. There is no more pitiable sight in the world than that of a promising young graduate selecting a career simply because there is money or possible fame in it. Don't measnre everything by the standard of wealth or fame. Don't start ont with the idea that poor or obscnre men or women are necessarily failures. The brother or sister or mother who remained at home to earn money to send you to college that you might have a career, and who may never be heard from, while your name is blazoned over the earth, may, in reality, be a far greater success than yon can possibly be considered.

If you look npon your college course as simply a means of raising your commercial valne, it will not help you to real success. To have one's mentality stirred by the passion for expansiou; to be dragged out of the narrow rnt of ignorance; to feel one's life grow larger, wider, and fnller—this is sncccss.

Whatever you do, choose an occnpation which has expansiveness in it, which will keep you out of a rut, which will develop yon along your higher manhood, which will call ont your highest and noblest qnalities. In other words, select a vocation which will make you more of a man or woman, whether there is money in it or not.—Success.

PURE READING.

The taste for pure reading can not be too early cultivated. The careful selection of books for the young and a watchful supervision over their reading matter can not be too strenuously impressed npon parents and teachers. Books are to the yonng either a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death; either contaminating or purifying, weakening or strengthening to the mind of the reader.

If the first aim of a public-school system is to make men better workers, the second should be to make them thinkers, and, to accomplish this, yonng miuds must be brought into correspondence with the thoughts and works of the great men of the past and of to-day.

Nine-tenths of what they have learned, as arithmetic, algebra, geometry, and geography, will pass away as the cares of life come upon them. Bnt the taste for pure reading, when acquired, will never pass away. It will be of nse every day and almost every hour. They will find it a refuge and a solace in the time of adversity, and be happy when others are sad. It will spread from the father to the third and fourth generation.—The Mother's Magazine.

THE NEW CANCER CURE.

All forms of Malignant Growths Cured by Dr. Hathaway's Serum Treatment.

J. NEWTON HATHAWAY, M. D.

Dr. Hathaway's New Serum Treatment for the cure of Cancer and other malignant growths is as much of an advance in medical science as was vaccination for small-pox. Thousands of cases treated and cured by him have proved this. The method is entirely unlike any other.

T. T. Osby, of Tnla Rosa, N. M., stated: "For several years I had what was supposed to be a pipe sore on the lip. It finally developed into a Cancer. In Oct. 1898, I consulted Dr. Hathaway & Co., and then applied their Serum Treatment. One injection cured me."

Mrs. I. N. Rogers, 133 N. Rozborn St., Memphis, Tenn., states: "I had a Cancer in the corner of my eye that extended down on my cheek and nose. Several so-called Cancer doctors and their burning treatments failed; bnt Dr. Hathaway's new Serum Treatment cured me in six weeks without pain."

Full information, together with Dr. Hathaway's New Book on Cancer, will be mailed free.

THE TRANSFORMING INFLUENCE OF WOMAN.

The world will never know how much our great men are indebted to the gracious tact and inborn gentility of their wives for their success. Many years of life in rough barracks could not overcome, in the Father of his Country, the gentle influence of Martha Washington. It was Mrs. John A. Logan who transformed her fierce warrior-husband into a polished statesman. To Mrs. Grover Cleveland belongs the distinction of changing one of the most stubborn of men, one who detested the conventionalities of life, into an accomplished entertainer of society.

It was fortnnate for Napoleon that he married Josephine before he was made commander-in-chief of the armies of Italy. Her fascinating manners and wonderful powers of persuasion were more influential than the loyalty of any dozen men in France in attaching to him the adherents who would promote his interests. Josephine was in the drawing room and the salon what Napoleon was in the field—a pre-eminent leader. The secret of her personality that made her the empress not only of the hearts of Frenchmen, but also of the nations her husband conqnered, has been beautifully told by herself. "There is only one occasion," she said to an intimate friend, "in which I wonld voluntarily use the words, 'I will!'—namely: when I would say, 'I will that all arounnd me be happy.'"

"It was only a glad 'good-morning,'
As she passed along the way,
But it spread the morning's glory
Over the livelong day."

—Success.

TRAINING FOR THE NEW BOY.

"The 'new boy' is of later origin than the 'new woman,'" said Mr. Joseph V. Witherbee, who lectnred recently in Brooklyn. "He can make his own bed, sew buttons on his own clothing, cook his own breakfast, and wash the dishes if necessary, and he is no longer considered a 'sissy' for so doing. He can carry on sncccssfully a bachelor establishment for his father and himself, make out the menus, hire the domestics, and even do his part socially without losing his place among the first six in school.

"The 'new boy' is the result of a growing belief among mothers and edncators that domestic training is just as good for boys as for girls. They argue that a domestic trained boy makes the best kind of a husband, and that the brother who is obliged occasionally to make his own bed or boil an egg will not look down on his sister for doing these same things. Also, that the girl who can use her brother's kit of tools will no longer consider him a superior being because the tools are his property rather than hers.

"Again, the advocates of domestic training for boys say that, while there will always be a division of occupations in the family, as in society, there is this difference in the family—that in those occnpations which relate to the common life there ought to be a common performance, else the division of labor will resnlt in a division of feeling and of thought"—New York Tribune.

THE GIRL AND HER VOCATION.

"Every girl, no matter what her station or prospects, shonld acqnire some useful art or profession, should learn to do some one thing so well that it shall have a valne in the great world-market, and in her honr of need suffice to make her a bread-winner," writes Margaret E. Sangster, in the Angust Ladies' Home Journal. "The world has an abundance of mediocre workers, but it can never have a superfinity of those who have added to native endowment discipline and conscientious training. Probably the best gift which could be bestowed on most girls in any station or occnpation would be what on the turf is known as staying power. Many of us begin with enthusiasm, but we give out before the end of the day. To adopt a line of conduct, to choose a special study, or to decide on a course and stick to it, is in each case to deserve success, if not always to insure it. The path of life is strewn with the wrecks of those who began, but did not hold on their way. She who would make her mark in this workaday world, and gain her prize, mnst be steady and persevering in the face of every discouragement, with belief in herself and in God."

IT TOUCHED THE BURGLAR'S HEART.

The bnrglar had entered the house as quietly as possible, bnt his shoes were not padded, and they made some noise.

He had just reached the door of the bed-room when he heard some one moving in the bed as if about to get up, and he paused. The sound of a woman's voice floated to his ears.

"If you don't take off your boots when you come into this house," it said, "there's going to be trouble, and a whole lot of it. Here it's been raining for three hours, and you dare to tramp over my carpets with your muddy boots on. Go down-stairs and take them off this minnte."

He went down-stairs without a word, bnt he didn't take off his boots. Instead he went straight out into the night again, and the "pal" who was waiting for him saw a tear glisten in his eye.

"I can't rob that house," he said. "It reminds me of home."—Epworth Herald.

The young Queen of Holland, Wilhelmina, is not only a good cook, but also an excellent laundress. When she was a child, her greatest delight was to wash and iron her own clothes. She also learned how to knit, but was not patient enough for such work. "When I become Queen, I'll see that the poor people, who work so hard and get so little, are well treated," she said one day when she found that, do what she would, she made no progress with her knitting.—The Presbyterian.

OBITUARIES.

IN MEMORIAM.

Hon. HENRY CHRISTMAS NEWSOM was born in East Baton Rouge parish, La., Sept. 22, 1830. He grew up mainly in St. Helena parish, La., and the greater part of his long life was spent in this parish. For a few years he resided in Wilkinson county, Miss. It was while living here the South called for his services in the Civil War. For years he endured the hardships of camp life, and stood the shocks and perils of a number of hard-fought fields. I knew him long and well. I think I never saw courage and fearlessness more marked in any character than in his. He seemed at times to have courted danger. Peril seemed to have an attraction for him. At the close of the war he returned to his old homestead and entered again upon the peaceful pursuits of rural life.

In the organizing of State government under carpet-bag and negro auspices there was a call for brave men to the front. The citizens who had long known H. C. Newsom turned to him as a dauntless leader, which he proved himself to be by fearlessly meeting the emergencies of the political campaigns of those peculiar times. So true was he to the interests of his constituents and his country that for twenty years consecutively he was elected and re-elected to a seat in the Legislature. The last four years he was a member of the Senate.

He was in his place in the Legislature during that soul-trying time when the Lottery Company besieged the House and Senate with bribery in money; when men were bought and sold to falsify their oath of office, as though the price of souls could be quoted as stock in market, like that of herds which range the fields. With some others he stood unmoved amidst the corruption eddying around them. Knowing where the money by thousands of dollars could be found for his Lottery vote, he went home a poor man rather than pollute his soul by the touch of lucre.

In 1849 he was married to Miss Mariah Williams, of which marriage six children were born. The wife and three children preceded him to the spirit world; one son died in the regular work of a Methodist preacher in the Mississippi Conference. He was a member of the Methodist Church before he was ten years old, but, in growing up, he forget his early vows and wandered from the way of right, but ever maintained a high regard for religion and for preachers of the gospel. In his experience in the army he saw, as he had never seen before, the great contrast between what ought not to be and what ought to be. Reasoning in this way the great need of religion, he decided for God and the right. He came out of the war a Christian, and maintained his integrity to the end of his life, serving the church with his prayers and his means. He was steward, Sunday-school superintendant, and a frequent delegate to the Annual Conference; was ever consistent with his trust. His house was the preacher's home. The weary itinerant ever found a welcome beneath his roof.

From his childhood he had suffered from a kidney trouble which, as life advanced, grew upon him. In his old age it very much enfeebled him. He had difficulty in getting about to attend to business and ordinary duties. His death was not anticipated at the time it occurred. A few minutes after leaving the supper table he was found in his room, speechless and helpless, and was dead in a few minutes without a word to anyone or sign of recognition. Heart failure was given as the cause, but more probably it was paralysis. He died Feb. 11, 1900, well advanced in his seventy-first year. D.

IN MEMORIAM.

REPHINA LAMBUTH DAVIS was born in Madison county, Miss., April 21, 1852. In 1869 she was married to Pleasant Samuel Harelson, when she came to her home, ten miles east of Baton Rouge, La., where she departed this life April 21, 1900. In 1881 death took the devoted father from his family of six children. In 1883 she was married to Edward More Allen. There were two children born to them. Both husband and children survive her.

Born of Christian parents, Sister Allen was pious from her early life. She was named for our sainted Dr. Lambuth, who was an acquaintance of the family. She was a member of Antioch M. E. Church, South. Her life was one of devotion and sacrifice for her family, and her influence in the community was purifying for good. The writer, her pastor, always received help and encouragement from her gentle, cheerful spirit.

Miss BIRDYE EVELYN HARELSON, Sister Allen's youngest daughter, was born Feb. 22, 1878. The home life shaped a strong character, and early she united with her mother's church. In the class of '97 she was graduated from the State Normal, and took high rank as teacher. On March 3 she came home stricken with typhoid fever. For three weeks her devoted mother watched by her side until taken with the same dreadful disease. All was done that medical skill and loving hands could devise, but on April 14 she was taken to her home above. On Easter Sunday we laid her body away until the final glad Easter morn (1. Cor. xv, 52). Just one week later her dear mother was laid by her side. Miss Birdye Harelson was eminently qualified for a most useful life. Endowed with splendid talent enforced by thorough education, possessing a determined, courageous spirit, success was sure. One brother and two sisters are left: Dr. W. D. Harelson, of Magnolia, La.; Mrs. J. L. Singletary, of Wilson, La., and Miss Julia Harelson, of East Baton Rouge, La. Miss Julia was her constant companion. Being a Normal graduate and teacher of high merit, they worked hand in hand, and the influence of their lives was a blessing to all. The passionate love for mother and home knew no sacrifice too great for the dear ones at home. Miss Julia, thus left alone, has borne with greatest Christian fortitude the deep sorrow, and the strong life that had kept so close to the Savior found its help in him. May our Lord give grace to comfort all hearts!

MILTON F. JOHNSON.

DEATON—MARY E. DEATON, wife of G. W. Deaton, was born June 28, 1840, and died at her sister's home, Mrs. S. E Hubbard, Pope Station, Miss., May 18, 1900, in the sixtieth year of her age. She was a member of the M. E. Church for many years, adhering to its principles and living that life that is commendable in all. Loved and respected by hosts of friends for her genial, sympathetic disposition, we fail to find words to express the sadness that her death caused. Strong and high-minded, true and loyal, careful, attentive and kind to those in sickness, she was welcomed by all, and was affectionately called "Aunt Mary." Truly a Southern woman, she ever defended the South when opportunity offered. She bore the hardships of the lone years' struggle with a firm Christian spirit and Spartan courage. Never was a wife kinder to husband, and mother to children, than was she. Such an influence as hers will never die. Like the circle made by a pebble thrown into the water, it will but widen with the flight of years. We are comforted by the realization that she is waiting just across the river that divides us from God. Her last illness was one of great suffering, but the end was painless and peaceful. Loving ones and friends were ever near, doing all that human skill could do; watching, with bursting hearts, the last breaths of life slowly doling away, until,

Gently, at the close of day,
Her spirit winged its flight;
Gone to the land where never
Comes the shades of night.

L. L. H.

COMFORT—Mrs. DELILAH R. COMFORT (nee Fugler) was born in Madison county, Miss., July 4, 1843, and died in Wilkinson county, Miss., at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. James, May 20, 1900. She was married to Francis Marion Comfort, June 24, 1858. She was the mother of nine children—five girls and four boys. At the age of twelve years she united with the Baptist Church. After her marriage she and her husband united with the Methodist Church. Her husband preceded her some years to the spirit land. Though she was afflicted for some years previous to her death with a lingering disease, still she bore this, with all of her troubles, with Christian patience. She had an abiding faith in God's overruling providence. Her faith in Christ as her personal Savior was strong to the last. She frequently expressed readiness and willingness to go any time the Lord saw fit to take her. One who knew her well said of her that "her life had been one of love and sacrifice, bearing all of her troubles and afflictions without murmuring." She leaves a large circle of friends and relatives to mourn her departure, but "they weep not as those who have no hope." May they imitate her virtues and meet her where parting never comes!

M. H. MOORE.

RABY—ALMA GRACE RABY, daughter of Cora and Bonner Raby, was born Aug. 21, 1899, and died June 4, 1900.

Little Grace's pure spirit was with the family only nine months and thirteen days when God took her to rest. The family has been sorely afflicted with measles and whooping cough, the latter causing little Grace's death. The death of Grace gives Bro. and Sister Raby another tie in heaven. They weep not as for one lost, knowing they shall meet her again if they continue faithful. A. C. FLOWERS.

The "Combination" Bible.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures, showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.
New Type. All Proper Names Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Everybody is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

OUR "COMBINATION" FEATURE.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

THE OLD VERSION PRINTED IN FULL.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangement for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to August, 1901. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

P. S.—We can give no commission on renewals in connection with the above offer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Gen. De Wet and his Boer army has outwitted the British and escaped.

It is announced that the Czar will visit Paris, arriving there about Sept. 15.

Portable postoffices will be used in China for the convenience of the American troops.

England is buying gold. Several million dollars have been purchased in America and India.

The Census Office at Washington reports the population of Greater New York to be 3,437,202.

There is a ministerial crisis in Italy. The new King desires that his Cabinet be composed of young men.

According to Boer reports, Gen. De Wet has turned on the British, defeated them, and captured 4000 men.

The United States consul at Brussels reports the shutting down of the Belgian Glass Works. Six thousand men are affected.

England's warlike preparations at Dover continue. The French are mounting big guns at Calais, just across the channel.

Gen. Chaffee may be promoted to a Brigadier or Major Generalcy in the regular army in recognition of his services in China.

The list of the awards to American exhibitors at the Paris Exposition was made public Aug. 17. The United States secured 1981.

Senator Chauncey Depew predicts that New York will soon be a dangerous rival of London in financing the government enterprises of the world.

Russian atrocities at New Chwang having greatly excited the Chinese, the latter are reported to have determined to recapture the Chinese city at any cost.

Details of the fight between American troops and Filipinos at Catubig show the loss of the former to have been nineteen killed and five wounded; Filipino loss, 200 killed.

The Chinese Government has made formal application, through Li Hung Chang, for the appointment of an American commissioner to bring about the cessation of hostilities and the restoration of peace. It is understood that similar application has been made to the other powers.

Emperor William has fallen a victim to the electric vehicle craze, and has commissioned a German manufacturer to make for him three cars of different shape and design.

The fourteen hundred Cuban school teachers, who have been visiting the principal cities of the East, after a pleasant stay in Washington, have returned to New York.

A battle is raging inside the city of Pekin. The Chinese have taken refuge behind the walls of the Imperial Palace, and the allied troops are shelling them out of their positions.

Collis P. Huntington, president of the Southern Pacific railroad, and connected with many railroad and steamship systems, was buried in New York last week. His death was sudden.

Secret service agents have arrested fourteen supposed anarchists at New York who arrived on the Kaiser Wilhelm II. They are charged with being party to a conspiracy to assassinate President McKinley.

In a riot in New York City, last week, between whites and colored, numerous casualties resulted. The trouble was brought about by the murder of a policeman, who was killed by parties he endeavored to arrest.

Caleb Powers, ex-Secretary of State of Kentucky, has issued a card to the public, in which he proclaims his innocence of being an accomplice before the fact in the assassination of Wm. Gobel, and states that his trial and conviction was a judicial farce. He attributes the result to the machinations of his political enemies.

Dispatches have been received at the War and Navy Departments from Gen. Chaffee and Admiral Remey confirming the reports of the fall of Pekin. The latter states that the allies are bombarding the "Inner City," and that the Empress Dowager is still in the capital. Gen. Chaffee gives the list of his casualties as eight wounded.

The allies have captured and entered Pekin in the face of an obstinate resistance from the Chinese troops. A fierce fight occurred at the east entrance of the city, led by the Japanese, in which 100 allied troops and 300 Chinese were killed. The gates were stormed and the city entered on the night of Aug. 15. The ministers and the members of the legations are now safe. The Empress Dowager and her household are said to have fled.

A deadly conflict between whites and blacks has taken place in Liberty county, Ga. The trouble was started by a negro killing a white man. Blacks joined the murderer and defied the officers of the law. Negroes attempted to burn Liberty City and Lambert at 12 P. M., and made an effort to wreck a passenger train. Several negroes have been killed while resisting arrest. The whites in the vicinity of the trouble have armed themselves and a war is threatened. The governor of Georgia, in response to an appeal, has sent militia to the scene.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, appendicitis, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Rev. John P. Sanders Writes:

Dr. H. Mozley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been relieved of a trouble which greatly endangered my life, by using Mozley's Lemon Elixir. My doctor declared my only relief to be the knife, my trouble being appendicitis. I have been permanently cured and am now a well man. I am a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, located in the town of Verbena, Ala. My brother, Rev. E. E. Cowen, recommended the Lemon Elixir to me. Ship me a half-dozen large bottles C. O. D.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever by using two bottles.
J. C. STANLEY,
Engineer E. T., Va. & Ga. R. R.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a case of heart disease and indigestion of four years' standing. I tried a dozen different medicines None but Lemon Elixir done me any good. TULES DIEHL,
Cor. Habersham and St. Thomas Sts., Savannah, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

I fully endorse it for nervous prostration, headache, indigestion and constipation, having used it with most satisfactory results, after all other remedies had failed. J. W. ROLLO,

BELHAVEN COLLEGE (For Young Ladies), JACKSON, MISS.

One of the most thoroughly equipped High Grade Schools in the South. Buildings new and modern, heated by steam and lighted with electricity. Bath rooms for hot and cold water on all floors. Beautiful campus of twelve acres of native forest trees. No school for girls in the South can show such a health record. During the past Winter, noted for epidemics of pneumonia, la grippe, measles and small-pox all over the State, there was not a single case of any of the above diseases, or any serious case of sickness of any kind, in the college. The Faculty is composed of specialists in all departments. In Music, Elocution and Art the College offers exceptionally fine advantages. The authorities of the New England Conservatory of Music and Elocution say: "Of all our pupils from the South those from Belhaven College stand not only in the highest rank in their classes, but are regarded, without exception, as possessing those womanly traits of character and that degree of intellectual development which command instant respect and admiration." Next session begins October 1st, 1900. For our beautiful catalogue, address

THE LARGER PRAYER.

BY EDNAH DEAN CHENEY.

At first I prayed for Light;
Could I but see the way,
How grandly, swiftly, would I walk
To everlasting day!

And next I prayed for Strength,
That I might tread the road
With firm, unfaltering feet, and win
The heavens' serene abode.

And then I asked for Faith:
Could I but trust my God,
I'd live enfolded in his peace,
Tho' foes were all abroad.

But now I pray for Love,
Deep love to God and man;
A living love that will not fail,
However dark his plan;

And Light and Strength and Faith
Are opening everywhere!
God only waited for me till
I prayed the larger prayer.

Japan is in the transitory stage, and great things will come of the transition."

In view of the probability that the allied powers, in the course of the settlement of the present troubles in China, may be called upon to decide how that country shall be governed in the future, the opinions of Mr. John P. Roberts, a native of New York, who has recently returned from China after a continuous residence there of thirty-eight years, are interesting. Mr. Roberts was in business in Shanghai, and necessarily became thoroughly acquainted with all classes of Chinese. He said, while visiting Washington: "It is imperative that the present dynasty should be overthrown and a more liberal government established. The Dowager Empress, though a very able woman, is China's worst enemy. She hopes to preserve the Manchurian dynasty by blocking progress and keeping the people in ignorance. The deposed Emperor was much more progressive, and would make an acceptable ruler, with proper foreign support and counsel. If a single power could take China and govern it as England has governed India, for the benefit of the governed as well as for the governors, it would be a blessing to the Chinese and to the world as well. I believe the vast majority of the Chinese would gladly welcome government by some foreign power. They are a peaceful and innocent-minded lot of people, and want chiefly to be let alone to pursue the even tenor of their ways. That they are not opposed to foreign government is proved by the fact that 400,000 of them have come into the foreign city of Shanghai, accepting foreign control, and willingly paying their share of taxes in return for the protection they receive."

At a meeting of the Anti-Saloon League, held this week, the plans for the fifth annual anti-saloon revival, to begin Oct. 22 and close Oct. 28, were submitted and approved. At previous revivals some noted outside speaker has been engaged, but after full consideration it was decided that the programme for the coming series be filled largely by local speakers.

Washington, Aug. 22, 1900.

THROUGH THE DELTA.

THE GRAVE OF GOV. J. L. ALCORN.

BY M. I. HOSKINS.

Back to Merrigold, through the lengthening shadows of the dying day. Here we were entertained at the home of the legislator from that county, Mr. Goff, whose bright-eyed daughter made a fine literary record in our college during the past term. At Lula we found Bro. Graves just recovering from a protracted spell of fever, but he had already planned well for our visit, and we found in his home the same hearty welcome that greeted us as a representative of the college everywhere. How could one pass through this valley section without noting that ideal plantation, yclept Clover Hill! What's in a name? We found the clover invisible, and the hill imperceptible, yet we were at Clover Hill. We remained over Sunday, and the time passed all too quickly, for we were with our only sister, Mrs. Irene Collier. With the old-time Alabama courtesy, her husband did everything possible to render our stay as pleasant and profitable as could be. We drove over to "Eagle Nest," the eyrie of one of Mississippi's greatest governors in the days of auld lang syne. We were somewhat disappointed in finding the old mansion wearing a striking new coat of paint, and being remodeled after a later style of architecture. Oh, the vandalism of fashion, the iconoclasm of style! Why is it that the old landmarks must feel the withering touch of newer forms? Eagle Nest is on the edge of an immense cypress brake, that stretches its malarial length down the plantation side. Giant cypress trees stand as ghostly spectres, whose bare limbs gleamed with glistening whiteness in the solemn hush of the waning afternoon, like ghoulish sentinels guarding the old homestead. About three hundred yards down the railroad is the family burying ground. Here, with the rank undergrowth topping its base, stands the life-size statue of James Lusk Alcorn. The resemblance is most wonderful. While looking at the marble form and the cold, hard lips, memory bridged the river of death. Again we listened to the forceful words that carried conviction and burnt their way through the dark days of the reconstruction period of Mississippi. Whatever may be said by his detractors, each must acknowledge he was a Republican from principle, and not for the loaves and fishes. He fought misrule with all the unyielding force of a nature born to succeed. His iron will was unconquered by humanity. Carved at the base of the statue were these words: "Noble, gifted, and just. He was successful in all his ways." A man, distinguished in personnel, learned in belles lettres, he was much sought by social leaders. The last time our lives touched will long be remembered. It was in gay old Memphis; the sheen of cut glass made prismatic hues on snowy damask. The glitter of silver dazzled the eye, and thuribles of flowers wasted their perfume in wanton prodigality, filling the air with rare floral incense. Rich viands served under flashing chandeliers. Gov. Alcorn was at his best; his wit sparkled, and brilliant touches of repartee flanged the conversation with scintillant facetiæ. Now, what is left of it all?

"Only a handful of dust 'neath a coffin lid,
And a low grave starred with daisies."

The eagle is dead; no more will his clarion voice ring out in defense of our States' rights; no more will the brilliancy of his wit shine through the social gatherings of the State. Alas! Azrael spares neither the rich nor great, the poor nor lowly. His talented wife sits alone in the old Eagle's Nest, with folded hands, her face turned toward the setting sun, waiting, waiting quietly for the sound of the twilight bell and the one low call across the harbor bar.

The next morning found us again on our journey. Stopping long enough at Clarksdale to become a debtor to that handsome young Sunday-school superintendent—Mr. J. H. Johnson—for assistance in securing pupils, we hurried on to Dublin. Here fortune again favored our efforts, and this town will be represented in our college home next term.

At Minter City we were warmly greeted by those staunch, true Methodists, Bro. and Sister Thames, who claimed they had found a poor, lost woman. They immediately took affairs in their own hands, and demanded a morning's rest for this tired old body. Our woe-begone appearance must have excited their intense pity and sympathy. Where could be found a more idyllic spot to recuperate, even for a short time? One of Grenada's handsomest young men was a guest in this delightful home. Why is it the Grenada boys are so exceedingly nice to the lady principal of the college, when she is so old, ugly and cross? Well, we'll let that pass. Luxuriating in the almost forgotten wrapper, watching the clear wavas of the Tallahatchie as they lapped each other with restless precision, listening to the voice of old-time friends as they discussed the deeper things of life and dwelt upon the one grand theme that now sways the universe—the day passed like the sweet benediction that follows prayer. Casting aside all care and worry, we heard the same still voice that spoke to Elijah from the heights of Horeb, "Peace, be still." That evening we did some very unsuccessful school work.

At Sunnyside things are carried on in a big fashion; big homes, big hearts, big artesian wells, big welcomes, and big folks. Whoever went to the Delta and returned without visiting Col. B. L. Jones, missed all the cream in the dairy. He is one of the landmarks. We were a guest of Sister Jones, for the master of ceremonies laughingly disowned us when he found we represented a college and a missionary society; but, manlike, he could not refrain from drawing the sword occasionally, and, woman-like, we could not refrain from measuring blades. We had many a pleasant tilt, and with two against one, honors were easy, for Sister Jones is as enthusiastic a worker on both lines as this writer. With her assistance we did some fine college work.

At Greenwood we were at home with relatives and friends. Here, as an itinerant's wife, we spent a year in the vine-clad parsonage, not far from the muddy waters of the Yazoo. We spent the night with our brother-in-law, a rising young physician—Dr. D. S. Humphreys—who is a son of Hon. B. G. Humphreys, one of the bravest generals that fought for the Stars and Bars, and one of the greatest governors that ever graced the old State-house of Mississippi.

Through Tchula and on to Lexington, where the gentle hands and tender hearts of loved ones would have fain detained us.

At Grenada the old college looked sadly deserted, the unusual stillness made it indescribably lonely; but Bro. and Sister McIntosh were there, and they constitute the majority of the college.

Now we are in the hills, at the little city of Corinth, way up in the northeast corner of Mississippi. The years of hard life slipped away as we entered the old homestead. We are a girl once more, ministering to the wants of an invalid father—Col. W. M. Inge—feeling the caressing touch of mother's hand, trying to hoard the hours, like gold dust, but they are fast drifting into the past, but gathering strength for the coming duties that stretch out toward the setting sun and evening star.

"Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget, lest we forget."

TEMPERANCE VICTORY AT MACON, MISS.

MR. EDITOR: I arrived at Macon on the eighteenth of December, 1899. On Christmas Day I was astonished at the evidences of drunkenness and amount of profanity, and I told the good people that I did not think that I had seen as much in five years all put together. I found the pastors of the Baptist and Presbyterian Churches united in heart, mind and effort against this nefarious business, and all I had to do was to fall in with them. We took in as counselors two members from each one of the three churches, and proceeded to formulate plans to break up the business. We started with a sermon from each pastor on the subject, the others dismissing their congregations, and all uniting where the sermon was preached. We also arranged for Dr. Matthews, of Jackson, Tenn., to deliver a lecture on temperance on Tuesday night of the first week of circuit court. We also planned to get evidence against the blind tigers a few days before this court convened, and about seven places were found out, and their managers brought before the mayor's court and punished to the utmost limit of the law. The main object of this was to get the cases ready for the circuit court. Unfortunately for our cause, the judge of this court was taken sick (?) in the early part of the session, so that only one case was reached. The pastors also arranged to hold a union meeting in the Methodist Church, beginning in April. Bro. J. A. Bowen came in the early part of the meeting, and remained eight days. After he left the pastors did the preaching, each one taking his turn. The meeting lasted twenty days, and did great good in the church. Nine joined the Methodist Church on profession of faith, some joining the other churches.

On the third Sunday in July we began a meeting in the Methodist Church, which lasted sixteen days. Bro. Theo. Copeland, of the North Alabama Conference, did most of the preaching. Great good was done among the better class of Christians, a number of indifferent ones were revived, and several sinners professed conversion.

On Friday, after the meeting had closed on Monday, the sheriff of the county and marshall of the town began to raid the blind tigers, and the marshall told me this morning that the last one was broken up, the keepers having been punished to the extent of the law, and the accursed stuff having been poured out in front of the mayor's office in the presence of a jubilant crowd of good citizens. Moreover, the marshall told me that they were going to continue the good work. You know, Mr. Editor, that our hearts should be full of gratitude, our lips full of praises, and our lives consecrated to the Giver of every good and perfect gift. Join us.

IS THIS A FAKE, OR A MISTAKE?

In this morning's mail came a well-filled envelope, addressed to me, and written in a beautiful hand. A return envelope, with printed address of Messrs. E. Loeb & Co., was enclosed. I read the printed circulars and "testimonials" with a broad smile, and wondered if there had been a mistake in the address, or a plan laid to tempt me from my prohibition ways. Up to this hour I have had no occasion to revise my convictions on this vital subject, or change the habits of a life-time. True, the statement is made that these wines are "dietetic," "absolutely free from any trace of sugar," and "highly recommended by the leading physicians of Carlsbad, Marienbad, Frazensbad, and other Spas," but my health is perfect, and I have no need of medical or hygienic treatment. Somebody has imposed on these "importers and sole agents," or else these documents were aimed at another, and exploded in my mail.

The following is, in part, the tempting, special offer, with prices attached:

"SPECIAL OFFERING OF CHATEAU WINES, ETC."

And these are not only warranted as "very fine," but influential testimonials are enclosed. One is from the Hon. Elbridge T. Gerry, of New York, and the other from Rev. Dr. Morgan Dix, the distinguished rector of Trinity Church. The Doctor's testimonial is as follows:

Messrs. E. Loeb & Co. 83 Beaver St., New York—

GENTLEMEN: It gives me pleasure to testify to the excellence of certain red wines which I have had from you. My opinion of their merit is the result of an experience in which I can not have been deceived. They are pure and wholesome, and, so far as I can judge, free from the saccharine and other adulterations which render wines deleterious, if not actually poisonous to the system. I particularly endorse and recommend Schreiber's Austrian dry wines as fine tonics and aids to digestion. It is an advantage to know where wines of this character and quality can be found, and I am glad to express this opinion of your importations.

Very truly yours,

MORGAN DIX.

27 West 25th St., April 15, 1899.

Though I can not agree with the eminent clergyman that it is "an advantage" to know where liquors, either red or white, can be found, I give these facts to the public, that it may be known how persistent and ingenious are the efforts to advance "the trade" and debauch society. If ministers of the gospel can be induced to drink and recommend wines of any brand or in any quantity, however harmless or "dietetic," the way will be easier to Austrianize the social habits of America.

NEW FACULTY OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE COMPLETED.

A special to the Sunday Times-Democrat from Brookhaven, Miss., dated Aug. 25, says:

"The faculty of Whitworth College has just been completed for the coming term by the addition of Prof. F. P. Patterson, of Philadelphia, a graduate of the Conservatory of Munich, who will fill the position of musical director and teacher of violin. Mrs. Patterson will assist him as vocalist. The other members of the college faculty under the new administration will be as follows: Mental and moral philosophy and logic, Rev. A. F. Watkins; chemistry and physics, Miss Tullia Smith; natural philosophy and history, Rev. M. L. Burton; Latin and modern languages, Miss Addie V. Marshall; English language and literature, Mrs. Lula G. Watkins; mathematics, Mrs. Bessie H. Lipscomb; elocution and physical culture, Miss Jessie McNair; fine art department, Miss Virginia Hart; piano, Misses Rena Jones, Sallie Cooper, and Jessie McNair; violin and guitar, Miss N. C. Whitman; book-keeping, M. L. Burton; stenography and typewriting, Miss Emma Burton; preparatory department, Miss Lula Mortimer; monitress, Miss Emma Burton. Several of the college buildings are being substantially improved and refitted. The term of 1900-1901 will begin Sept. 12."

GO TO COLLEGE.

Do not hesitate, young man. Go up to college and breathe its atmosphere; meet its choice spirits; saturate yourself with its life; acquire the love of books and of great ideas. No matter what your vocation is to be; whether like Cincinnatus to rule the State, or like him to follow the plow, an education will help you in whatever you do. You can not afford not to have an education. If you can not get all you want, get all you can. Go up. Knock at the doors. Start in the race. You will have dreams and visions thereafter, even if poverty and duty should close the college doors against you before you have "finished" your education. Go to college. Never say fail. Life is an up-hill road, but the stars shine on the top of the way. Let not poverty or clothes or situation detain you. Go to college.—Central Advocate.

The Conference sessions will soon be on us. How are you paying your pastor? Do you want him back? Pay him up. If you don't want him back, you can not afford not to pay him. The starving-out policy is too well known to work well.—Central Methodist.

GOD IS LOVE.

I can not always trace the way
Where thou, Almighty One, dost move;
But I can always, always say,
That God is love.

When mystery clouds my darkened path,
I'll check my dread, my doubt reprove;
In this my soul sweet comfort hath,
That God is love.

Yes, God is love. A thought like this
Can every gloomy thought remove,
And turn all tears, all woes to bliss,
For God is love.

THE VALUE OF OUR CHURCH LITERATURE, AND NEED OF ITS CIRCULATION.

BY REV. G. W. BACHMAN.

(Read before the Corinth District Conference at Booneville, June 29, 1900, and published by request of that body.)

This is eminently a reading age, and the world is flooded with all kinds of reading matter, good and bad, useful and useless, helpful and hurtful. Books and papers adapted to all classes of people, and catering to all mental tastes, from the most depraved to the most refined, are being made and patronized. Never was the printing press so extensively and effectively used for disseminating knowledge, molding opinion, and forming character, as at the present time. Thousands of men and women are constantly writing, and thousands of presses are continually pouring forth books, pamphlets, leaflets and periodicals, for the circulation of which all means are used and no pains are spared. These books and papers are upon every subject and matter that have engaged, or do engage, the minds of men, and are influential for good or evil according to the character of matter printed. With such facilities and inducements, it is no wonder that people read—and it is becoming that they do so—but as to what we and our children should read, is a question of great importance.

What food and drink are to the physical man, reading matter is to the mental and spiritual. Therefore, if the question were one concerning the quality of bread and meet and water to be used, there could be but one opinion by all who are solicitous for bodily health and vigor. Universal judgment would condemn the adulterated, tainted and poisonous food and drink as unhealthy and deathly, and commend the sound and pure as needful for health, strength and life.

So there should be great care in the selection of reading matter, which is helpful or harmful to the soul according to its character. If it is sound in doctrine, true in statement, and religious in tone, it will be conducive to religious life, growth and fruitfulness; but if it is of the skeptical, frivolous or impure type, it will impair faith, defile the heart, and impede the cause of religion in the world.

In view of these facts Methodism has ever been enterprising to supply suitable and needful reading matter for her people and for the masses. John Wesley very early in his ministry recognized the power of the printing press, and during his ministerial life he used it to the utmost of his ability in promoting the work and spreading scriptural holiness over the lands. And never has another man written, published and circulated as much printed matter as did he.

Mahomet sought to gain his end by putting swords into the hands of his followers, but Wesley endeavored to achieve his by putting good reading matter into the hands of his people, and it has ever been the policy of Methodism to carry out the wise and efficient plan of its honored founder. Consequently the various branches of the great Methodist family have their great "Book Concerns" and "Publishing Houses," from whence are being constantly issued and distributed throughout the world innumerable books and papers for Christian education and evangelization; and in this important work our own branch of the church is doing a faithful part.

The literature of our common Methodism of to-day, for ability, adaptability and variety, is equal to any in the world. No more able and lucid theological works have been produced than those of Wesley, Clarke, Watson, Banks and Pope, of England, and Whedon, Smiley, Raymond, Summers, Ralston and Gross Alexander, of America. Of Bible Commentaries we have Clarke's, Whedon's and Summers'; and of Bible Dictionaries, Watson's and Granbery's. These are unsurpassed as aids to Bible study. These publications, with many others of doctrine, church polity, history and biography that might be noted, are mentioned as belonging to and need more or less by all branches of Methodism.

We come now to speak specially of the work of our own denomination in the field of literature. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is not wanting in enterprise and effort to supply needful reading matter for the use of her ministry and membership and for the masses. For this purpose we have located in Nashville, Tenn., the "Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," which is established and managed under the direction of the General Conference of the church. It is, therefore, one of the institutions of the church, which every member is under vow to support.
